Cohasset's annual assessment was projected at $18,578 for the coming year, which is down considerably from last year's level of $21,314. The number of Cohasset students enrolled at the school has coincided with that decline. There are currently six Cohasset students at the vocational educational facility.

The low number of Cohasset students has become a tradition that is hard to break, according to Cohasset Supt. Eugene Crowell. Cohasset parents, for the most part, want their children to follow a college curriculum in high school and graduate onto a four-year college. Trade schools, as they were once termed, are not a popular alternative in some towns, such as Cohasset.

However, Crowell stated, he is impressed with the vocational schoool in this region. "It's a fine school," he stated this week. "It has made tremednous gains under the present administration. The superintendent has introduced lots of new programs for the students and he has helped Cohasset by taking in several of our Chapter 766 students and preparing them for careers. The school has been a real plus for us."

Crowell explained, " it is difficult, if not impossible for a small school like Cohasset to be comprehensive. I am not criticizing what we have, but we don't have the number of students to have specialities such as automotives and other technical classes. That's where votech comes in. And it's become natural for those graduates to have immediate career placement."

It's the best alternative Cohasset students have to learn a marketable trade, he said. "As an educator, I am glad there is a technical school here, under such able direction of a superintendent who is attempting to upgrade the programs. We can't become obsolete," Crowell added.

The Cohasset superintendent noted that the present regional Board of Trustees is attempting to change the tarnished image of a vocational school. Through updated programs and acquisition of the latest equipment, South Shore Votech is attempting to evolve into a first-class technical institute.

Drama tryouts

The Cohasset Dramatic Club will hold tryouts March 9 and 10 for its spring show, the comedy, "Scapino."

Adapted from Molier's "The Follies of Scapin" for modern stage by Frank Dunlop and Jim Dale, this play calls for a cast of at least 14 characters of various ages. The setting for "Scapino" is a restaurant on the edge of the Bay of Naples, Italy. Directing "Scapino" will be Ellen Kelly. The cast of characters includes: Argante and Geronte: "older men," the fathers of Ottavio and Leandro: young men (with an eye for the girls); Sylvestro: a character with a bit of the scoundrel about him; Scapino: another with more than a bit of the scoundrel, a real rogue; Carlo: may remind you of Harpo Marx; some waiters, waitresses, some pretty girls, perhaps even some gypsies, and Who Knows Who Else Might Walk Through The Door of a Pizza Parlor?

Playbooks for "Scapino" are available at the Paul Pratt Library, Cohasset. Tryouts dates are Saturday, March 9 and Sunday, March 10 at 2 p.m. at the Cohasset Town Hall. All are welcome to read for a role in the Dramatic Club's spring production. Playdates for "Scapino" will be April 25-28.

Director defends budget

In a recent interview, South Shore Vo-Tech Superintendent Clifford Easton again tried to answer his critics and promised lower assessments for region members before this spring's town meetings. However, Easton added he hopes to find ways to increase revenue rather than cut his embattled budget.

Defending his $3.1 million budget, Easton said when the region was formed, the school was charged with ensuring quality vocational-technical education to area students. "But," he said, "Proposition 2½ has changed that. Now the funds aren't available and without the facilities and the programs, our students are not going to be served.

"Our first concern has to be for the students, but our second is the effect of funding on local communities. Easton thinks that his administration is being unfairly portrayed as one insensitive to the concerns of member towns. "We're more conscious of their needs than they think."

"We are doing everything in our power to reduce the assessments," said Easton. "We are looking at items that might be cut, but more importantly we are taking action to get more revenue into the school."

Among the possible sources of revenue cited by Easton included the School Building Assistance Bureau reimbursement for capital improvements; a bond issue; recovery of the $149,000 in Chapter 70 state funds lost when the state changed its aid formula, and increased enrollment of tuition-paying students from outside the region.

Easton said that some progress had been made in negotiations with the state over the Chapter 70 funds, but would not reveal the details.

Easton took the blame for not meeting his enrollment goals, saying that "It's been my failure as an administrator not to promote more in and out of district recruitment efforts." Easton said new recruitment programs and publicity campaigns are already underway.

He acknowedged the lower-than-estimated enrollment was responsible for this year's increase in cost per student, but noted not only had enrollment gone from 374 to 512 students since he became superintendent, but that this was the first year since 1982 that his predicted cost per student was higher than his estimate.

Easton had been accused at a meeting of member town selectmen two weeks ago of not having lived up to his 1982 expansion promises and cost estimates. Easton said that the figures for the other three years were actually lower than he had estimated and that this was the first year he had had trouble meeting his objective.

"Management of the school has been different for the past three or four years," said Easton. "We are trying to correct the lethargy of the past. I don't expect we'll ever be state of the art because it would be too expensive, but I do expect to have samples of up-to-date equipment. There has been no new equipment here in years. We want better, not bigger programs."

Defending this year's negotiated settlement with the teachers' union that gives the teachers a six percent raise for the next three years, Easton said, "It was a good and mutually satisfying agreement. I don't call it overly generous when you look at what teachers make." Local critics of the settlement said the region gave the teachers more than it could afford.

Easton reiterated his public position that based on the regional agreement, towns can only accept or reject the budget, not change it as some towns said they will do. Several towns would like to set their own assessment.

Easton claims, however, that changing the numbers would amount to a rejection of the budget because individual towns do not have the power to tamper with the figures. Two-thirds of the eight member towns must approve the budget or it will be sent back to the regional school committees.

Easton said he welcomes helpful suggestions from member towns, citing a meeting with the Abington finance committee which, he said, resulted in the exchange of ideas and a deeper understanding of each other's position. Easton said he had not been invited to the meeting among regional selectmen at which he and the budget were severely criticized.

Increased safety

Chairman John T. Driscoll, of the Massachusetts Turnpike Authority, said that 1984 was the second safest year in the history of the Massachusetts Turnpike.

Driscoll noted the fatality rate was .73 and the fatal accident rate was .57 per one hundred million miles. Since the Massachusetts Turnpike has been existence, the lowest fatality rate was in 1983 with .49.

percent basis which will greatly improve the children, especially since many of the families come great distances (some travel over six hours to reach the center—it would be different if the area was flat but we sit on a mountainous terrain).

This letter arrived recently, it was addressed to Postmaster, Cohasset, Mass. Postmaster Edward Fonesca saw that the letter arrived safely to the Mullaney family. It was sent by Mrs. W. Smith of Laurel, Miss. She had read an Associated Press article which related how the nurses including Eileen of Cohasset, Mass., in the Ethiopian food camps were in need of vitamins and more food. Ed.

"Dear Sir,

You will be doing a good deed if you respond to this letter. It refers to a nurse named Miss Eileen Mullaney serving in Ethiopia. The article I read in the past Jackson, Miss. was dated Jehowa, Ethiopia.

What I want to know is her complete address, how do I mail a package to her. I wish to send her vitamin A and cereal. I am spending my own money for this. But I do not know exactly how to address my packages. Also, if I can have a reply from her, I wish to know of any other needs as soap, bath cloths, etc.

Mrs. Patricia Mullaney said thanks to the efforts of Postmaster Fonesca, the letter arrived and a reply to Mrs. Smith is en route.

If anyone would like to send contributions to the famine relief in Ethiopia, this is one organization Eileen Mullaney lists among the best.

Advertising deadline for Cohasset directory

Each year since 1964, members of the Cohasset Rotary club have labored for several months to bring forth a unique product known as the Cohasset Telephone Directory and Buyers Guide.

It is unique because it is tailored to the community, lists only Cohasset phone numbers and accepts only Cohasset advertising. In addition to current telephone numbers it features a classified section of goods and services available in Cohasset. Community service pages include the local fire alarm numbers and two pages of emergency "help if available" information sponsored by local churches and the Social Service League. A special section is set aside for advertising professional services available in the community.

This year's compendium of Cohasset numbers, goods, and services will make its appearance about June 1. All current advertisers have been mailed rate cards and renewal contracts. New businesses who wish to be represented in the book should write to Rotary Club of Cohasset, P.O. Box 36, Cohasset, MA 02025 for information and forms.

This year's deadline for all advertising is March 25 and an attractive discount is offered to advertisers who send their checks with the contract by that date.

Advertising in the directory, together with donations from the public, have enabled the club to distribute scholarship funds to Cohasset High School graduates over a period of many years. Last year's awards totaled $12,000.

All inquiries and listing information should be addressed to the club at the address listed above.

lot size requirement is 20,000 square feet, the 75 homes built averaged 58,000 square feet. And in district C with a lot size of 30,000 square feet, the average home in the past five years was built on 120,500 square feet.

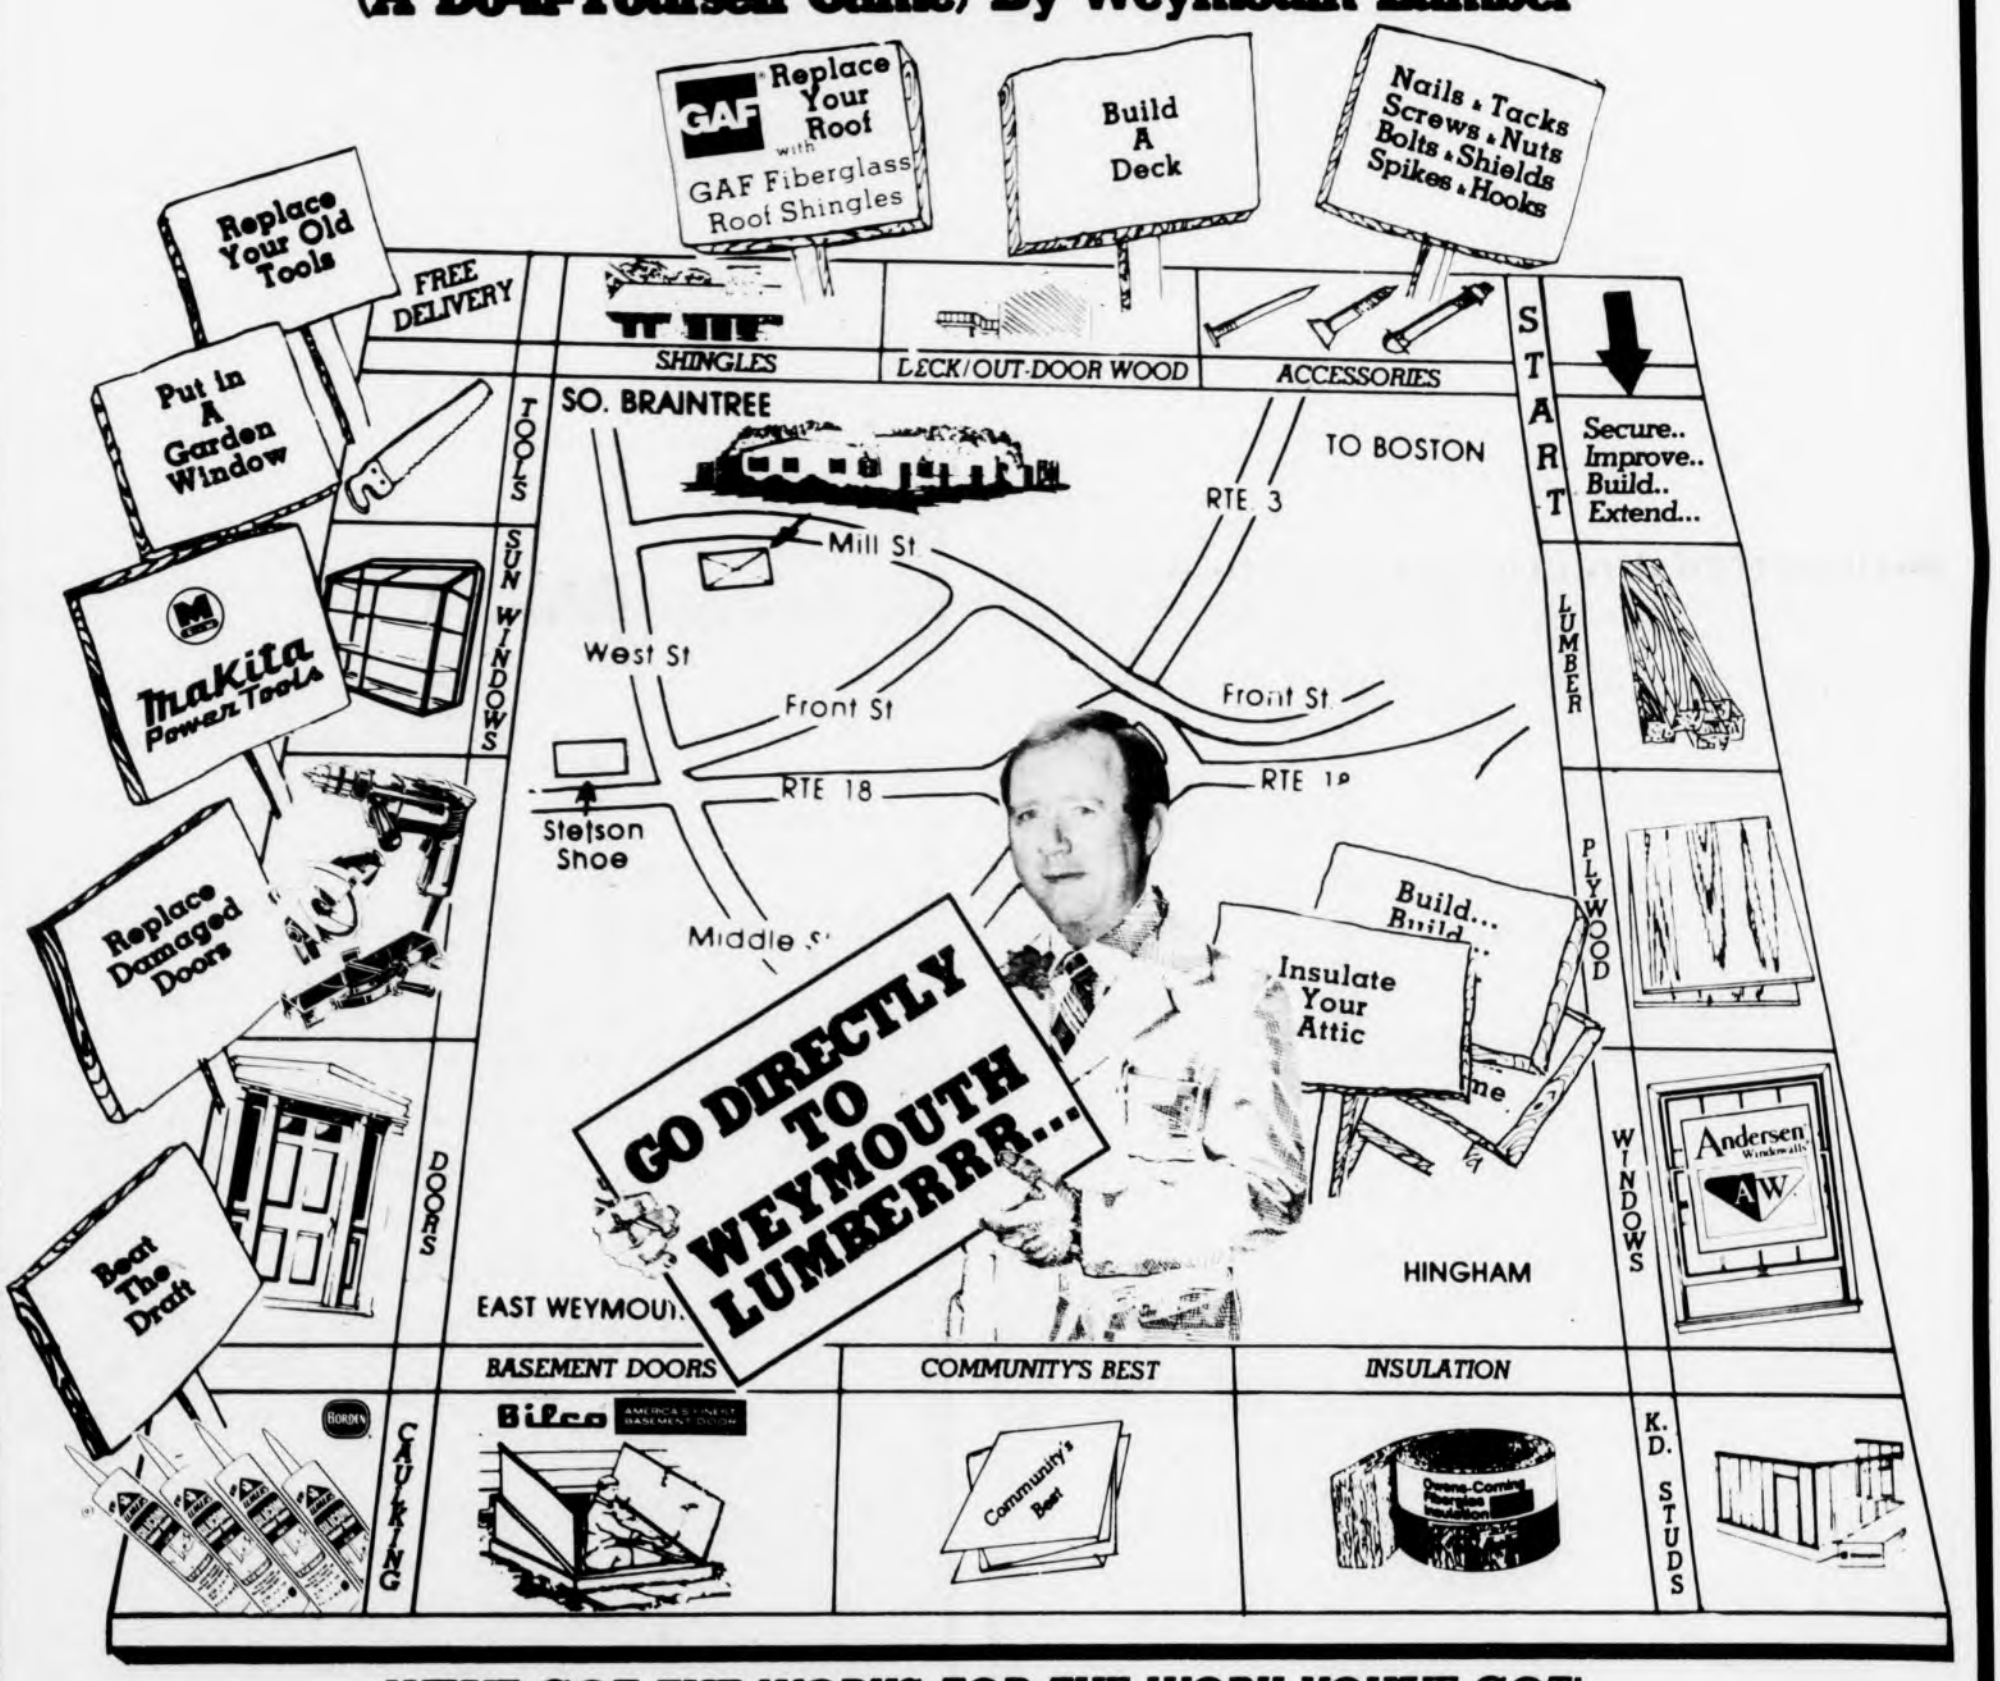
"We were concerned about the fact that 118 homes could have tripled to almost 400 homes if they had built upon the square footage. It indicated to us that the land built upon is far in excess of our regulations. And, our concern is that, as engineers manage to work around high slopes, ledge, etc., we could have an extremely high growth rate in the next few years," she added.

There is also a great concern among planning board members, Bassett said, about the future growth of Route 3A. Describing the commercial strip as "the front door of Cohasset," Bassett said the board in the past three years "has demanded serious esthetic concerns from each business" developing plans for that area.

Bassett quickly added that the Cohasset Plaza proposal for Route 3A and Sohier Street is still pending, awaiting a decision from the State Department of Environmental Quality Engineering.

As far as residential development is concerned, she noted, "we anticipate many more clusters because of the nature of our land." Currently there is a 22-unit development proposed for Jerusalem Road, and perhaps 35 units off Lamberts Lane. Between 38 or 39 units are proposed for the Watershed Protection District in the Lily Pond area.

With information gathered from this profile by the planning board, they have since developed several proposed changes to the zoning bylaw. These changes will be decided at the April 13 Town Meeting, she noted, including changes regarding the scale of new developments, the density requirements, achieving an integration of residential and business, redefinement of building heights, changes to the square footage allowed within residential districts, and limits to the amount of impervious surfaces allowed in new developments.



Local realtor Alma Ekberg talked about the attraction Cohasset holds for home buyers. As she noted in her talk, there are many more potential buyers for homes here, than the number of available homes.

The reasons people choose to live here are varied, she suggested, including the fact that the South Shore is often considered "a real buy" compared to other Northern and Western suburbs. Although that is slowly "becoming untrue." Ekberg said that other advantages outwiegh that consideration, including the lack of tract housing here, the number

School committee briefs

School budget hearing

The school committee will hold a public hearing regarding the proposed $4.2 million school budget, Monday, March 10 at 8 p.m. The hearing will be held in the home economics room.

The school committee tabled a vote this week on the budget, pending the outcome of the public hearing next week. Depending on input from that hearing, the committee is expected to vote the budget at their next scheduled meeting.

The committee voted this week to reduce an appropriation request for Article 21 in the Town Meeting warrant. That article will now request $25,000 for the purchase of an electrical lighting system for the high school auditorium. The article originally included a $35,000 price tag, but the total was reduced after receiving competitive costs from local electrical contractors. Supt. Eugene Crowell told the committee Monday night that $25,000 seemed a more appropriate total.

The superintendent noted that for the first time in five years, the annual high school drama festival was not held in the school auditorium because of the poor lighting condition. An electrical engineer told the school administrators that the lighting system and panel are outdated and beyond repair.

A second warrant article may also be reduced. Article 22 currently includes a price of $13,000 for the purchase of a dump truck for the school system. Supt. Crowell said he and Finance Director Stephen Hart discussed the feasibility of replacing the chassis of the truck rather than purchasing a new vehicle.

After discussing the suggestion wit the school committee, member Joseph Nedrow siad he would contact a General Motors truck division employee about the costs for body work on the truck. Hart also said he would talk with representatives of the South Shore Vocational High School about the possibility of students rebuilding the truck chassis as a school project this spring.

Although the committee went into an executive session Monday night to discuss teacher contract negotiations, that was cited as another reason to delay a vote on the school budget. The negotiation strategy, committee members said, will impact on their budget recommendation. Chairman Nedrow said the committee also needed further clarification form the advisory board regarding the proposed school budget.

Tennis coach appointed

After originally tabling the recommendation, the school committee went into executive session and later in an open meeting voted to appoint Susan Dalrymple the varsity girls' tennis coach.

Supt. Eugene Crowell said the recommendation was unanimous among himself, Principal Richard Streeter and Athletic Director Clark Chatterton that Dalrymple, a junior at Bridgewater College majoring in physical education, be appointed to the $8500 salary position.

Committee member Jack Langmaid, however, suggested the vote be tabled until they discuss the reasons why the fall tennis coach did not apply for the position, when she had informed the school administration she intended to return in the spring.

Supt. Crowell said although he had high regard for that individual, his recommendation would not change.

In executive session, the committee, the superintendent, and the athletic director discussed the specific reasons for their recommendations.

In a subsequent open session, committee members voted to appoint Dalrymple to the position. Langmaid voted against the proposal. Dalrymple will begin her coaching assignment March 18.

MONTSERRAT

Montserrat is one of the Caribbean's great, unheralded islands. This geographical jewel, nicknamed 'the Emerald Isle' for its likeness to Ireland, promises very little but delivers a lot. It possesses a unique beauty due to a topography of jagged peaks and plunging valleys. This once-volcanic island boasts spectacular showers of steam and sulphur, hot mineral springs, cold natural springs, the Great Alps waterfall and the most extensive sugar estate in the Caribbean. The near-deserted beaches offer silver-gray sand, the product of years of now dormant volcanoes. Man-made, high-rise hotels are non-existant. Instead, the island welcomes you with numerous private villas. It is a perfect getaway vacation spot.

Ready for prime time

There may be four games left for the Cohasset Boys Basketball team this year: the semifinals against Medfield; the finals of Division III South, Saturday, the fight for Division III supremacy the week after and finally if they make it, the chance to beat the Western finalist in a state showdown.

But facing the worst case scenario, if Cohasset should lose Thursday night, Saturday or whenever (it could even be in 1986) the criticism of "they should have won it all" or 'they choked" shouldn't enter the mind.

Eddie and the Cruisers (the everyday name for this team) has given all of us pleasure and fun memories. They have shown us more than putting a ball in a net or grabbing a rebound off the boards.

We call attention to two team photos in this week's paper : Eddie and the Cruisers -1983-84 by Rose Cundari and the sequel to Eddie and the Cruisers -1984-85 by Carol McCann.

They are beautiful pictures because they show high school students and their coach having fun, laughing, smiling and yes, they are proud of themselves. And why not?

In this era of drugs alcohol and Salem High vandalism, hooray for Eddie and the Cruisers for showing us the gifts of a Cohasset education.

They have worked hard, learned to care for each other off and on the court and in a microcosm of society, they have shown that black and white youths can learn to work together as one unit.

We acknowledge we might have stepped on a few toes when we criticized School Supt. Eugene Crowell and High School Principal Dick Streeter for recommending to oust Eddie Minelli in the summer of 1983. And in retrospect it was a super decision by the school committee to keep him.

What's proof of the pudding? Three to four hundred people being turned away from a Cohasset basketball game and big name college coaches inquiring about Cohasset athletes and in turn about the merits of a Cohasset education.

How about those pep rallies and the excitement and success which skipped over to the girls team?

It's opened doors for everybody and we are happy to hear that Supt. Crowell shook Minelli's hand after last week's victory over Dover Sherborn.

It is a pleasure to write about Eddie and the Cruisers, to take their pictures and to watch them in action. They are a fun bunch of guys who are admired for their actions and above all are admired by us for showing the world that a 1-17 team can come back to a 21-0 record.

Are they ready for prime time T.V. or how about hosting Saturday Night Live? These guys could be a natural with Eddie Murphy, Joe Piscopo, Jim Belushi and Billie Crystal.

Could you see Fernando telling Eddie Minelli, 'you look marvelous.'

Remember these nicknames, Eddie and the Cruisers," the L.A. Express, the Smurfs and the Super Six when you attend the games Thursday and Saturday. And don't be afraid to scream your lungs out.

The love of man for machines

By Claire McDonough

The Bible speaks of the "love of a man for a maid" as devotion passing all understanding.

Clearly, when the inspired writer coined the phrase, the automobile had not yet been invented.

The Dragon and I have five boys. Two are married. One has two children, and the other will become a father in the near future. They are both devoted to their wives to the point of uxoriousness. They love their children — present and future — with a veritable passion of philogenesis.

And yet neither wife nor child nor any earthly possession has ever rivaled the emotion with which a man-child greets the dawning awareness that he may aspire to own a vehicle propelled by an internal combustion machine.

The romance of a man with a car can begin at any age, though early adolescence is most common.

I recall, however, my son Kevin, upon being told to "make a wish" on his third birthday cake, blowing out the candles then reverently breathing, "Car."

I'm not sure when this love affair ends, but if I ever find out, I'll let you know.

Our girls have all owned cars. They have treasured and cared for them as valuable and valued methods of transportation. They have debated color, make, model, mileage, upholstery and potential longevity.

When their cars have died, they have been sad, and have gone on to plan the next acquisition. In each case it has been a more or less enjoyable, largely commercial venture.

Not so the boys. Jay carries a Corvette in his heart. He doesn't expect to own it in the forseeable future, but he will seek it all his life as a devout Buddhist might seek Nirvana.

Kevin, Patrick, Larry — each has his own image of "the perfect car," an image as real as Dante's Beatrice was to him. As real and, possibly, a tad more attainable.

And now it's Skip. He hasn't settled on his ideal car yet, but he's working on it.

He does know it won't be anything like our family car — eager though he is to drive it at every opportunity.

It will be sleek, fast, and have just enough room in it for himself and the lady of his choice. Unless, of course, he opts for a van.

"Look at that," he'll expostulate when a gleaming van painted with scenes from Fellini passes us.

"I could do a lot with a baby like that."

"I know," I tell him. "That's why I don't want you to have one."

He's nothing if not agreeable. "O.K.," he'll reply. "A Ferrari. That's where it's really at. A gleaming black Ferrari. I can strap the old surf boards on the roof, and I'm off to California. The perfect car, in search of the perfect wave.

"Driven," he adds modestly, "by the perfect person."

He is faithful to the Ferrari until he spots a motor home.

"That's it!" he exults. "That's the one."

Then he looks glum. "I need another job."

"Skip is really hung up on cars," I told the Dragon. "Every foreign sports car he sees sends him right through the roof."

The Dragon smiled tolerantly. "It's immaturity," he explained.

"When he grows up a little, he'll realize that sporty looks don't mean a thing. What he needs is a good, strong, American-made car. Something that's the result of pride in workmanship. And not a new one, either."

His eyes started to glaze over, and he appeared to be looking at something no one else could see.

"They don't make them like they used to any more. A 1965 Chevy. Black. Standard shift. Four doors. Standard brakes. None of this new fangled nonsense. Maybe an a.m. radio and a heater — forget everything else."

I left the room silently. As my friend Faith is fond of saying, "The difference between men and boys is the size of their toys."

Hockey nonviolence

To the Editor:

It is said so often that it has become axiomatic, "Hockey people are different." Lately this aphorism has taken on a most negative aspect and when the true hockey person hears it repeated in his presence he shudders. A recent article in the Globe by a respected writer tells us that hockey is a vicious, violent game that reflects that most atavistic of all human emotion, violence. The violence, so it is told, is not confined to the ice surface but is displayed by the fans, the parents of the players and most dramatically by the coaches. Following this puerile line of thought it becomes evident that hockey, as a youth activity, should be banned and all the hockey sticks stacked up for gala July Fourth conflagration. Exorcising with fire this uncontrollable mayhem will insure its extinction and all can live in peace and tranquility.

The hockey team of Cohasset practices at five o'clock in the morning, yes before the sun and before school. Hockey is a winter sport and to vacate a nice, warm, cozy bed for the frozen tundra of an ice arena at this hour is an act of love and dedication. Morning after morning one can only marvel at the consistency and punctuality of the players and the parents who come to watch and provide a needed lift so that all can be on time to school. The games are not much more enjoyable as they are played often in locales far and wide from home in places that are actually colder inside than out. And yet they come to every game, the parents

How to start a spring garden inside

By Max S. Maire

The truly dedicated gardener must start every plant possible from seed. There is no other way. Why bother to garden if you're going to stop by the plant stand on Memorial Day and buy lush tomato and pepper plants, lettuce, cucumbers, and whatever else there is that someone else has started?

It's like adopting a twenty year old and, besides, it completely ruins January and February which are seed buying months and not much else.

It also makes March and April completely frustrating as the garden is either frozen or muddy, the skiing stinks, you have an advanced case of cabin fever and the only escape is to plant all those seeds that were bought with so much enthusiasm that day in January when a foot of snow fell.

Now, the real truly, honest-to-goodness gardener will have a green house to start all those seeds in. A green house with controlled temperature, controlled humidity, bottom heat, lots of sun, shades when there's too much sun and, with luck, a hired green thumb who frees the gardener to sit in the den by the fire and read gardening books.

The slightly less honest-to-goodness, truly real gardener will have something else with which to encourage the sprouting of seeds and the growing of those strong, sturdy, better-than-the-nursery plants that tend to exhibit all of the vices of kids reaching twenty, excepting that they don't talk back.

That something else may be elaborate or simple. The garden magazines tend to specialize in the elaborate something elses. I would love to have an elaborate something else but I don't. What I do have is a rather simple something else that I can keep in the kitchen where I can see it, remember to water it, remember to turn the lights on and off, and watch the miracle of seeds sprouting, developing their pair of juvenial leaves, replacing those with adult leaves and growing as strong and sturdy as what I could buy in a nursery. Sometimes, anyway.

Some people do all this in the cellar. I don't like to live in the cellar. I prefer to live in the kitchen and want the plants there so I can keep tabs on how they are doing: who is poking up the dirt, who looks a little weakly and is going to get plucked, reluctantly, for not being vigorous, who needs a little water this evening and all of those other little things that are called 'quality time' when you are dealing with kids and should be called the same thing when you are gardening in the winter. I don't want to run down stairs for my quality time, I want it right here where I am.

The problem with doing this something else in the kitchen is room. Kitchens don't have much room. I have a very large kitchen, big enough to make people goggle, but there still isn't any room. There are lots of windows but the windows are all occupied by house plants. They will go outside in the summer but they would do nothing but grumble if I put them out in March. There are counters but the counters are all covered with the stuff counters like to be covered with.

However, I do have one counter that has nothing underneath it. Well, nothing immediately underneath it. A little lower there is a kindling box, the cat feeder, a stool and a few other things. But there is nothing but unused air for a goodly bit of space, particularly if I move the stool and use it for, say, a place to accumulate those items that are waiting to be taken back down to the cellar. I need a place like that.

The underside of this counter is my greenhouse and it's a rather economical greenhouse which is available for those few months I want it and out of sight and mind the rest of the year. Basically, the greenhouse consists of two elements: lighting and plant supports. Both are hung from the underside of the counter.

For lighting, I bought four 24" portable fluorescent fixtures at $10 each. The rest of the year I use them elsewhere. Each fixture requires two screws which I leave in all the time as the fixtures have keyhole slots. I thought about hanging the fixtures with Velcro, which would work, but screws are a lot cheaper. As the fixtures don't have reflectors, I glued a piece of aluminum foil to the underside of the counter. Whether it's necessary or not I'm not sure.

The plant supports are bookcase shelves. Not just any bookcase shelf but the plastic ones that are sometimes referred to as Parsons tables. The ones I have are 30" long, 10" deep and, when turned upside down, have a 2" lip. completely watertight. At each corner there is a little box, about 2" x 2" where a leg is supposed to fit. I drill a hole through one of the sides of this box, attach a chain and support the whole thing from two eyehooks screwed into the bottom of the counter. The chain, of course, makes the thing adjustable so the lights can be kept at the ideal distance from the plants.

The result is a quite simple, relatively inexpensive place to start plants. It doesn't take up any space I would otherwise be using and it's where I can see it. During the off season I take it down, use the lamps elsewhere and stick the shelves down cellar.

I use two shelves with two fixtures each. I could possibly get by with a single fixture per shelf but, having possibly been extravagant at the start, I don't want to find out now I was wrong.

You don't have to have a counter like mine to use this simple, cheap approach to starting seeds. You might do the same thing under kitchen cabinets or any number of other places. If you really need starting space, the shelves can be stacked, upside down, with the lights suspended from the shelf above. It just takes a little thought and, perhaps, a red thumb, which is to tinkering as a green thumb is to gardening.

A chowder lunch draws a big crowd last week at the Beechwood Congregational Church. It's a popular annual event at the church. (Rose Cundari) and friends, to cheer, to encourage and to partake of this great American sports drama.

Everyone loves a winner and yet this team did not win and still the fans remained loyal. In losing teams the morale is low and yet this team never had a morale problem, as a matter of fact quite the opposite was true. In losing teams tempers flare and there is always the tendency to point an accusing finger at another and yet these young men laughed and strived together with no strain of animosity. In fact one can cite a near perfect attendance record at all meetings and practices. This Cohasset team finished with the same cohesiveness it stated with and this despite a disappointing season.

"Hockey people are different" and in towns like Cohasset this difference is exemplified in great sacrifice and dedication. As a first year coach the demeanor of all connected with the program was on a level to be envied wherever sports are played and enjoyed. I am proud to be a different person associated with young men of this high calibre and with the most supportive parents and friends that anyone can hope to find. The critics of this sport should come to Cohasset to ascertain the real significance of being different. These same critics should view the tapes of the 1960 Olympics and Squaw Valley with the two local men from Harvard, Bill and Bob Cleary, skating away from a heavily favored Soviet team or recall the young men from this area at lake Placid in 1980 being lead by Jim Craig with an American flag drapped over his body seeking his father's shoulder on which to weep and express all the graditude for his father's perserverance in being a different person.

Boosters present Harlem Magicians

The Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club presents the Harlem Magicians (featuring Marques Haynes, former Harlem Globetrotter) vs. The Cohasset All Stars Sunday, March 17 at 3 p.m. at the Cohasset High School gym.

Preliminary recreation league foul shooting and lay-up contest begin at 2 p.m.

Advance sale tickets are $4, adult, $3, student. At the door, tickets will be $5, adult, $4, student. Tickets are available at home boys' varsity basketball games, Horizon Video and Good Sport, as well as from Booster Club members.

The dictionary is filled with terms used to describe athletes whose abilities far surpass those of their peers and contemporaries. There are probably no words left to describe Marques Haynes, however, who is still going strong in a basketball career that has spanned six decades.

As director and player-coach of the Harlem Magicians, an ensemble of competitive athletic performers, Haynes currently is fulfilling another phase in his lifelong dream to spread happiness throughout the world by means of entertaining basketball. Past incarnations, though, have proven just as rewarding.

Acknowledged as the sport's premier dribbler and ball handler, Haynes has performed before royalty, Popes, presidents, politicians and countless basketball fans and in far-flung locales.

Joining Haynes on the tour are such comedy basketball stand-outs as Valentino Willis, team captain and No. 1 comic and 6'1" scoring whiz John Glass, a former collegiate all-American.

Tryouts for "Scapino"

The Cohasset Dramatic Club will hold tryouts for its spring production of Frank Dunlop and Jim Dale's adapted comedy "Scapino" Saturday, March 9 and Sunday March 10 at 2 p.m. on the Town Hall stage, Cohasset.

Directing the play is Ellen Kelly who directed the Club's 1982 production of the modern play "Scenes From American Life."

"Scapino" is a two-act comedy, an adaptation of Moliere's "The Follies of Scapin." The adapted version takes place in an Italian restaurant on the edge of the Bay of Naples. The cast of characters calls for a minimum of 14 but in such a zany setting as that of "Scapino" who knows how many more additional characters may walk in through the door?

Basically, says Director Ellen Kelly, the tale is this: Take two elder gentlemen, Argante and Geronte. Take also their respective sons, Ottavio and Leandro. Now send the two older men out of town for a few days to make a certain deal, the deal being, Argante would like to have Ottavio marry the daughter and thereby the fortune of Geronte . . . The plot of "Scapino" thickens as a hired rogue named Sylvestro tries to keep an eye on Ottavio, and Leandro is being supervised by an even "roguier" rogue names Scapino.

As might be expected, some girls catch the eyes of two young men, and the plot evolves. Waiters (perhaps singing), waitresses, pretty girls, maybe even some gypsies, and a Harpo Marx type named Carlo help fill out the story. "Scapino" is broad comedy at its best, and there's room for plenty of comedy.

Playdates will be April 25 through 28. Scripts for "Scapino" are available at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, Cohasset.

Social Service meeting

The "New Friends" Committee under the auspices of the Social Service League of Cohasset gave an informal tea for the residents of the Elm Street Housing on Wednesday, February 27, to explain the program. The plan is to reach people in the Town of Cohasset who, for any reason, would enjoy one-on-one visits. At present, there are seven volunteers who are calling on Cohasset residents.

We welcome anyone who would enjoy the opportunity to make new friends. We look for visitors as well as those people who would like to be visited. For further information, please call the office at 383-0771 or 383-0821.

Great characterizations in 'Morning's at Seven'

By Corinne A. Kutish

"Morning's at Seven," the Cohasset Dramatic Club's current offering at the Cohasset Town Hall, is the gentle story of four elderly sisters, whose pent-up emotions burst forth one early fall day.

The story line is a little on the slow side, and the events that take place are not exciting front page material. But the actors give excellent characterizations that capture your attention.

There's Cora Swanson (Julia Jordan), the long-suffering sister, who for 45 years has shared her home with her maiden sister, Aaronetta Gibbs (Barbara Elliott), to the detriment of Cora's marriage to Thor (George Hamacher).

Next door to the Swansons is another sister, Ida Bolton (Betty Miessner), a rather simple-minded, but good-hearted, woman, married to Carl (Wayne Miessner).

The Boltons have two problems. One is Carl, who keeps having "spells" in which he questions the meaning of life and his purpose for living.

The other is the Boltons' son, Homer (Peter Tolman), who at the age of 40 has shown no interest in marrriage. This is despite his five-year engagement to Myrtle Brown (Fran Cranford).

Down the street lives the fourth sister, Esther Crampton (Alice Duffy), married to a now-retired college professor, David (Joe Coyle). David resents his wife's close ties to her sisters and in-laws, particularly since he considers them all "morons."

The further development of these characters is hilarious to watch.

For example, as Homer, Peter Tolman appears as a slow dull-wit with rounded shoulders and matching bow tie. Tied to his mother for years, Homer is finally forced to bring home his long-standing fiance to meet the family.

"But mother," he complains, when pressured about marriage, "she asks such embarrassing questions. Like what size underwear I wear."

As Ida, Betty Miessner wrings her hands and tries to make sense of it all. After all, what would you do it your husband had "dentist spells"?

"All I wanted to be was a dentist," laments a doleful, monotone Wayne Miessner as Carl.

As Cora explains, a "dentist spell" is only one step to a "where am I spell."

"I ask you, where am I?" shouts out Carl, concerned as his life slips away without his having made any worthy contributions.

Fran Cranford gives an endearing performance as the ever-smiling fiance, Myrtle, who so wishes to be liked and accepted by all.

"You just have the nicest back yard I've ever seen," says a very proper Myrtle in a fluffy blue suit with blue-ribboned bonnet. "Why I should think you would just love it here."

Giving the most natural-sounding performances were Julia Jordan and Alice Duffy. As Cora and Esther, they sit on their front steps shelling peas and laughing in hushed tones about the family goings-on.

The plot thickens when Cora reveals to Esther her plans to rent a house from Carl for her and her husband to live in.

"I just want to live alone with my husband," explains Cora, sighing over the ever-presence of her never-married sister, Aaronetta.

The house in question was built by Carl for Homer when he married. Of course, since it appears that won't happen, Carl agreed he might rent it to Cora and Thor.

Also giving a strong performance is Barbara Elliott as Aaronetta. She's a bit of a busy-body, but a proud, well-meaning woman. The audiences eyebrows raise a bit though, when it becomes apparant that she and Thor may be having an affair.

The set design is a real winner. Designed by Sheldon Ripley, it shows the two back yards of Cora and Ida, complete with screen doors and big porches. The backdrop is the lush greenery and large farm-style houses so evocative of small town America.

It's rare when a reviewer feels compelled to write about the lighting, but lighting designer Tom Finegan, assisted by Joyce Finegan, deserve special mention. As the day wanes during the first act, the lighfing subtly changes from bright daylight, to the long shadows of late afternoon, to dusk, to early evening as the porch lights go on.

Written by Paul Osborn, "Morning's at Seven" is a complicated story. Director Denise Ripley has done an excellent job in pulling together the diverse plot lines for the eventual happy ending.

Both director and the entire cast deserve accolades for an absorbing performance.

State Sen. Bill Golden reports

State Sen. William B. Golden announced recently his commitment to involve South Shore communities in decisions concerning the proposed plan to restore commuter rail service to the South Shore.

After applauding Governor Mike Dukakis's announcement to make improvements to South Shore transportation service, including possible restoration of commuter rail service, Golden said, "I will actively seek community support and involvement in these important transportation programs.

"Therefore, I will be asking the Boards of Selectmen in the towns in my district to allow non-binding questions concerning return of commuter rail to the South Shore to be placed on local ballots in the upcoming spring elections."

Non-binding public opinion advisory questions may be placed on the ballot for a regular town election provided either the selectmen or the annual Town Meeting vote to follow that action.

Sen. Golden said the questions he will draft and recommend to selectmen will be designed to determine whether citizens of the communities of Hingham, Hull, Scituate, Cohasset, Duxbury, Weymouth and Cohasset: (1) want commuter rail service restored; (2) will use commuter rail service if it is restored; and (3) will be willing to subsidize the cost of commuter rail service if federal funding is, in fact, cut back.

"I am pursuing the ballot question approach because the support of citizens of South Shore towns will have a critical impact on whether the Greenbush line is one of the South Shore commuter rail lines to be restored," Golden said.

"For 25 years, the South Shore has been waiting for gubernatorial support for first class South Shore commuter rail service. Now that we have the support of Governor Dukakis, it is imperative that the South Shore communities emphatically demonstrate their support for the restoration of this important transportation service."

"It is my intent by putting these questions before the voters in this spring's town elections to give the voters of the affected communities a clear opportunity to be heard. I have no doubt that the South Shore citizens want and need a "user-friendly" transportation system. I strongly believe that they should have a voice in determining what that service should be."

MOTOR BOAT EXCISE TAX

Sen. William Golden delivered testimony to the Taxation Committee Feb. 27 in support of his bill to improve the assessment and collection of the motor boat excise tax.

Revenues from this tax, which is assessed against motor boat owners, is a source of local revenue.

The bill would require marina and yacht club operators to report to local board of assessors information which is necessary for the assessment of the motor boat excise tax.

Sen. Golden, the bill's sponsor, stated that, "All boat owners who should be paying a boat excise tax are not. This is obviously unfair. It also means that coastal communities are receiving less revenue than they should be."

What a comeback for the Cruisers

la. In 1981 Coach Minelli started from rock bottom, coaching a 1-17 team. But reflecting back, Minelli acknowledged it was then the seeds of the Cruisers were planted.

What is the meaning of Eddie and the Cruisers? It is based on a movie where individuals unite with the common goal of producing a great sound and great music. "Ours," said Minelli, "is to produce a great basketball team."

Secondly, the meaning is to create a feeling of driving down a highway in a Corvette, with the top down and the wind in your face. It's the feeling of a burst of speed and then cruise control.

The last two years of Skipper basketball have not produced great height for basketball players. In fact the Cruisers are smaller this year than a year ago. Their tallest player is 6-5 center James Creed and the next tallest player is 6-2 Phil Bernstein.

However, the Cruisers have won 21 ballgames with a splendid corps of quickness, hustle, fine shooting, intelligence and above all cohesion.

There have been countless games when the team is playing neck and neck with their opponent and then three minutes later----Whoosh! It's Cruiser Control with a 21-point lead.

In the 1981-82 year Minelli and his team learned the ingredients of winning despite a 1-17 year. "Yeah, it was rock bottom but we learned humility. We had a great group of kids -Dan Anderson, Jack Maloney, Larry Hoogeveen. We knew we weren't a good team but those kids put in two hours of good practice, great desire and determination," Minelli said.

In 1982-83, the team improved to 9-11 and unofficially was named the comeback team of the league, beating two or three tournament bound teams. That team included Tony Bogarty, Jim Creed, Dave MacDonald, Dave Barcomb, Bob-Schultz and Phil Bernstein.

Then came the summer of 1983 and on a hot summer's night, a combined recommendation of the athletic director, high school principal and school superintendent wanted Minelli ousted because they felt they wanted a full-time Cohasset teacher to coach the sport and Principal Dick Streeter felt Minelli didn't teach adequate fundamental skills.

An outpouring of fan and student support led to a school committee decision to reappoint Minelli two weeks later.

And now the seeds were popping.

"The kids," said Minelli, "were really looking forward to the season. They knew how to win but at that point needed to know how to come back and win; how to handle pressure when you're six points down on the road with a minute to go in the game."

Twice in the final rounds of the Division III Tournament Cohasset fell back, rebounded, tied the game and went ahead. Ditto-the final game against Spellman but the well didn't hold enough water in the last few seconds.

"From the minute the buzzer sounded the kids and myself were planning for this year. The kids played all summer, conditioned themselves and I went and scouted these teams. The media rated ourselves number one and all season it was like the Celtics, waiting for the playoffs."

According to Minelli, the head basketball writer for USA Today, a daily U.S. newspaper, rates Cohasset one of the top 100 basketball teams in the nation and could move up to the top 25 with a spotless record for the entire season.

Minelli said area coaches packed the Cohasset gym to watch the Cruisers dismantle a tall, quick and Division I New Bedford team by 35 points. New Bedford, rated fifth before the Cohasset team, was never the same again, losing to Silver Lake the next game in the opening round of the Division I South Sectional.

A Division III team beating a Division I squad? Never! But then again, never isn't a Cruiser vocabulary word. Two years ago Minelli said the players acknowledged to him they were losing ballgames because they didn't pay attention to him. They've listened from that point on and are now 40-2.

They were six points down at the half against Dover-Sherborn Saturday at home. They cruised in the second half and beat Dover by 23 points.

To understand the Cruisers is to understand that Minelli has assembled a sound complement of

Warren Waitkus' World of Weather

At 11:14 a.m. March 20th, the vernal equinox occurs. This is when the astronomical spring officially begins, and the days and nights in the northern hemisphere will each have approximately 12 hours. Soon we will have a touch of "spring fever" and our thoughts will be of the balmy days of summer that are just around the corner. But don't put your snow shovel away just yet. March has brought some of the most vicious storms of all time to New England.

On March 4, 1717 two major and two minor storms in nine days came to an end, with about 36 inches of snow in the Boston area. On March 25, 1909 a severe easterly storm struck with 87 MPH winds recorded at Blue Hill observatory. On March 17, 1956 the infamous "Saint Patrick's Day" blizzard struck and two days later on the 19th a second heavy snowstorm commenced.

But the Grandaddy of all March storms was the great blizzard of March 11-14, 1888. Many stories have been written about how this blizzard cut off and immobilized Washington, D.C., Philadelphia, New York City, and Boston, with drifts 30 to 40 feet high. But this storm was also a great marine disaster from Chesapeake Bay through New England.

Over 200 vessels were sunk, grounded or abandoned, while more than 100 seamen died in what they called the "Great White Hurricane". This was during the days of sail, and to be at sea during such a monstrous storm, took all the skill and courage of captain and crew to just survive. I don't think the pages of weather history contain a record of a more gallant fight against the elements of nature than the log of the American Ship Annie M. Smull.

The log was written from Colombo, Ceylon to New York. His vessel was in position east of Chesapeake Bay when he encountered the storm. In his log he refers to the wind as being "Force 7" or "Force 11 to 12". This is a numerical value on the Beaufort scale; force 7 being 32-38 MPH and force 12 exceeding hurricane force of 74 MPH. He also mentions the use of oil-bags. This was a method of using oil to quiet dangerous waves and prevent the seas from crashing on board the vessel. Let's go to sea now, in the year 1888.

MARCH 11 — Midnight to 8 a.m.,: Fresh breeze and dull overcast sky. 5 a.m.: Went out of the stream, hauled up NNE., and went in again. 6 a.m.,: Barometer 30.11; chopping cross-sea all night; wind SE, 5. 10 a.m. Fresh and quite fine for a SE wind; went out of the stream again on a N. by E. course; and the sea got smooth once; Barometer 30.06. Noon: latitude 36 degrees 38' N., longitude 74 degrees 9' W., Barometer 30.02. 2 p.m.: Wind SE., 5, Barometer 29.96. 4 p.m.: Barometer 29.86. 6 p.m., Barometer 29.76, wind increasing to force 6. 10 p.m.; Wind still at SE., force 7; Barometer 29.71; sails furled to lower top-sails, foresail, and upper main-topsail; weather thick and rainy. Midnight: Barometer 29.66; course all day between N. and NNE.

MARCH 12 — 2 a.m.: Wind shifted to NNW., force 11 to 12; Barometer 29.61, but at 4 a.m. fell to 29.36, then steadily rising until noon, when in latitude 30 degrees N., longitude 73 degrees 40' W., it reached 29.51; Barometer record ended here. At 2 a.m., when wind shifted to NNW., braced around, clewed down upper main-topsail and hauled up foresail and mizzen-topsail and sent men to furl them, but gale increased to a hurricane and blew them to pieces, also blowing lower foretop-sail away, and main-topsail yard broke short off in the slings. We also lost both topsails. Terrific gale and blinding snow, ship lying on beam-ends with yard arms in water and making water fast. Ship covered with snow, and ice making fast. At 10 a.m. shipped a sea which took two boats, one man, and everything about decks; saved the man; five men with hands and feet frost-bitten and three injured by washing about; all hands lashed to pumps and working them continually. All rooms and galley washed out; ship lying with hatch coamings under water. Cargo shifted at 8 p.m.; wheel-shaft broke, and steering-gear completely smashed; secured rudder with tackle as well as possible. Foreyard sprung, main-yard gone at sheave hole, and the remainder of sails cut from yards to keep ship to wind. Tarpaulin in mizzen rigging. Midnight: gale still raging and frightful sea; oil-bags over, which work well for the NW sea, but have no effect on the NE and SE sea. Pumps still going, but don't gain any; 4 feet of water in the ship; snowing hard all the time. This is worst gale I ever experienced; ship making bad work of it and straining badly.. Eight men unfit for duty; bad outlook; covered with snow and ice. Hard luck!

MARCH 13 — Midnight to 8 a.m.: no change, still snowing, and gale as bad as ever; ship straining badly, and can't gain any on the pumps, working them continually as well as we can with a disabled crew; sea very bad, making a clean breach over the ship; at daylight a little less wind, and sea more regular; still snowing. Noon: foretop-sail and jib; managed to get before the wind; lost the jib. I intend to run for warm water and thaw out; steering with tackles on tiller; pumps going constantly, no luck; ship has about 4 feet list to starboard and steers badly. Bent spare lower foretop-sail and set in. More moderate at midnight. No suction on the pumps, but the water don't gain on us; all right. Heavy snow squalls. Large sea from N. my hands are swelled so I can hardly hold a pen.

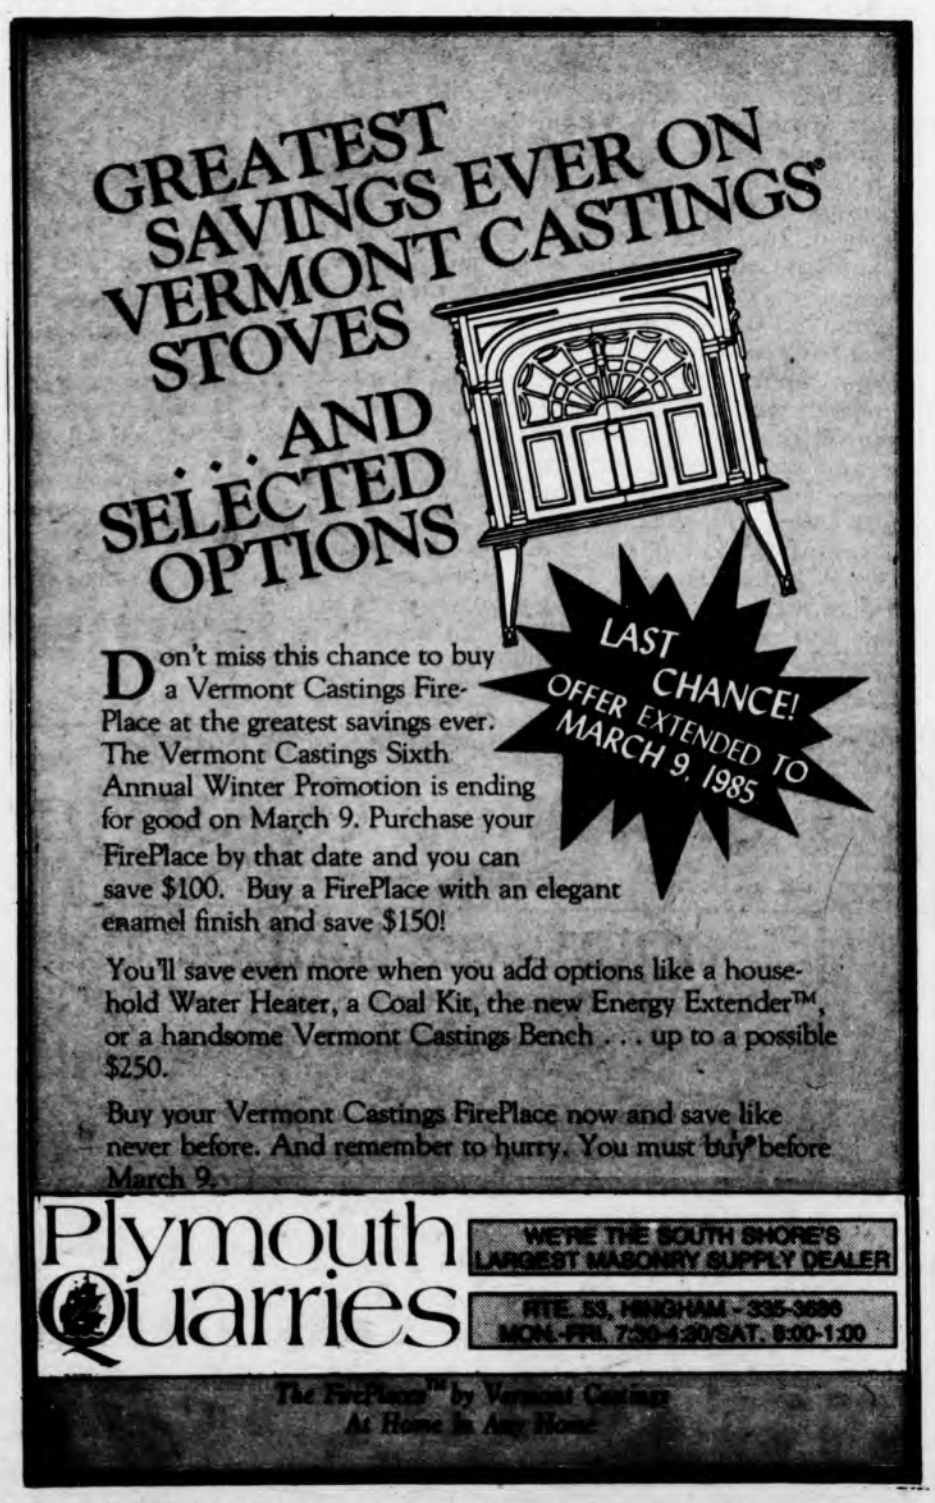
The vessel Annie M. Smull made it to port, but many another went down with all hands in that fateful storm of March 1888.

February Summary

February 1985 began cold but ended with record high temperature readings being set on the 24th. The 70 degree reading in Boston on that day broke the month's all-time high reading set in 1930.

Total melted precipitation, at my station in Marshfield, was 2.59 inches, 1.03 inches below normal. There were 14.75 inches of snow, 3.15 inches above normal. The maximum 24-hour rainfall was .60 inches on the 13th. Maximum 24-hour snowfall was 11 inches on Feb. 6-7. Rain, .01 inch or more, occurred on 6 days with a trace on two days. Snow, 1.0 inch or more, occurred on 3 days.

The mean temperature was 28.2 degrees, 2.2 degrees below normal. The average daily maximum readings was 38.3 degrees, while the average daily minimum was 18 degrees. The low temperature for the month was 6 degrees below zero on the 4th with a record setting high reading of 67 degrees on the 24th.



There were five clear days, fifteen partly cloudy days and eight cloudy days. The average wind speed was 14.7 mph; Normal is 14 mph. The highest gust was 62 mph on the 12th.

The normal heating season is from Sept. 1 to May 23. Some 23 percent of the heating year remains.

March Outlook

From the 7th-12th it will be fair and cold with windy conditions and possibly a few snow flurries. 13th-20th a storm period is indicated with a major storm of rain though we may have heavy snow depending on the track of the storm. 21st-28th another major storm with high winds can be expected. The month will be stormy and should have above average precipitation. The last three days should be fair, windy and cold.

Cohasset school news

By Lisa Shumaker

Girls Basketball

The girls began their tournament play by crushing Holbrook Wednesday, 67-39. Fallon feels his team's great intensity and full court press wore Holbrook down and along with Cohasset's strong transition game, keyed the victory for the Skippers.

Without high scorer Carla Lucas' 20 points and outstanding defense, the victory would not have been possible. Carla led the team on both ends of the court and was followed by Tracy Fitzpatrick with 17 points in scoring.

Saturday, the skippers defeated Norwell 44-38 in what Fallon is referring to as the biggest win for the girls basketball program since he has been coaching. This victory not only placed Cohasset in the semi-finals, but this win marks the most wins a girls basketball team has ever had in Cohasset. Furthermore, Cohasset is now the only South Shore League team remaining in the tournament.

Against Norwell, Fallon believes that because his team held Norwell's two top inside players to only 11 points all together, Norwell's offense was shut down completely and this was the reason why Cohasset came out on top of this battle.

Defensively, Vicki Spooner and Carla Lucas played outstandingly along the baseline. Janet DiGovolamo had a strong floor game at point guard as well. In scoring, Carla Lucas led all with 15 points, followed by Tracy Fitzpatrick with 12 and Sara Seavey with 10.

Wednesday, the girls will travel to Oliver Ames to take on Nauset at 8:15 p.m. Fallon feels this team matches up very well with Cohasset, and it will undoubtedly be an extremely though game for the Skippers.

"The Shot Heard 'Round the World" congratulations go out to David Shumaker, a freshman brought up on to the varisty boys basketball team, for his tremendous buzzer-beating shot against Dover Saturday.

I was there, and even I was impressed. Hopefully he can live up to that shot in the years to come. I know he will. By the way, if you didn't already know, the boys clobbered Dover.

Boys Basketball

They didn't panic when they entered the locker-room at halftime, down by six points.

The Cohasset boys basketball team took a deep breath, made some tactical defensive adjustments and hustled more than ever to earn a 65-42 win over a scrappy Dover Sherborn team Saturday.

Now 21-0, it's off to the semifinals Thursday night against Medfield and maybe to the finals Saturday at Brockton High School.

The visiting Raiders 15-5 were undaunted by Cohasset's record and outshot and outhustled the Skippers for two periods, leading at the half, 33-27.

Minelli, realizing his players were sluggish after ten days of rest, shifted some d fensive responsibilities and then everything fell into place.

Dover Sherborn scored only four points in the third quarter and held Dover center Will Carey (17 points in the first half) to just two points the rest of the game.

Meanwhile, the Cohasset offense perked up. Steals by Tony Bogarty, Dave MacDonald, Bobby Schultz, Phil Bernstein and Bryan Edwards heated the Skipper break.

It took about six minutes of the third quarter for Cohasset to take the lead for good. When Center Jim Creed's offensive rebound made it 37-36, the spectacular Cohasset crowd let out a roar and as they say, "it was Katie by the door."

Final score: Cohasset 65, Dover Sherborn, 42.

It was a balanced scoring attack for Cohasset as Bogarty and Creed hit for 16 points, Bryan Edwards added 17, Dave MacDonald chipped in with eight point, Bobby Schultz scored four very important points but spearheaded the second half comeback and Dave Schumaker and Tom Larson each scored two points.

Project Mainstream

Third graders at Osgood School last week had a unique opportunity to meet and learn from four young adults from the Boston School for the Deaf in Randolph, who visited Cohasset under the auspices of Project Mainstream.

In February, this handicapped awareness program concentrated on the problems of deafness and hearing impairment. Early in the month Diane Santini and Taffy Nothnagle, parent volunteers, visited each third grade to explain what it means to be deaf, demonstrate hearing aids, and teach finger spelling and simple sign language. The goal of this lesson was to give information about the handicap and to help the children understand the various ways deaf people communicate.

The more eagerly anticipated part of the program came last Thursday when the children met Tom Downes, a counselor at BSD, who is hearing impaired but able both to speak and sign, and two high school seniors Ernie Cristo and Suzanne Gerstal, both of whom are deaf and communicate by sign language. With them came their hearing interpreter Gina Hotton. The program began with each deaf guest telling about himself and his educational history and included a busy questioning session. Questions ranged from "Can you drive a car?" and "How do you get up in the morning?" to "When you were little, did kids ever tease you?" The children next had an opportunity to try out the signs they knew and to guess others and finally to follow instructions given all in sign in several play situations.

For the BSD students, this was their first experience speaking to groups of hearing children, but they immediately seemed at ease and their individual personalities came across readily through their signed language and expressive body movements.

For most Osgood children these were the first deaf people they had ever encountered. They were amazed and pleased at how easily they could communicate (thanks to the interpreter) and they felt very comfortable with these teenagers whom we call handicapped. For the third graders this was indeed a special day!

PSO Phone-A-Thon

Phones will ring Wednesday, March 13, from 7 to 9:30 p.m. in the homes of families with school children. Volunteers fc he PSO (Parent School Organization) will be calling to ask parents to show their support for the activities of the PSO on behalf of their children by making a monetary pledge.

Over $4,500 was raised through last year's Phone-a-Thon and was used to provide such enriching extras as the artist-in-residence program, audio-visual and computer equipment, library files, participatory theatre, and field trips.

The PSO has accomplished much this year, including arranging host families for METCO students, and organizing a guest career lecture series and dances for the junior/senior high school.

Over 200 volunteers recruited by the PSO work in the classrooms, libraries, I.M.S. labs, and on special projects such as the handicapped awareness and "Great Books" programs. A special calendar listing school events, games schedules, holidays and vacations goes out every fall to students' homes as a service of the PSO.

Fundraising Co-Chariman Denise Conant and Steve Geary are coordinating the Phone-a-Thon and once again have arranged with local realtors to allow the use of their offices and telephones for the evening. The nine captains who will oversee three to four callers at each location are Joanne Chittick, Norman Grassey, Dick Mantz, Sue McNamara, Linda Starmer, Robin Suhrbier, Sue Terry, Judy Volungis, and Shelley Weier.

PSO President Robin Suhrbier is hopeful that parents will be appreciative of the PSO's efforts to improve the quality of their children's education and will be generous in their tax-deductible contributions so that no worthy project will go unfunded next year.

NATIONAL FLOOD INSURANCE PROGRAM
Proposed Flood Elevation Determinations

AGENCY: Federal Emergency Management Agency

ACTION: Proposed rule.

SUMMARY:

Technical information or comments are solicited on the proposed base (100-year) flood elevations shown in your community's preliminary Flood Insurance Study and Flood Isurance Rate Map. These base (100-year) flood elevations are the basis for the flood plain management measures that the community is required to either adopt or show evidence of being already in effect in order to qualify or remain qualified for participation in the National Flood Insurance Program (NFIP).

DATES:

The period for comment will be ninety (90) days following the second publication of this proposed rule in a newspaper of local circulation in the community.

ADDRESSES:

Study and maps showing the proposed base flood elevations and their delineation are available for review at the office of Christine Bassett, Chairman of the Planning Board, Town Hall, Cohasset, Massachusetts.

Send comments to:
Honorable Clifford Mitman
Chairman of the Board of Selectmen of the Town of Cohasset
Cohasset Town Offices
41 Highland Avenue
Cohasset, Massachusetts 02025

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION
John L. Matticks
Acting Chief, Risk Studies Division
Federal Insurance Administration
Federal Emergency Management Agency
Washington, DC 20472
(202) 646-2754

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

The Federal Emergency Management Agency gives notice of the proposed determinations of base (100-year) flood elevations, in accordance with Section 110 of the Flood Disaster Protection Act of 1973 (Pub. L. 93-234), 87 Stat. 980, which added Section 1363 to the National Flood Insurance Act of 1968 (Title XIII of the Housing and Urban Development Act of 1968 (Pub. L. 90-448) 42 U.S.C. 4001-4128, and 44 CFR 67.4(a).

These elevations, together with the flood plain management measures required by Section 60.3 of the program regulations, are the minimum that are required. They should not be construed to mean the community must change any existing ordinances that are more stringent in their flood plain management requirements. The community may at any time enact stricter requirements on its own, or pursuant to policies established by other Federal, State, or regional entities. These proposed elevations will also be used to calculate the appropriate flood insurance premium rates for new buildings and the contents and for the second layer of insurance on existing buildings and their contents.

Pursuant to the provisions of 5 USC 605(b), the Administrator, to whom authority has been delegated by the Director, Federal Emergency Management Agency, hereby certifies that the proposed flood elevation determinations, if promulgated, will not have a significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities. A flood elevation determination under Section 1363 forms the basis for new local ordinances, which, if adopted by a local community, will govern future construction within the flood plain area. The elevation determinations, however, impose no restriction unless and until the local community voluntarily adopts flood plain ordinances in accord with these elevations. Even if ordinances are adopted in compliance with Federal standards, the elevations prescribe how high to build in the flood plain and do not proscribe development. Thus, this action only forms the basis for future local actions. It imposes no new requirement; of itself it has no economic impact.

Lessees and owners of real property in the Town of Cohasset, Norfolk County, Massachusetts, are encouraged to review the preliminary Flood Insurance Study and Flood Insurance Rate Map available at the address cited above. Proposed base flood elevations along flood sources studied in detail are:

The evening program will feature the New England premiere of Jack McKenney's new film on the Sulu Sea in the Philippine Islands. Plus, other fine films by such notables as John Stoneman and Nick Caloyionis will be shown.

players. He has the intimidator-shot-blocker-rebounder, scorer in James Creed; the quarterback-Doug Flutie type scorer in Tony Bogarty; the defensive star and pass stealer and an additional scorer in David MacDonald, a fine shooter, extremely quick small forward in Bryan Edwards and the rebounder, defender and an added scoring threat in Phil Bernstein.

Coming off the bench is the sixth guard, the motivator and "extra tank of gas" in Bobby-Schultz. That's what Minelli calls the Super Six.

However, the added threat is the support from his bench of Floyd Hartwick, Todd Trautwein, Mark Crough, Andy Starmer, Dave Schumaker, Mike Smith, Tom Larson, Steven Fries and Tekeski Nito. Many of these players would be starters on other teams. They have accepted their roles, work hard in practice and root as hard as they can for their teammates.

To give the reader a better understanding of the players, four of the starters were interviewed for their perspective on "Eddie and the Cruisers."

TONY BOGARTY

Tony is rated one of the top 75 junior class basketball players in America. He's an All-American high school guard who is averaging 19 points per game with 12 assists and five steals. One-hundred and 50 college coaches have talked to Minelli about Tony's accomplishments.

Tony Bogarty

"We call him the Director because he choreographs the offense and defense and makes us go. He's improved his outside shooting tremendously and his academics have improved also. He just has a great future ahead of him."

Tony hit over 1,000 points a month ago and became Cohasset's all-time leading scorer. He made that a goal when the season started.

He began playing basketball at the Boys Club in Roxbury and continued to play until he found out his middle school didn't have a basketball team. After transferring to South Boston and Hyde Park, Tony found an opening in the Metco program in Grade 9 and life dramatically changed for him.

His family still lives in Roxbury. Monday-through Friday, he stays with Gino DiGiralamo in Cohasset and sees his family on weekends. If he goes home during the week he must awaken at 5 a.m. to catch a bus to Cohasset.

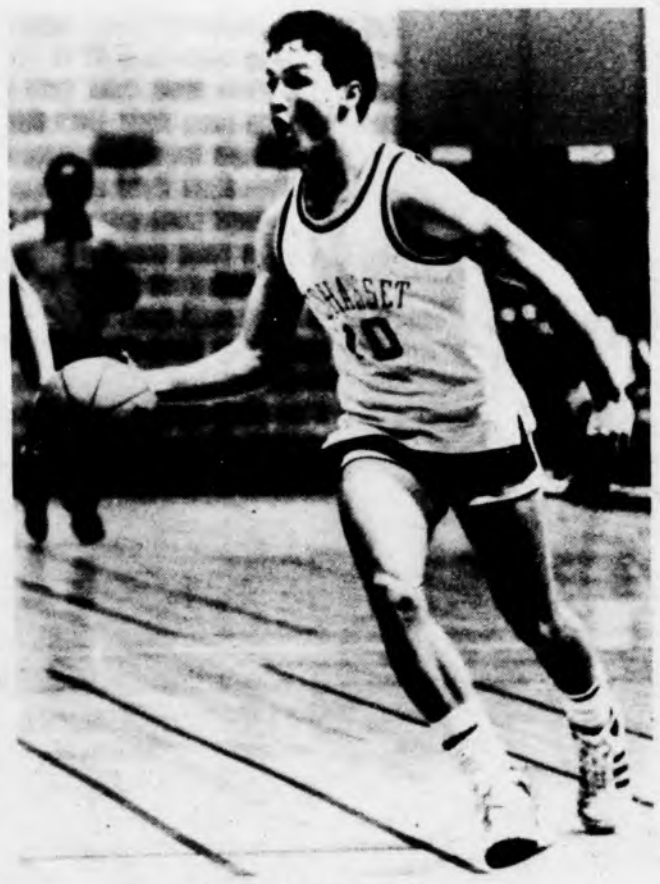
At first the quick pace bothered him but now he says everything is fitting into place. His goals are to discipline himself further, improve on his physical strength and jumping ability and also on his ball-handling.

"The goal we have is to play like a team. We're closer on and off the court. We help each other out," Tony said.

JIM CREED

Like Tony, James has a similiar schedule where he lives with the Schumaker family during the week or when practice or games means a late night.

Jim Creed



As a 6-5 junior center, Minelli says the potential of James Creed is unlimited. He is now averaging 18 points. 12 rebounds and seven blocked shots per game after only three years of organized ball.

"He is still learning and he is getting better and better each game. His value to us is not his scoring but his rebounding and playing defense. He gets that ball and starts our running.

"What James needs is more experience and consistency on offense. His success will depend on how hard he wants to work." But many colleges including Maryland, Villanova, Boston College and Notre Dame are already interested.

James says no one on the team feels like he has the burden of scoring 30 points or grabbing 20 rebounds. Certain players, he said, have certain roles and there are certain games if somebody is off, someone else picks up the slack.

Coming from Wheatly Middle School in Roxbury, James learned the game three years ago. He has found Cohasset an excellent school in which to learn and a nice community. Things have gone well for him here and "Coach Minelli has taught me a lot."

Dave McDonald

DAVID MACDONALD

This 5-11 senior guard broke the school record with 11 steals and he is averaging ten points per game with six rebounds and steals and five assists.

"There is no doubt in my mind that David is the most improved of any player I have ever coached. The strides he has made from junior to senior are incredible," said Minelli.

Usually other teams double team Creed and put one or two men on Bogarty. "They leave David alone and usually he buries that jumper. His shooting is a valuable key in our success. I think David will probably go into the Navy or Air Force.

"He's an honor student and his intelligence enhances his playing skills," Minelli said.

MacDonald felt last year's team was the best team he's ever been associated with because of the emotional, come from behind wins in the tournament game. "Against Medway we showed a lot of heart and to tie Spellman with one second remaining was something I'll never forget.

"This year we took on a lot of pressure as a team but not one kid dominated. We all shared in it together," he said.

MacDonald also credited a weight and running program as well as a basketball camp and soccer in the fall as keys to his basketball improvement this year.

PHIL BERNSTEIN

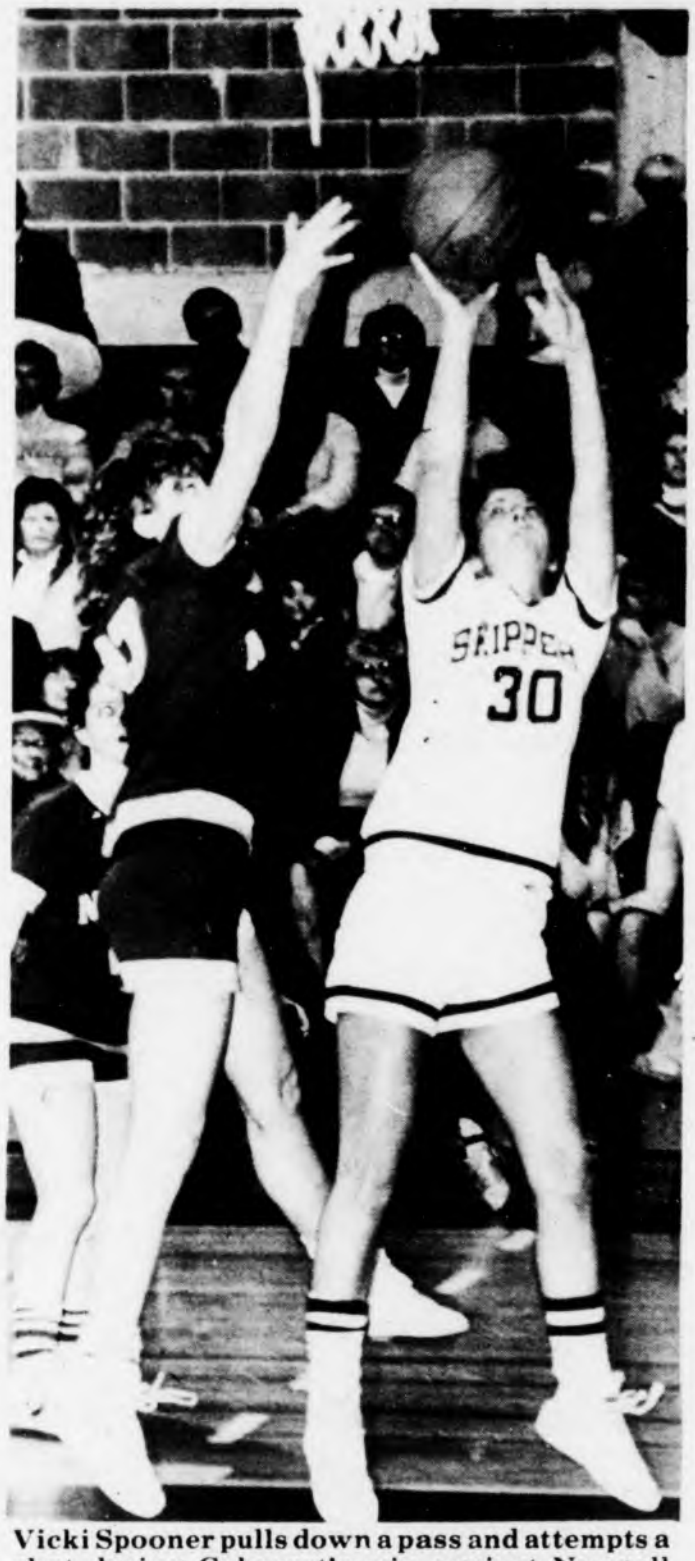
Coach Minelli was a bit disappointed when last year's captain and star forward David Barcomb graduated. He knew he needed a rebounding forward and someone who could play back up center for Creed.

Phil Bernstein

"Phil Bernstein has more than adequately replaced him. Once he realized he didn't have to play like Julius Erving and just play like Phil Bernstein, he came on like gangbusters. He has a great deal of confidence.

"I needed a power forward, someone who could grab five to six rebounds, score five to six points and have no turnovers. He's lived up to that bill. He's a great passer, an excellent free throw shooter and a good shooter.

"He's our Cedric Maxwell, taking the top offensive scorer on the other team. Phil has proved to be a gem. He's the missing piece of the puzzle. Phil Bernstein represents what this team is all about -sacrificing scoring but contributing hard work to other parts of the game.



Last summer Phil ran on the track and lifted weights. "I'm pleased with the overall performance. I am contributing and it's been very successful."

Both Dave and Phil agree they never thought the Cohasset basketball team would have reached such heights when they were sixth graders in 1979.

"But last year," (teammate) Matt Salerno told me, "you can be the best team Cohasset ever had," said Bernstein.

This is the team to beat !

'This will be their last hurrah', Fallon

His coaching days at CHS weren't always immersed in the limelight of victory. When Fallon began five years ago, finishing the season was a more realistic goal than grabbing a league title. That squad concluded their season with a 3-13 record. "Very weak" is how Fallon politely describes the results of his freshman coaching experience.

This year's team ended their regular season with a 17-3 record, and before Wednesday night's semi-final against Nauset, the girls had chalked up another two wins. If they take Wednesday's match, they will compete in the finals Friday night at Oliver Ames High School in Easton.

Fallon and his team are in the mood for a championship this week. It's their time, he states repeatedly.

Even if they don't take the tourney, they have compiled some impressive totals this year. Nineteen wins in one season are the most victories for any girls basketball team in Cohasset since the mid 1940s. If they grab Wednesday night's game, they'll bring home a new victory total to CHS.

The starting squad consist of guards Sarah Seavey and Janet DiGirolamo, forwards Tracey Fitzpatrick and Carla Lucas, and center Vicky Spooner. Together, these girls have played almost 70 varsity games at CHS, and ignited the support and earned the attention of the entire student body.

Let everybody know, that Eddie and the Cruisers aren't the only champions in this town.

With so many senior players on board, Fallon must be a bit anxious about the experience level of next year's squad. 'Obviously, there's going to be a drop off next year, but the junior varsity team this year is very strong. They were 17-1 this year, and 16-2 the year before. They too have played together for three years. I predict," he says with confidence, "that next year's team will do very well and we will qualify for the state tournament."

With talent so evident this season, the road to victory has been clear, according to their coach who also serves as physical education instructor at the high school.

"Sarah may be the best athlete we have on this team," he states. "She has a general ability and is very quick, and very good defensively. She plays well in the important game. Although she's an outstanding soccer player, and probably that's her first love, she has done very well in basketball."

Teammate Janet is also a third-year starter. "Two times Janet has been named to the South Shore League All-Stars," her coach proudly claims. "She was also a member of the Bay State Games last year. Janet is one of the top point guards in this area." Janet plans to continue her basketball playing when she attends Bridgewater College in the fall.

Carla has also been honored twice as a South Shore League All Star. Like her teammates, she has started every varsity game since her sophomore year, and was a Bay State Game team member last year. Coach Fallon rates Carla "probably the most valuable member of this year's team.

"She plays the point on all pressure defenses which is the toughest position to play. She plays the inside on much taller girls. Carla has averaged 14 points per game and is one of the top five scorers in the league. She plays well on both ends of the court," Fallon continues.

Tracey, he says, has played better than expected this year. "Offensively," he adds, " she is one of the better players in the South Shore League. She averages 15 points per game and has been a league all-star twice. Tracey is one of our better shooters." Tracey will be attending Wesleyan next year.

Vicky has not been the most successful shooter for Cohasset, but defensively Fallon tags her "our unknown quantity." Vicky played what her coach calls " a very good game against Norwell. At the end, she didn't have a lot of points. But when she plays well, the whole team does well." Vicky is a defensive specialist, according to her coach, who also labels his senior center "a very hard worker."

If the team succeeds Wednesday night, it's on to the finals. Teammate Carla Lucas describes the emotions experienced during tournament action. "During the Norwell game, we couldn't do anything the first half," she says. "We were very nervous and couldn't play our full court game."

What startled the girls out of their slump and onto victory? "The fact that if we didn't get our act together we were going to lose," she states.

Carla continues, " once you start playing, you forget about your nerves. You start running and let it flow in a fast-paced game. You forget that it's tournament play and that a crowd is watching you."

Despite the outcome, Fallon says this is a team that is capable of reaching for that tournament crown. "This is a very coachable team and a very good group. It's made it a lot easier for me. For the past three years I have watched them progress. This will be their last hurrah. They deserve it."

This the team to beat, according to odds-makers. The girls varsity team will likely be the winningest team in CHS history.

Cohasset Recreation report

Dog Obedience Classes

The Cohasset Recreation Department will offer three levels of instruction for Dog Obedience Classes to be taught by Ms. Laurie Ann Clevland. All classes will be held at the G.A.R. Hall, Scituate, and will begin Sunday, March 24. Beginner training classes will be held at 7 p.m.

The purpose of these classes will be to teach novice pet owners basic obedience and responsible pet ownership. Subjects ~~to be covered~~ are: proper use of voice, corrections, stay commands, getting the dog to come, heal, etc.

Helpful hints on dog ownership and responsibility will also be included. The obedience will include those exercises beneficial to the pet owner as well as those thinking about eventually showing their dogs obedience.

An intermediate/advanced class will be held at 8 p.m. This class is designed for dogs that have had some prior basic training or have completed the Recreation Dept. Beginner Class.

For above classes, owners are required to have their dogs equipped with a humane choke chain. The proper size of the chain is determined by measuring the dog's neck and adding four inches. Absolutely no spike collars will be allowed!! It is also strongly suggested that the handlers wear comfortable shoes and clothes for these sessions.

For all classes: the fee is $17 per dog for the eight week, one hour program. Dogs should be a minimum of 3 months of age, and there is no limit on maximum age. To register please call the Recreation Department office at 383-6791. Classes will be limited in size.

☐ Too many novels finish too long after the end.

☐ Two observations about plagiarism -- the first by T.S. Eliot: "Immature poets imitate; mature poets steal." But as Jules Feifer says, "Good swiping is an art in itself."

☐ A gambling axiom: A gentleman never bets on a sure thing. Oscar Wilde defined a gentleman as one who never harms another person unintentionally. Fred Allen had another version: "A gentleman never strikes a lady with his hat on." And now we hear from W.C. Fields: "I've never struck a woman in my life, not even my own mother."

☐ Sicily is a country where the money falls apart and you can't tear the toilet paper.

☐ And now we hear from Somerset Maugham: "The trouble with our young writers is that they are all in their 60's."

☐ Our friend Elvis Presley would probably agree with this observation: Anything that is too stupid to be spoken is sung."

Emotions Anonymous offers help from others

By Elisabeth Gorfinkle

The group first prayed for serenity.

Powerful, negative emotions had crippled their ability to lead productive, happy lives, they said.

Twenty-five had come together this week. Sometimes more and sometimes less gather on Sunday afternoons at Quincy City Hospital in a room usually used for Alcoholics Anonymous meetings.

Some of them were reformed alcoholics. Others had been addicted to drugs, food, gambling, countless compulsive behaviors. Almost all were chain smokers.

They shared a deep sense of loss and a need to reach out for help. They were members of the new Quincy chapter of Emotions Anonymous.

The purpose of Emotions Anonymous (EA) is to help people of all ages and from all walks of life to improve their emotional health.

Sharing and identifying with others, while retaining anonymity, is the premise of anonymous programs.

Only EA members are allowed to conduct meetings. Medical, social or religious professionals are prohibited from participating in the program, unless they are simply EA members.

The program is non-denominational, non-profit and non-professional. Chapters have no affiliations and are self-supporting through membership donations. Members neither receive counseling nor do they socialize, the literature states.

EA is adapted from Alcoholics Anonymous methodology. Members are urged to apply EA's philosophy to their lives, by using AA's 12-step process, said the chapter coordinator.

The coordinator did not reveal her name or her motivations for founding a chapter, because the 11th of the 12 traditions held by EA reads: "members must always maintain personal anonymity when dealing with the press."

The coordinator did say that the Quincy chapter is the South Shore's first. It was founded last Oct. 7 and currently provides an open discussion group every Sunday at 3 p.m. on the third floor of the hospital's Hunting 3 building, 114 Whitwell St.

Possibly in the near future, Quincy's program will expand to include a more intensive 12-step meeting one night a week. She also spoke of other members probably opening a Braintree chapter in the next few months.

"EA started in Saint Paul, Minn. in 1971 by a group of people who had been members of another 12-step program," she said. "Now at least 1,500 chapters exist in the United States and throughout the world. Ten chapters are in Massachusetts. (They include) one in Belmont, one in Watertown, one in Wellesley, three in Worcester, one in Reading, one in Lowell and ,of course, one in Quincy."

At the beginning of each meeting, members recite the 12 suggested steps of EA. The steps describe a process of turning troubled lives over to "God as we understand Him."

Week after week, members use the EA text as a guide for self-examination and as a helper in making amends for destructive behavior.

For example, the introduction of chapter five helps members come to terms with their illness: "I believe emotional illness can cripple us mentally, physically, and spiritually.

"Emotional illness is no respecter of intelligence, education, wealth or social status.

"It affects not only ourselves but those who live with us and love us. Emotional illness becomes a family illness."

During the hour and a half of discussion this reporter witnessed, one member after the next was acknowledged. They made confessions or gave short comments. They told each other they did identify, but they didn't compare or criticize.

"I think it takes a lot of courage for anyone to concede he has a problem," said the member acting as moderator.

He said he has been "sober" for seven years and is also a member of AlAnon, Narcotics Anonymous and AA, because he believes in giving himself the best of care.

"I lived a glamorous life to others (as a successful performer), but to me it was rotten, because that was the way I felt inside. I was selfish, indulgent, spoiled -- in a word greedy. I lost two families as the cost," he said.

"Many people procrastinate until the pain outweighs the pleasure. Now I live a comparatively dull life. I'm not happy with the successful career or the awards, because when I go back to that hotel room with that award, that's all I have. I am still alone."

But he said he has gained a trememdous amount of self-respect by learning to become an honest, giving man.

An important EA slogan is: "Know thyself -- be honest."

Members shared their difficulties in trying to live the EA program one day at a time, 24 hours a day.

An older man who has been out of work for 14 months said, "I shake hands with everything -- the loneliness, the anger. I talk to myself, and I get answers."

These EA members were learning to shake hands with quite a bit of pain. One woman was suffering from chronic agoraphobic panic attacks (fear of open places), which were destroying her work record. Another woman was grieving the loss of her entire immediate family. And still another was struggling to find the inner strength to cope with life without drugs.

Abnormal fear, depression, self-pity, resentment, remorse, jealousy, envy, guilt, tension, boredom, loneliness, grief, low self-esteem, failure, withdrawal, anger were many of the recurring themes in the discussion.

Though some newer members expressed feelings of despair, some veteran members said they had finally found contentment.

For instance, the man who has learned to shake hands with his life said, "Now I know happiness comes from within. I don't have much, but I don't want much. I am comfortable with myself. I put the spirit of God in me, and I let Him run the show."

According to EA literature, many doctors, psychiatrists, psychologists, counselors, clergymen and other professionals in the social services refer people to EA.

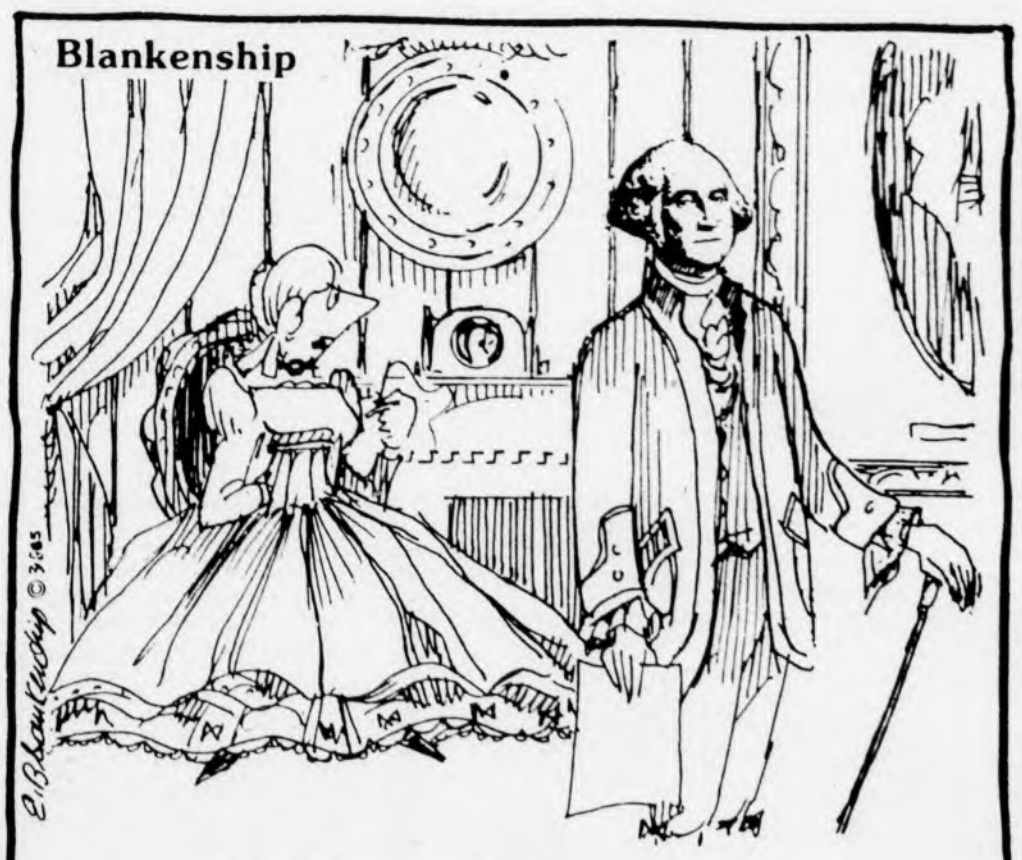
EA headquarters in Minnesota will assist in finding nearby chapters or creating new ones. The EA members who expressed interest in starting a Braintree chapter said, ' ll it takes is two persons and a coffee pot to have a meeting."

To contact support groups at Quincy City Hospital, 114 Whitwell St., Quincy, call 773-6100, ext. 218. There is free admission to all groups and all are welcome.

The following programs are offered:

Alcoholics Anonymous, open meeting daily at 10:30 a.m.;

AA 12-step meeting, Mondays at 7:30 p.m.;



Adult Children of Alcoholics on Saturdays at 8 p.m.;

AlAnon Sundays at 8 p.m.;

Emotions Anonymous on Sundays at 3 p.m.;

Narcotics Anonymous on Thursdays at 7:30 p.m.

Some good and bad news for Choc-a-holics

First, the good news. Choc-a-holics may take comfort in the findings of doctors and nutritionists that confections are carbohydrates which the body needs and their consumption, as part of a balanced diet, should not be a source of guilt--if done in moderation. So, now that you are free to indulge, waste no time in subscribing to "Chocolatier," for its sinfully tempting array of recipes and pictures are guaranteed to make one drool. Maggie Manley gave me her copy of the Christmas issue of the quarterly which began publication last year. Photography is beautiful and an article on Switzerland features classic Swiss desserts. A festive open house party offers holiday recipes and the Christmas Jewel Box Cake is a work of art. One article featuring thoughts on chocolate by elementary school youngsters included the remarks: "Chocolate gives me joy feels all over . . . chocolate drinks feel good if your throat gets orangitis and everything would not be worth anything without chocolate." Maggie says this recipe is excellent and it's not hard to believe of

CHOCOLATE WALNUT TRUFFLES

1 c. (5 oz.) semisweet chocolate morsels
1 egg yolk
Grated rind of 1 small orange
1 c. plus 3T finely chopped walnuts
2T unsalted butter
2 1/2 tsp. cognac or brandy

1. In double boiler, melt chocolate over hot water.
2. Turn chocolate into bowl and add other ingredients except 1 c. of walnuts. Beat together for 2 to 3 min., until well combined. Refrigerate until firm, approx. 1 hour.
3. Scatter remaining nuts over sheet of waxed paper. Shape the truffle mixture into 1" balls and roll in walnuts. Place in paper cups to serve. Yields 18 - 24.

Now, the bad news. A single caramel cordial from a Whitman's Sampler contains 49 calories, a Hershey's Kiss 25, a mint Life Saver has 7 and a Sugar Daddy, 220. Milky Way bars have 270 calories, M&M's, 240 calories in a 1.69 ounce pkg., a jelly bean, 4 calories and a pamphlet listing these and other name-brand candy products--200 in all--is yours by sending a stamped, self-addressed business size envelope to Calorie Confectionary Guide, Suite 1900, 40 W. 57th St., New York, N.Y. 10019. Rosie's Boston bakery sells an amazing five thousand fresh browines each week and they have been voted the "Best Brownie in America." Amazingly easy to prepare, it is suggested that these fudgy brownies be made a day ahead to ensure proper texture and flavor. Frost the next day and serve these 16

ROSIE'S CHOCOLATE BROWNIES

4 squares unsweetened chocolate
1 stick unsalted butter
1 1/4 c. plus 3T sugar
1 tsp. vanilla extract
3 large eggs, lightly beaten
3/4 c. all-purpose flour
Fudge Frosting: 1 1/2 oz. unsweetened chocolate, melted
1/4 c. sugar
1/4 c. evaporated milk, room temperature
16 pecan halves, for decoration, optional

Preheat oven to 350 and butter 8" square pan. Melt chocolate with butter in double boiler over barely simmering water. Cool for 5 min. In a bowl, using an electric mixer, beat together the chocolate mixture and sugar for 1 to 2 min., completely combining. Add vanilla and lightly beaten eggs and mix only until combined. Add flour and beat until mixture is totally blended and has a shiny, velvety look, 1 min., or less. Spread batter evenly in pan. Bake for 20 to 25 min., until a very thin crust forms on top and a knife inserted in center comes out clean or with a moist crumb. Do not overbake. Cool in pan to room temperature. Cover when cool and set aside overnight.

Frosting: In blender, combine melted chocolate, sugar and evaporated milk. Process for 3 to 5 min. until mixture is firm and shiny. (The sound of the blender will change when the mixture has firmed up.) Frost brownies with thin layer of icing. Cut into 2" squares and top each with pecan half.

Smothered in whipped cream, this dessert is best served warm and the thin crust which forms on the top to puff up like a souffle, falls slightly during cooking, yielding 6 to 8 servings.

CHOCOLATE WHISKEY PUDDING

1 c. sifted all-purpose flour
1 1/4 c. granulated sugar
5T unsweetened cocoa powder
2 tsp. baking powder
Pinch of salt
2T unsalted butter, melted
1/2 c. milk
1 tsp. vanilla extract
1/2 c. light brown sugar, firmly packed
1/4 c. whiskey

Preheat oven to 350. In large bowl, combine flour, 2/3 c. of sugar, 2T of cocoa, baking powder and salt. Mix thoroughly. Stir in melted butter, milk and vanilla. Mix until smooth. Spray a 1 1/2 qt. souffle dish or ovenproof bowl with nonstick vegetable coating. In a bowl, combine remaining sugar, remaining 3T cocoa and the brown sugar. Sprinkle mixture evenly over the batter. In a small bowl, combine whiskey with 3/4 c. water and pour over pudding. Bake for 35 min., or until thin crust forms on top. Remove from oven and invert pudding onto a serving platter or spoon into bowls directly from the baking dish. Serve warm with whipped cream.

PATCHES by Lois MARTIN

These boots weren't made for walking

by Lois Martin

Too paltry, some would say, to claim as a victory. Certainly veteran joggers of awesome miles would supress snickers, if they were kind.

But I thought it was an almighty big deal to walk all the way to work. A cohort measured the distance as being only a scant 3.4 miles. But not in my book. Not to hear me tell it, according to my strengthened thighs, my blistered feet.

The walk was a disciplinary mood. My attitude, I'd noted Sunday, was poor and that manifested itself in an eating habit that started early and stayed up late.

So the next morning at 6:30 I remanded me to the roadways as a punitive measure.

PATCHES

Shoes. I don't have any that are made for other than clattering or sloshing around errands. My sneakers aren't comfortable and they look funny. So I settled on a pair of short boots that are lousy at being boots but are good at being comfortable. And I was off.

The school buses were on route to pick up the gatherings of kids at the stops. It's bloomin' windy where I live, warmish for February but nippy nonetheless.

I was barely on Ferry Street before I discovered a serious error. Cold weather combined with a brisk wind makes one's nose run. To rectify the situation I had three shreds of a former Kleenex. They were inadequate to the task and the spare pair of pantyhose in my purse grew to look like a handkerchief.

Ferry Street is an exciting highway on which to walk. It is vulnerable to water main breaks. Consequently, it has its ruptures and crevices. There have been times I've thought the town should charge to drive on the street. Nobody should experience such danger and thrills in a ride without paying.

No sidewalks are on the road. And when you get near Sonny Oxner's garage (30 minutes), you shouldn't be on the road unless you're fast enough on your feet to jump in the bushes to avoid traffic coming around those corners.

While people are in ured to runners, they view as somewhat suspect a person who is walking alone toward a place in the morning.

If I had looked sweaty in a warmup suit or something, I'd have been more in keeping. But I was charging down the highway at one of my better clips and one doesn't do that today.

It wasn't that I was trying to set a time record. My goal was only to get there on foot. But I became more competitive with my watch as I got closer. A friend who was going the other way stopped when he recognized me. He could only assume my car was crippled somewhere on the road.

I took advantage of our three minutes visit to shake the sand out of my boots. And I subtracted the lost time from the total.

The day was growing warmer, beautiful this town. And the grubby leftover of winter was not so visible as it sometimes seems in April. There are remnants of Sunday newspapers but clearly fewer cans and bottles before that bill I voted for and have cursed as an errand ever since.

I strode purposefully past a mother who waited for the bus with her daughter. "Who is that woman," said the child. I would have told her the "Lone Stranger". But I didn't want to interrupt my stride. My thighs and I had it moving and I wondered if maybe when I got to the office I shouldn't be walked around the barn like other mares.

Streaming down my last hill I did the straight-away asap. I walked through the door smug with success, with a time of 62 minutes. I hadn't smashed my fresh from Florida orange. And I'd learned a lot about the town.

For one thing there's a bird's nest between Blueberry and Bayberry Road. I don't know if it's last year's. I suppose so. But what with housing problems, it wouldn't hurt to drive carefully near there.

The best bounty of all, though, came when a neighbor brought me official looking running shoes that night . . . "just like Bill Rogers wears." Finding something to wear with royal blue and yellow sneakers will be challenging but I've got time till warm weather spurs me again.

About getting home that day . . .I walked about one mile and was on the verge of throwing myself across the highway when a friend came by, turned her car around and took me home. There is mercy.

And there is ingenuity. The next day I cut 57 minutes out of my time by driving to work.

BEACON Hill Roll CALL

With legislative hearings still underway and hundreds of bills yet to be printed, the House and Senate both held informal sessions during Feb.25-March 1, and there were no roll calls.

"Beacon Hill Roll Call" previews several major bills which have been filed, or are about to be filed, by Gov. Dukakis for consideration by the 1985 Legislature. Some were filed last year but never made it through the complete legislative process and are again targeted by the administration as high priority bills for this year.

FISCAL 1986 BUDGET—In January, Governor Dukakis unveiled his proposed $8.69 billion state budget for fiscal 1986. The budget is up 6.8 percent or $585 million over projected spending for the current year.

Appropriations for human services programs are up $300 million and overall spending for new and expanded programs total $250 million—80 percent of which the administration says would be absorbed in savings by state agencies.

New budget initiatives include a one time $65 million tax cut; $65 million for public education reform; a $5 million increase in scholarship assistance; a three percent increase for public retirees; and a $10 million investment to combat child abuse and neglect.

TAX CUT—The Governor's budget includes a one time $65 million tax cut in the form of a $200 increase in each personal income tax exemption claimed by a taxpayer. Administration officials say the cut, which will realize a savings of $44 for a family of four or an elderly couple, will be paid for out of an expected $137 million surplus this year. Some Republicans say the surplus is closer to $400 million and indicate they will propose a three year phase out of the 7.5 percent surtax.

LOCAL AID—The House and Senate have already overwhelmingly approved non-binding resolutions, proposed by Governor Dukakis, declaring the legislature's intent to distribute approximately $156.5 million in increased local aid to cities and towns.

Attempts by some legislators to increase the amount, change the distribution formula, and make several other changes were defeated in both branches.

EDUCATION—About a month ago, Dukakis unveiled his new four year, $219 million proposal to reform the state's public school system. Under the proposal, the state would earmark $65 million each of the first three years and $20 million in the fourth year for education.

Controversial provisions include a call for an $18,000 minimum teacher salary if locally approved; mandatory basic skills testing of all students; annual evaluations of teachers and administrators; and Equal Education Opportunity Grants for school systems.

Several other versions of education reform bills have been filed including one by the former House Education Committee chairman and another by the present chairman. The House passed a version of an education bill last year, but it never reached the Senate floor.

DAY CARE—This Dukakis initiative is designed to expand day care facilities in the state and more closely regulate those who care for children. The $17.8 million package includes $7.5 million to raise the salaries of day care workers by 15 percent; $6.5 million for additional state subsidized care; and $400,000 for more staffers in the Office of Children.

WORKER'S COMP—Several bills are expected to be filed this year to reform the state's troubled $700 million a year worker's compensation system. For years, business and labor have argued over specific provisions of any reform bill.

Last year the Legislature did not act on a version of the bill drafted by the Commerce and Labor Committee near the end of the session. Two weeks ago, Dukakis filed a new bill designed to increase benefits, streamline administration, and accelerate the claims process. He said the complicated bill would initially add from $100 million to $125 million to the compensation system, but that there would be substantial savings in future years.

MASSBANK—The bill creating a Massachusetts Development Bank to finance improvements of the state's highways and bridges is apparently near ready for submission to the Legislature. The highly controversial bill never made it to the floor of the House or Senate last year.

PRESUMPTIVE SENTENCING—A Dukakis bill which passed the House last year and was not acted upon by the Senate would recodify the criminal statutes in the state and impose a system of presumptive sentencing.

Dukakis has filed a similar bill this year which among other things would limit the discretion of judges by requiring them to sentence from within specific ranges for certain crimes or to explain in writing their reasons for going outside the ranges.

Some critics claim the bill would add burdens to an overcrowded and mismanaged prison system while others charge it does not take into consideration the needs of juveniles and minorities.

SEAT BELTS—As part of an auto insurance package, Dukakis has proposed that Massachusetts join three other states which require motorists to wear seat belts. Under the bill motorists could not be stopped for violating the law, but if pulled over on another suspected violation, would be subject to a $24 fine if they or front seat passengers are not wearing seat belts.

Sponsors say the bill will save lives and reduce auto insurance rates while opponents say this is another example of the government intruding in people's lives.

Transportation conundrum, part V

The arguments and observations contained in the previous four articles in this series are complex. Here, in condensed form, is a summary of the 16 major points I have made.

1. Already bad 25 years ago, our transportation has continued to worsen as in the last quarter century the South Shore has been the fastest growing part of Massachusetts.

2. Both economically and environmentally Rte. 3 is the problem. But bad as it has become, it nevertheless remains a better road than Rte. 1 north of Boston and Rte. 2 northwest of Boston. Yet commutes on those roads are significantly easier than comparable commutes on Rte. 3. The plain and simple difference: the North Shore and the northwest suburbs have an excellent commuter rail system.

3. Few today are aware that until 1938 there were regular passenger trains to nearly every town southeast of Boston. All passenger service on these lines was abandoned between 1938 and 1959. It was thus that an entire region of the state, including its main summer tourist attraction, came to depend on an underdesigned Rte. 3.

4. M.B.T.A. service to Quincy opened in 1971, and has contributed importantly to an economic revival there. But, and it is the "but" on which the rest of Southeastern Massachusetts now founders, the construction of the Red Line obliterated the rail right-of-way that was the only "trunk" through which all South Shore and Cape Cod trains had to pass on the way to Boston.

5. Terminating future commuter rail service in Braintree would probably not be successful because the "break in transportation" thus created would, for the average commuter, take too much of his time.

6. Extending the Red Line past Braintree would also probably fail because such a plan would require too many time-consuming stops. The average rider commuting from beyond Rte. 128 would not be enticed out of his car.

7. For commuter rail to relieve congestion on Rte. 3 in a major way, there need to be two rail systems operating simultaneously. The inner suburbs to Rte. 128 are well-served by rapid transit such as the Red Line. The outer suburbs and more distant points are better served by conventional commuter rail. The commuter rail system must bypass the Red Line by expressing from the terminus of the Red Line to South Station. Only by so-doing can it attract commuters in sufficient numbers to relieve congestion on Rte. 3.

8. The crux of the rail component of our transportation conundrum is that when the Red Line was built through Quincy and Braintree, the previous four-track right-of-way was narrowed to a width of only three sets of rails. Two are used by the M.B.T.A., leaving only one for future commuter rail development. While limited commuter rail service could operate in both directions using one track in the nine miles between Braintree and Boston, it could probably not do so with trains running frequently enough to put a major dent in the overall problem.

9. Therefore, due to the historic mistake of narrowing the rail right-of-way, the restoration of commuter rail service will be far more costly than it would otherwise have been. It will probably approach $300 million.

10. The alternative to the railroad is the road. Rte. 3 could be rebuilt to specifications that would allow it to handle its volume of traffic safely and conveniently and without the assistance of a commuter rail system. New Jersey, Connecticut, and Ontario have turned similarly outmoded six-lane roads into 12-lane roads, and without the assistance of the railroad, 12 lanes is probably what would be required between Boston and Rte. 128 to handle present and future volume efficiently. South of Rte. 128 to the Canal, six or eight lanes would be sufficient.

11. Reconstruction of Rte. 3 along these lines would probably approach $2 billion in cost, it would require landtakings, and it would create further traffic problems on local roads and at interchanges. But it could be done, and it is the alternative if the decision is made to forego bringing back the railroad.

12. The probable cost comparison is $300 million plus a continuing operating subsidy to bring back the railroad versus $1 to $2 billion plus further traffic and environmental problems to rebuild Rte. 3 to handle the burden of commutation efficiently by itself.

13. With federal budgetary constraints, neither of these solutions to the problem (nor some combination of them) will likely be implemented before 1990. That is all the more reason to develop a comprehensive master plan, one Southeastern Massachusetts can unite around and lobby for in the years to follow.

14. In the interim we should manage the roads we have better than we have. We should also rethink and replan both M.B.T.A. and Plymouth & Brockton bus service, seeking to bring about buses that express directly to Boston from individual Southeastern Massachusetts communities. We should consider subsidizing some Plymouth & Brockton service as a cost-effective alternative to the M.B.T.A.

15. Development on all present and former rail rights of way should be halted permanently. These rights-of-way should be set aside in perpetuity, their use or non-use to be determined in the future.

16. For economic reasons we should develop a small commercial airport that allows companies to move personnel in and out of the region without relying exclusively on Logan Airport. The Naval Air Station at South Weymouth and Plymouth Airport are possible sites for such an airport.

CONCLUSION

With our economic and environmental future at stake, with hundreds of millions, perhaps billions needing to be spent, we have got to be right when we undertake to build our 21st century tranportation system. If we aren't "right," if we fritter away funds on useless projects, we burden our children with finding the remedy, and we condemn ourselves to the ridicule of history. The first, vital step that needs to be taken is the most thoroughgoing transportation debate in our history. Only with an airing of all sides, aspects and philosophies related to the problem at hand we can hope to come up with a plan we dare submit to the judgment of history.

This series has been an attempt to get the debate going, nothing more. I will be terribly disappointed, therefore, if I do not produce cantankerous letters and other forms of controversy and criticism. The absence of a good quarrel will only mean that my sainted readership is asleep on the job, and if that is the case there is little hope that the South Shore in its grave transportation need can overcome the many obstacles ahead.

Let's hear from you.

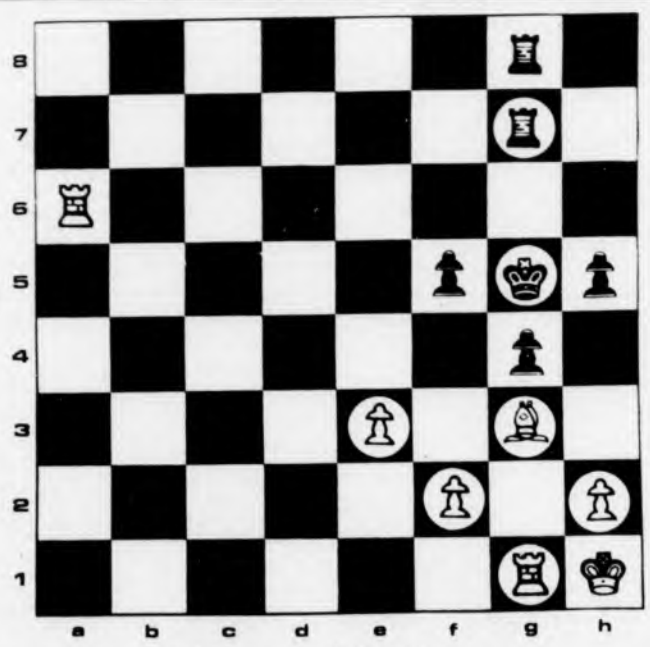
Marathon Match controversy

By Chris Bernstein

How is it that after five months and 48 games the world title match has not produced a winner? The answer boils down to one four letter word, FIDE (The International Chess Federation). Founded in Paris in 1924, FIDE became the governing body when the USSR joined in 1946.

FIDE made the rules which allowed such a match to occur and when it seemed like it might end unfavorably for the champion, they simply cancelled the match. You would think that 60 years is enough time to establish a format for a world title match that is fair to both players!



Now let's give credit where credit is due, to the participants of this "Marathon Match." So, across the ocean and across all political barriers, I dedicate this poem, (courtesy of D.R. Williams), to the world champion, Anatoly Karpov, and the contender, Garry Kasparov:

May every game be a winning one —
Queen a pawn each time your able.
And when your game's a hopeless mess,
Let your knee upset the table!

You must remember as each game goes by,
Whether playing black or white,
That somewhere I'll be in a game
In a pickle just as tight!

So hit him with a gambit —
Defend with the Sicilian:
You may draw or even lose one,
But I bet you win a million!

I'm glad I'm not the other guy
While his king just stands there bleeding!
I'd like the New World's champ to Know I send him Yuletides' Greeting!

Writing samples from Deer Hill School

By Jacob Powell

I'm Inspector O'Hara of the San Francisco police force. I've been assigned to investigate and solve various crimes that have been booming around the city. Most of the crimes were committed in the Marina area.

8 a.m. — I knock on Florence Babbitt's door. Ms. Babbitt is a teller at a bank recently robbed by the mysterious criminal. I started giving her the twenty questions routine when suddenly my questions were interrupted by a bottle of flaming napalm thrown through the window. I left the 1633 North Point Street address very abruptly in pursuit of the thug who had disturbed my questioning. Before I got into my car, I looked up at Ms. Babbitt's window . . . the flames were out! I could start after the thug without the fear of Ms. Babbitt being hurt also. Down the traffic-jammed streets the criminal drove; but with lights out and sirens blaring, I caught up quite quickly. But then a bit of misfortune happened to the young thug. As he was fleeing from me, he ran out of road and flew right off Pier 18.

Fortunately for us, we found an important note:
Portfolio
In Emergency blanket
Remember!
3rd blanket
9th crease.

I broke the mind-boggling code with a bit of common sense. In an old spy movie I had seen, the spies read the first letter in every row vertically. And as I read those letters it simply stated: Pier 39, and the message itself said something, too. What a lucky break! I quickly got on the clue. But when I got to Pier 39 it seemed quiet, too quiet. As I walked down the pier my bad luck prevailed, and I was hit over the head with a club of some sort. The next thing I knew I was tied by my ankles to the carousel. I just barely saw a man turn on the carousel. It was Mandrak Xavier, the big crimelord on top of all wanted lists.

The back of my trenchcoat started getting dirty. This situation called for a little more than brute strengh and force. Instead, finesse and marksmanship were needed. I took my hat and threw it at the large handle which started the carousel. It hit the handle with the lightness of a feather, but enough to move the handle the other way and stop the carousel. I untied myself and ran to the third fire blanket on the pier and suddenly bullets started spraying everywhere. I pulled out my .38 snub and started returning fire. I managed to pick off Xavier's henchmen, but he himself was still firing. I had to reload my .38 and I heard footsteps coming closer. I had an odd feeling that someone was behind me. And with the speed of a hare, I hit Xavier with the butt of my gun. I called the police to pick up Xavier and his men. I went for the portfolio and found it no other place than the 3rd fire blanket, 9th crease.

Xavier was put in the slammer for various crimes. When O'Hara's on the job, the jail starts fillin'!

Messy Room Blues

By Noel Roma

The day my mother opened my bedroom door
I knew my nightmare had just begun
Her hair stood on end, her eyes rolled in her head,
Her mouth dropped open, and out rolled her tongue.
Wringing her hands, she cried, "Oh, how could you?
How could you make such a mess and live like a pig!"
Somehow I knew I was in for a long,long lecture about being neat,
And it was going to be big!
She ranted and raved as she hurdled a pile of junk
And grabbing me by my braids yanked me from my top bunk.
I flew from the toy-covered bed, rolled through three months of old wash
And landed on my head.
"How can you live like that? There is bubblegum stuck to the wall!"
It's a miracle you can get out of this room at all!"
Yelled my mom with a stamp, then she cried,
"There is underwear draped over your lamp!"
There were gym socks stuck in each corner
Of the ceiling
And my mother lamented that the odor
Sent her reeling.
The stuff on my desk was piled three miles high
"Why," my mother asked, "Why?"
There was a mouse living in my bookcase, a gross ugly something
Under my bed, and carpenter ants in my closet door,
My mother gingerly sat on my bed and moaned,
"I can't take it any more!"
The lecture went on for what seemed like ten days,
Until my mother had said
The same thing
In 2,000 different ways.

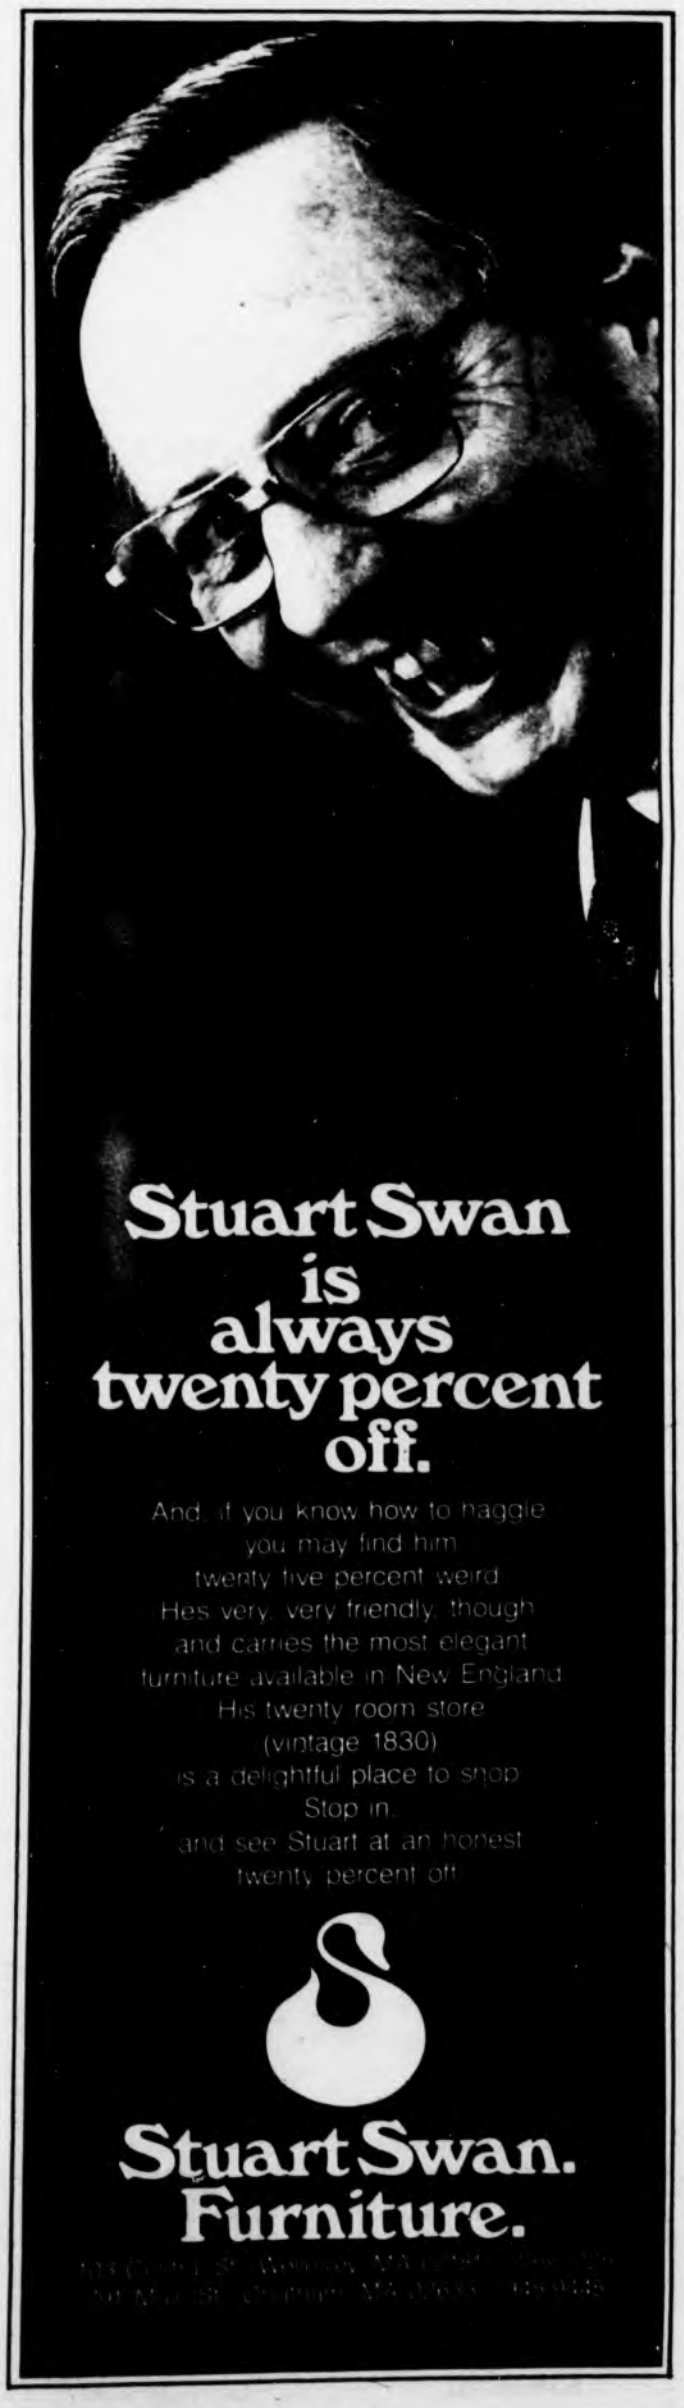
LWV looks at future growth of town of "unique homes" found in the community, and different settings for those homes.

The mean average cost of a home in Cohasset is more that $162,000 she noted. Cohasset has experienced the highest increase in sale prices in the South Shore, she noted, in recent years. There are now 15 Cohasset homes for sale commanding a price of over $100,000; and 15 homes selling between $200,000 and $1 million.



Condominium living is popular in Cohasset, Ekberg added, and the prices of those homes range from $140,000 to $200,000.

The one group Cohasset is not accommodating, she said, is the low and lower middle income people. "So, the young person who has lived here, gets married and can't afford to come back. There is not enough property and the prices are too high. The only choice is to wait until they have established equity," she added.

Tom Cook, a member of Drainage Advisory Committee and the Watershed Protection Area Committee, explained the responsibilities and goals of those two advisory groups. According to Cook, the drainage committee looks into the issue of whether available buildable land encroaches upon drainage features of that land. The potential problem, he said, is the elimination of storage of rainfall in that land, the increased rate of water flow from the property, and the impact of increased impervious matter upon that land.

Although changes suggested by the drainage committee to the zoning bylaw will not be ready for the April Town Meeting, there are alterations under consideration. These changes, he noted, would ensure adequate engineering analysis of the proposed development, provide consistent review of the development by town boards, provide review procedures not currently under the jurisdiction of any other board in town.

In a question and answer period, several audience members discussed the need for a town engineer. Although Bassett and Cook both said their committees strongly support a professional engineer employed by the town, there is currently no available finances for the position. Rather than hiring a professional planning company to develop a master plan for future growth, Bassett said she would personally favor employment of a town engineer. Cook noted that communication between various town board and committees is difficult, and having one central person would help alleviate many of those difficulties.

Clift Rodgers Free Library has loyal following

by Sheila Carney Hopkins

In a quaint setting operates the Clift Rodgers Library on a Monday morning. Barbara Burnham, assistant librarian, tends to the filing in the pleasant slack from brisk business at the Marshfield Hills library. (Carol McCann)

It's out of the way — up on Pleasant St. in the Hills section of town. It's only open three hours a day — never after 4. And parking is limited to a dirt shoulder on the side of the road. Yet despite these inconveniences, the Clift Rodgers Free Library has a loyal following with regular users coming from as far as Weymouth and Kingston.

Once inside, the attraction isn't hard to see. The collection of approximately 10,000 books is housed in a bright, cozy room on the first floor of the three story white building. Architectural style is hard to pinpoint, but it is typical of those built in the late 1700's. Shiny hardwood floors, wooden bookshelves and the 100-year-old pictures of Mr. and Mrs. Clift Rodgers make the reader feel he has slipped back in time.

A bench on the front porch allows visitors to sit, read and watch the world pass by on nice days. On dreary ones, two armchairs in front of a working fireplace provide a haven for those wishing to spend a quiet afternoon with a good book. Children can play on the floor with wooden toys or look through the low shelves of children's books. It's a scene that would probably warm the heart of Clift Rodgers if he could see it.

The son of Luther Rodgers, Clift was born in 1806 in Marshfield. He was a self-made man who eventually controlled a large and prosperous leather business in partnership with his friend, Lysander Richards. He built a fine white house at the corner of Main and Pleasant which still stands.

Besides being a successful businessman, he was a family man, raising his brother's five children when they were orphaned.

In 1897, possibly knowing his life was nearing an end, he asked Richards to organize an association to establish a free library and hall. To fund the project, he set aside $5000 for the building and endowment.

Rodgers took a personal interest in the planning of the library and selected a site for the building on Old Main Street, across from the current Christian Science Church. The deed for this land was signed March 13, 1897.

Before his death exactly one month later, he planned the building. He put the front on a rise to make it more imposing and left room at the sides and back for expansion.

In the bequest for the library, he specified that the hall could be rented for any worthy purpose and this rental became an important source of income for the library. The waxed wood floors lent themselves well to dances and stories say the gentlemen used to stash whiskey among the books to imbibe during the evening.

The library remained at the Old Main location for the first half of the century. However, in 1950, a major move took place.

In 1949, the North Community Church approached the library board with a proposal to switch buildings. The Church Community Housing was in a small building on Pleasant. This building had formerly been Tilden's store. (The building itself had originally been across the street but was moved sometime around the turn of the century). The church was beginning to feel the need for a larger community house and the library building on Old Main appeared to meet their needs. The library didn't need all the space it had, so moving to smaller quarters wouldn't present a problem. Besides, the Old Main location was closer to the church while the Pleasant site was better, more centralized location for a library.

To sweeten the deal, the church was willing to donate $500 for the purchase of new books and supply parishoners to move books and furniture from one building to the other.

The library board agreed the exchange would benefit both parties and voted the move. However, the Rodgers and Richard heirs weren't so accomodating. They resented moving the library from the site personally selected and the building personally planned by Rodgers and started court action to prevent the move. But after much negotiation, things were resolved and the exchange took place in August, 1950.

It is in this building on Pleasant the the current Clift Rodgers library is housed.

Today's library collection leans heavily toward fiction. This is not a reference library. In fact, except for the two armchairs and a miniature version in the children's area, there are no tables and chairs. There isn't even a card catalog in evidence. This is a library for pleasure readers, for those who like to look through the shelves and find interesting books to take home to read at leisure. Of course, anyone who wishes a particular title and can't find it need only ask the librarian. If the book is out in circulation, your name will be added to the short waiting list. If the library doesn't own the book, it will be purchased if several people request it.

Because of the limited shelf space, librarian Lois Geary is constantly weeding out less popular titles to make room for new acquisitions. In general, books that don't circulate get taken off the shelves and stored in the cellar until the annual used book sale on Memorial Day. Non-fiction has a shorter shelf-life than fiction because the material often becomes obsolete. Lack of demand is also the criteria for removing fiction works. Geary said that judgment of worth also enters into the decision. She said they have some dating back to 1900 that doesn't circulate, but "we're going to keep it because it's important."

Many patrons find the availability of current bestsellers the main attraction of the library. Geary said if she gets several calls for a new book, she will purchase it. Those requesting the purchase get first chance to read the new selection while a waiting list is started for others. The list is almost always short, rarely more than 4 or 5 names, so readers won't need to wait more than a few weeks for the book to become available.

Books are checked out for a week at a time, but there are no fines for late returns. Geary said they really have no trouble getting the books back. In fact, some people will bring the library books back and donate a used one of their own at the same time.

Besides the formal library collection, a paperback and magazine exchange is set up in the hallway. Used magazines line the steps and are there for the taking. Paperbacks, too, can simply be taken home and returned when finished. Or you can bring one of your own to exchange for one that is there.

The library, which receives no money from the town, is a "free" library. Everyone is welcome. Regular patrons come not only from Marshfield but from Scituate, Pembroke, Weymouth and Kingston. No cards are required or issued. The librarian simply asks for your name and address the first time you use the library for the files.

Though users come from all over the area, the library predominantly serves the Hills. Children in the area enjoy the casual library within walking distance. Youth books take up almost half the room. And though in-depth school reports need the larger sources of the Ventress, a new Encyclopedia Britannica (donated by a loyal supporter) and a non-fiction section provide some reference materials for the younger set.

As with the adult best sellers, an advantage of Clift Rodgers library is the availability of books in the children's section. Dr. Suess, Roald Dahl, "I Can Read Books," and many others are on display. Besides books, wooden toys by Aaron Loomis are there to play with or take home on loan.

Several special children's reading programs and story hours have been conducted. A summer reading program for children through grade 6 resulted in prizes of Friendly's ice cream. A roaring fire in the fireplace provided the perfect backdrop for a special Halloween story hour. And last summer, volunteers conducted a 4-part "Reading Around the World" series featuring not only books but food and crafts from various countries. Space at these events is quickly filled simply by advertising them on a card

MUSINGS

By John H. Cutler

☐ Too many novels finish too long after the end.

☐ Two observations about plagiarism -- the first by T.S. Eliot: "Immature poets imitate; mature poets steal." But as Jules Feifer says, "Good swiping is an art in itself."

☐ A gambling axiom: A gentleman never bets on a sure thing. Oscar Wilde defined a gentleman as one who never harms another person unintentionally. Fred Allen had another version: "A gentleman never strikes a lady with his hat on." And now we hear from W.C. Fields: "I've never struck a woman in my life, not even my own mother."

☐ A lady is one who never shows her underwear unintentionally.

☐ Ladd MacMillan stumped me with this riddle: "Someone makes it and sells it. The person who buys it never uses it and the person using it never knows it." Answer below.

☐ A query for Teri in Cincinnati: Do you know the name of the sage who said: "A gourmet restaurant in Cincinnati is one where you leave the tray on the table after you eat."

☐ A few more odd laws:

It was once illegal in Boston to own a dog more than 10 inches high.

It is unlawful to ride a tricycle on the sidewalk in Moscow, ID.

In Ziegler, IL, a law provides that the first four volunteer firemen to show up at a fire will be paid for their services.

☐ Sicily is a country where the money falls apart and you can't tear the toilet paper.

☐ And now we hear from Somerset Maugham: "The trouble with our young writers is that they are all in their 60's."

☐ Our friend Elvis Presley would probably agree with this observation: Anything that is too stupid to be spoken is sung."

☐ Eloquent statements from two terse gentlemen: "Hello," he lied. -- Said by a Hollywood agent. One from Ring Lardner: "Shut up," he explained.

☐ It has been widely noted that in some cases non-violence requires more militancy than violence.

☐ According to Cornelia Otis Skinner, women's virtue is man's greatest invention.

☐ Try to take a job which is too difficult for you; it's the best way to reach your level of incompetence.

☐ It's no sin to bend a few laws now and then, just as long as you don't break them.

☐ In most courts of justice, a man is assumed guilty until he is proven influential.

☐ Lawyers help those who help themselves.

☐ Answer to riddle: A coffin.

Emotions Anonymous offers help from others

By Elisabeth Gorfinkle

The group first prayed for serenity.

Powerful, negative emotions had crippled their ability to lead productive, happy lives, they said.

Twenty-five had come together this week. Sometimes more and sometimes less gather on Sunday afternoons at Quincy City Hospital in a room usually used for Alcoholics Anonymous meetings.

Some of them were reformed alcoholics. Others had been addicted to drugs, food, gambling, countless compulsive behaviors. Almost all were chain smokers.

They shared a deep sense of loss and a need to reach out for help. They were members of the new Quincy chapter of Emotions Anonymous.

The purpose of Emotions Anonymous (EA) is to help people of all ages and from all walks of life to improve their emotional health.

Sharing and identifying with others, while retaining anonymity, is the premise of anonymous programs.

Only EA members are allowed to conduct meetings. Medical, social or religious professionals are prohibited from participating in the program, unless they are simply EA members.

The program is non-denominational, non-profit and non-professional. Chapters have no affiliations and are self-supporting through membership donations. Members neither receive counseling nor do they socialize, the literature states.

EA is adapted from Alcoholics Anonymous methodology. Members are urged to apply EA's philosophy to their lives, by using AA's 12-step process, said the chapter coordinator.

The coordinator did not reveal her name or her motivations for founding a chapter, because the 11th of the 12 traditions held by EA reads: "members must always maintain personal anonymity when dealing with the press."

The coordinator did say that the Quincy chapter is the South Shore's first. It was founded last Oct. 7 and currently provides an open discussion group every Sunday at 3 p.m. on the third floor of the hospital's Hunting 3 building, 114 Whitwell St.

Possibly in the near future, Quincy's program will expand to include a more intensive 12-step meeting one night a week. She also spoke of other members probably opening a Braintree chapter in the next few months.

"EA started in Saint Paul, Minn. in 1971 by a group of people who had been members of another 12-step program," she said. "Now at least 1,500 chapters exist in the United States and throughout the world. Ten chapters are in Massachusetts. (They include) one in Belmont, one in Watertown, one in Wellesley, three in Worcester, one in Reading, one in Lowell and ,of course, one in Quincy."

At the beginning of each meeting, members recite the 12 suggested steps of EA. The steps describe a process of turning troubled lives over to "God as we understand Him."

Week after week, members use the EA text as a guide for self-examination and as a helper in making amends for destructive behavior.

For example, the introduction of chapter five helps members come to terms with their illness: "I believe emotional illness can cripple us mentally, physically, and spiritually.

"Emotional illness is no respecter of intelligence, education, wealth or social status.

"It affects not only ourselves but those who live with us and love us. Emotional illness becomes a family illness."

During the hour and a half of discussion this reporter witnessed, one member after the next was acknowledged. They made confessions or gave short comments. They told each other they did identify, but they didn't compare or criticize.

"I think it takes a lot of courage for anyone to concede he has a problem," said the member acting as moderator.

He said he has been "sober" for seven years and is also a member of AlAnon, Narcotics Anonymous and AA, because he believes in giving himself the best of care.

"I lived a glamorous life to others (as a successful performer), but to me it was rotten, because that was the way I felt inside. I was selfish, indulgent, spoiled -- in a word greedy. I lost two families as the cost," he said.

"Many people procrastinate until the pain outweighs the pleasure. Now I live a comparatively dull life. I'm not happy with the successful career or the awards, because when I go back to that hotel room with that award, that's all I have. I am still alone."

But he said he has gained a trememdous amount of self-respect by learning to become an honest, giving man.

An important EA slogan is: "Know thyself -- be honest."

Members shared their difficulties in trying to live the EA program one day at a time, 24 hours a day.

An older man who has been out of work for 14 months said, "I shake hands with everything -- the loneliness, the anger. I talk to myself, and I get answers."

These EA members were learning to shake hands with quite a bit of pain. One woman was suffering from chronic agoraphobic panic attacks (fear of open places), which were destroying her work record. Another woman was grieving the loss of her entire immediate family. And still another was struggling to find the inner strength to cope with life without drugs.

Abnormal fear, depression, self-pity, resentment, remorse, jealousy, envy, guilt, tension, boredom, loneliness, grief, low self-esteem, failure, withdrawal, anger were many of the recurring themes in the discussion.

Though some newer members expressed feelings of despair, some veteran members said they had finally found contentment.

For instance, the man who has learned to shake hands with his life said, "Now I know happiness comes from within. I don't have much, but I don't want much. I am comfortable with myself. I put the spirit of God in me, and I let Him run the show."

According to EA literature, many doctors, psychiatrists, psychologists, counselors, clergymen and other professionals in the social services refer people to EA.

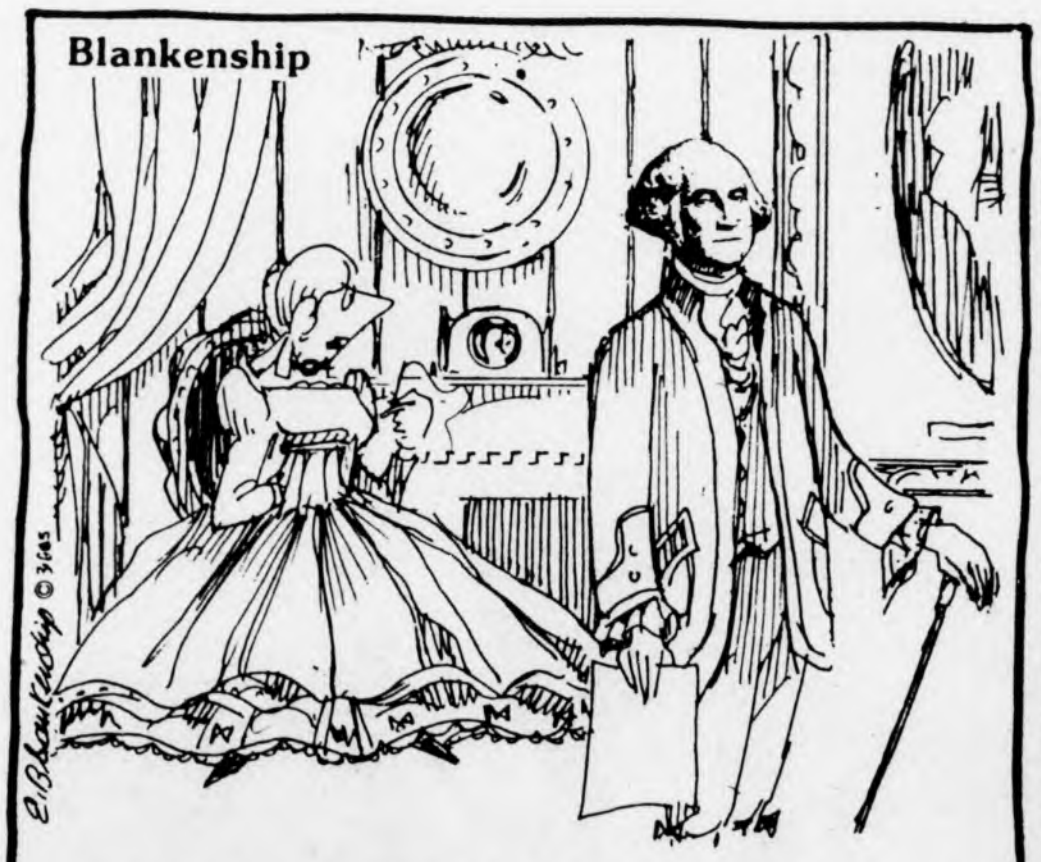
EA headquarters in Minnesota will assist in finding nearby chapters or creating new ones. The EA members who expressed interest in starting a Braintree chapter said, "All it takes is two persons and a coffee pot to have a meeting."

To contact support groups at Quincy City Hospital, 114 Whitwell St., Quincy, call 773-6100, ext. 218. There is free admission to all groups and all are welcome.

The following programs are offered:

Alcoholics Anonymous, open meeting daily at 10:30 a.m.;

AA 12-step meeting, Mondays at 7:30 p.m.;



Adult Children of Alcoholics on Saturdays at 8 p.m.;

AlAnon Sundays at 8 p.m.;

Emotions Anonymous on Sundays at 3 p.m.;

Some good and bad news for Choc-a-holics

First, the good news. Choc-a-holics may take comfort in the findings of doctors and nutritionists that confections are carbohydrates which the body needs and their consumption, as part of a balanced diet, should not be a source of guilt--if done in moderation. So, now that you are free to indulge, waste no time in subscribing to "Chocolatier," for its sinfully tempting array of recipes and pictures are guaranteed to make one drool. Maggie Manley gave me her copy of the Christmas issue of the quarterly which began publication last year. Photography is beautiful and an article on Switzerland features classic Swiss desserts. A festive open house party offers holiday recipes and the Christmas Jewel Box Cake is a work of art. One article featuring thoughts on chocolate by elementary school youngsters included the remarks: "Chocolate gives me joy feels all over . . . chocolate drinks feel good if your throat gets orangitis and everything would not be worth anything without chocolate." Maggie says this recipe is excellent and it's not hard to believe of

CHOCOLATE WALNUT TRUFFLES

1 c. (5 oz.) semisweet chocolate morsels
1 egg yolk
Grated rind of 1 small orange
1 c. plus 3T finely chopped walnuts
2T unsalted butter
2 1/2 tsp. cognac or brandy

1. In double boiler, melt chocolate over hot water.
2. Turn chocolate into bowl and add other ingredients except 1 c. of walnuts. Beat together for 2 to 3 min., until well combined. Refrigerate until firm, approx. 1 hour.
3. Scatter remaining nuts over sheet of waxed paper. Shape the truffle mixture into 1" balls and roll in walnuts. Place in paper cups to serve. Yields 18 - 24.

Now, the bad news. A single caramel cordial from a Whitman's Sampler contains 49 calories, a Hershey's Kiss 25, a mint Life Saver has 7 and a Sugar Daddy, 220. Milky Way bars have 270 calories, M&M's, 240 calories in a 1.69 ounce pkg., a jelly bean, 4 calories and a pamphlet listing these and other name-brand candy products--200 in all--is yours by sending a stamped, self-addressed business size envelope to Calorie Confectionary Guide, Suite 1900, 40 W. 57th St., New York, N.Y. 10019. Rosie's Boston bakery sells an amazing five thousand fresh browines each week and they have been voted the "Best Brownie in America." Amazingly easy to prepare, it is suggested that these fudgy brownies be made a day ahead to ensure proper texture and flavor. Frost the next day and serve these 16

4 squares unsweetened chocolate
1 stick unsalted butter
1 1/4 c. plus 3T sugar
1 tsp. vanilla extract
3 large eggs, lightly beaten
3/4 c. all-purpose flour
Fudge Frosting: 1 1/2 oz. unsweetened chocolate, melted
1/4 c. sugar
1/4 c. evaporated milk, room temperature
16 pecan halves, for decoration, optional

Preheat oven to 350 and butter 8" square pan. Melt chocolate with butter in double boiler over barely simmering water. Cool for 5 min. In a bowl, using an electric mixer, beat together the chocolate mixture and sugar for 1 to 2 min., completely combining. Add vanilla and lightly beaten eggs and mix only until combined. Add flour and beat until mixture is totally blended and has a shiny, velvety look, 1 min., or less. Spread batter evenly in pan. Bake for 20 to 25 min., until a very thin crust forms on top and a knife inserted in center comes out clean or with a moist crumb. Do not overbake. Cool in pan to room temperature. Cover when cool and set aside overnight.

Frosting: In blender, combine melted chocolate, sugar and evaporated milk. Process for 3 to 5 min. until mixture is firm and shiny. (The sound of the blender will change when the mixture has firmed up.) Frost brownies with thin layer of icing. Cut into 2" squares and top each with pecan half.

Smothered in whipped cream, this dessert is best served warm and the thin crust which forms on the top to puff up like a souffle, falls slightly during cooking, yielding 6 to 8 servings.

CHOCOLATE WHISKEY PUDDING

1 c. sifted all-purpose flour
1 1/4 c. granulated sugar
5T unsweetened cocoa powder
2 tsp. baking powder
Pinch of salt
2T unsalted butter, melted
1/2 c. milk
1 tsp. vanilla extract
1/2 c. light brown sugar, firmly packed
1/4 c. whiskey

Preheat oven to 350. In large bowl, combine flour, 2/3 c. of sugar, 2T of cocoa, baking powder and salt. Mix thoroughly. Stir in melted butter, milk and vanilla. Mix until smooth. Spray a 1 1/2 qt. souffle dish or ovenproof bowl with nonstick vegetable coating. In a bowl, combine remaining sugar, remaining 3T cocoa and the brown sugar. Sprinkle mixture evenly over the batter. In a small bowl, combine whiskey with 3/4 c. water and pour over pudding. Bake for 35 min., or until thin crust forms on top. Remove from oven and invert pudding onto a serving platter or spoon into bowls directly from the baking dish. Serve warm with whipped cream.

in the hallway.

At one time, the library was supported by the town, but the constraints of Prop 2½ ended the funding. Now it is supported by fundraising efforts and donations. Fundraising letters to previous benefactors provide much of the $6000 budget while a used book sale on Memorial Day in conjunction with the North River Arts Society art show raises between $800 and $1000. A table in the library sports new hardback books selling for $2 and paperbacks for $1. New titles are added weekly, earning the library a few more dollars. In addition, a silent auction with bidding will be conducted in March. But it is the consignment shop on the second floor that is the backbone of the library financing.

The original consignment shop was started in 1955 and has been in almost continuous operation since then. About 5 years ago it was taken over by library board member Peggy Beals who now manages 5 paid staffers and about 30 volunteers.

The shop is chock full of clothing, bric-brac, sports equipment and crafts — all at fire sale prices. Because the shop pays no rent, its overhead is low so prices can be kept low.

Clothing is clean, pressed, in style and in season. Because it doesn't sell, men's clothing isn't accepted, but women's, children's and unisex styles are all there. Well known labels are easily found. Healthtex, Izod and Polly Flanders are on the children's racks. Saks Fifth Avenue and others are on the adult ones. And as Beals says, "our labels are still in" so you know what you're getting.

Prices are set by the consignor, though the shop will set them if the consignor prefers. After four weeks the item is moved to the half-price racks. If it hasn't sold in eight weeks, it becomes the property of the shop. For most articles, the consignor receives 75 percent of the sale price while the library gets 25 percent.

The exception to these guidelines is crafts. In the craft category, the consignor receives 90 percent of the sale price. Beals said the higher percentage given to the crafter is recognition of the time spent on the article. By giving the craft consignor a higher percentage, the shop is able to keep prices low while giving the crafter a fair return. In addition, craft prices remain constant for three months as opposed to the four weeks for other items. At the end of the three month period, the article becomes the shop's if it hasn't sold.

Popular crafts featured in the shop include tiny velvet teddy bears for $1.50, Aaron Loomis wooden toys made from Hatch Mill wood selling for $3 and $4, and Walter Crossley birds for $3. Beals said there is often a rapid turnover in crafts. For example, 28 of the 30 Crossley birds brought in last week have already sold.

Consignors are free to remove an article at any time and consign it at a later date if they wish. The best sale time for craft and bric-brac items is fall to January, while the beginning of each season brings an upsurge in clothing sales.

The shop recently held a rummage sale to clear racks of winter clothing and is now eagerly awaiting arrival of spring and summer fashions from consignors. The library also gladly accepts outright donations of merchandise.

Besides the availability of free space in the library building, volunteers help keep overhead — and therefore prices — low. Volunteers work one three-hour shift a month and do everything from pricing and sorting to accepting and selling. According to Beals, without the volunteers, the shop couldn't operate. More volunteers are always needed and welcome.

A library board of 22 interested citizens directs the operations and coordinates the fundraising. Bill Krusell, Pat Gorham, Todd Forman, Judith Harrington, Joan Woodhull and Barbara Burnham sit on the Board as do Barbara Engstrom, Barbara Prouty, Clare Black, Eleanor Cuff and Martinette Beckwith. Other members include Peggy Mason, Hope Poor, Barbara Herman, Roseanne Concannon and Marian Niedwoski. Peggy Beals and Lois Geary also serve on the Board as do Roger and Woody Tappan and Mariam and Al Wickman.

Beals said that some people might think this size board would be unwieldy, but it has proved to be an effective size for the library. With this many members, someone is sure to have the expertise to solve any problem. For example, Todd Forman was instrumental in arranging for the Marshfield High School woodworking class to make the new, red announcement sign in front of the library.

Patrons of the Clift Rodgers library believe there is certainly room for two libraries in Marshfield. Many of the strongest backers of Clift Rodgers worked long and hard for the new Ventress building and make frequent use of it. But they believe that the uniqueness of a neighborhood, free library is also worth saving and supporting. And with circulation of 8000 books a year — quite a feat for a library open only 15 hours a week — the Clift Rodgers Free Library is proving them right.

The Clift Rodgers Library and Consignment Shop is open 9-12 Monday mornings, 1-4 Tuesday through Friday afternoons and 10-1 Saturdays.

Funding for North River Management Plan

State Sen. William Golden and State Rep. Frank Hynes have commented on the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Quality Engineerings' Division of Water Pollution Control commitment to provide funding for a one-year contract with the North River Commission to implement the North River Management Plan for the first year.

The objectives of this plan are to:

A. Determine the cause of coliform bacterial pollution in the North and South Rivers.

B. Institute pollution abatement measures to correct conditions of contamination.

C. Develop and implement a continuing monitoring process in order to prevent further river contamination.

Golden said, "I am very pleased by the Dukakis Administration's decision to fully fund the first year of this critical study. We cannot begin to clean up the sewage pollution problem in the North River until we know the full extent and sources of this pollution. The commitment of state funds together with the money appropriated at the local level will ensure that we can now take the first steps to preserve and enhance this valuable resource." Golden further stated, "It is important to note that in order to solve such regional problems as the North River pollution, the South Shore must closely coordinate the efforts of state, federal and local officials. Fortunately, in the case of the North River, town officials from Marshfield, Scituate, Pembroke, Norwell and Rockland have worked closely with their State representatives, Representative Hynes, Representative Flynn and the North River Commission, to obtain necessary State funds to get the cleanup program going."

Hynes, who represents Scituate and Marshfield, the primary communities at the mouth of the River, was particularly pleased with the State's commitment. "The action of DEQE underscores the longstanding determination of many of us to protect this irreplaceable river resource. The North River is the first designated as a scenic river and we must remain ever diligent in regulating inappropriate uses and prohibiting activities which despoil its beauty," Hynes said.

INSURANCE PROBLEMS OF SMALL BUSINESSMEN

Small businessmen frequently make several serious insurance mistakes. For example, a small businessman does not have to be a millionaire to be sued like one. Because bigger lawsuits can be expected today, the small businessman should consider higher liability limits. Many small businessman should consider higher liability limits. Many small businessmen have several separate policies which are hard to keep track of. They tend to be expensive and, importantly, may often leave loopholes and gaps in their insurance package. They should consider a package policy that combines all these coverages. It may save significant sums of money as well as close loopholes. Lastly, the small businessman should be covered for accidents caused by employees, subcontractors or persons using automobiles on their behalf.

Business people are invited to come in to have us survey their coverages—free of charge! Often, duplications can be eliminated and consolidations made that result in lower costs. ANDREW G. Need for day care is greater than ever

By Jane Tamburri Spitz

It's no secret the supply of quality child care services falls short of the demand. With the growing number of single parent families and working mothers, the need for day care is greater than ever.

"Leaving a young child in another's care can be an excruciatingly painful experience for a parent," said Naomi Rosenberg during an interview last week in Braintree, where South Shore Day Care Services (SSDCS) rents office space from the town's school department.

SSDCS preschool centers, like the one located at the Hingham Ammunition Depot, provide educational experiences for children two years, ten months through six years-old. After-school programs which are held in six different South Shore towns focus on recreational activities for children six through 12 years-old.

Nearly 10 years ago SSDCS expanded its services to include home-based child care. With the addition of the Family Day Care Program, the agency offers the community comprehensive day care services.

As director of the program for eight years, Rosenberg said family day care meets the needs of preschoolers who do better in smaller groups with the consistency of one caretaker in a home environment.

She has implemented stringent rules for screening child care providers and supervises a professional staff of two home visitors, two social workers and a provider assistant.

Ongoing support and required training for SSDCS providers together with continued encouragement of parental involvement distinguish SSDCS family day care from day care homes that are offered by providers who operate independently, according to Rosenberg.

With increasing awareness of the problems and inadequacies of day care, parents turn to SSDCS, a private, non-profit organization, in their search for programs with which they can feel comfortable and confident.

While the state requires that all providers be registered through the Office for Children, the process is a relatively simple one. It consists of the approval of a written application and several personal references. There is no required on-site visit and the registration process is based on an honor system, explained Rosenberg.

On the other hand, SSDCS requires a seven-stop application policy. Beginning with the review of a written form, the process continues with a home visit followed by a morning at SSDCS headquarters where the applicant is observed while working with children.

Meeting with the staff, attending a five-session training workshop and filling in on a substitute basis complete the procedure.

State regulations limit the number of children to be cared for by a home provider to six, including the providers own children. SSDCS adds the restriction that only one baby under one and one-half years may be cared for in a home.

Every other week providers meet at SSDCS headquarters for morning workshops. While the children participate in activities, the providers learn about nutrition, first aid or new projects. "This allows for the children to get larger group experiences on a regular basis and for providers to share specific problems and concerns," Rosenberg said.

Parents are invited to visit the home where their child is in day care unannounced at any time during the day. Communication between providers and parents is maintained through newsletters prepared by providers, during brief talks at drop-off and pick-up times and in written notes. The agency is available to parents for discussions and individual or group counseling.

The placement of children in day care homes is based on a careful matching process. "We try to balance the groups so that everyone has a playmate. For many children who may not have siblings, the mix of ages is also beneficial," Rosenberg said.

Annual recruitment begins in March and new providers are admitted into the program the following September. With the year's recruitment process about to begin, Rosenberg says that waiting lists and inquiries from parents and companies on behalf of their employees indicate the need for program expansion.

Funding by the Department of Social Services, the United Way and a community development block grant allow SSDCS to base fees on a sliding scale. For $2 to $90 per week, depending on income and the number of hours, a child can receive family day care. Most providers are on a 7:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., Monday through Friday, schedule —however, there is some flexibility.

Though independent providers may earn a little more money than SSDCS providers, there are the obvious advantages of support, professionalism and guaranteed payment for services. "Because parents pay us and we pay providers' salaries, if there is a conflict over money it is our concern," said Rosenberg. Providers receive paid vacations, sick days and 11 holidays each year.

Since its inception, the family day care program has tripled in size. Twenty-one SSDCS providers scattered throughout the South Shore provide care for 90 children, from Quincy to Marshfield.

Bobby Rego and his sister, Sandy, were on hand when the tickets for Hawaii arrived at their home. The Regos, parents along with these siblings, will make the trip, which is made possible by the Children's Happiness Foundation.

World of Weather — March should be stormy

At 11:14 a.m. March 20th, the vernal equinox occurs. This is when the astronomical spring officially begins, and the days and nights in the northern hemisphere will each have approximately 12 hours. Soon we will have a touch of "spring fever" and our thoughts will be of the balmy days of summer that are just around the corner. But don't put your snow shovel away just yet. March has brought some of the most vicious storms of all time to New England.

On March 4, 1717 two major and two minor storms in nine days came to an end, with about 36 inches of snow in the Boston area. On March 25, 1909 a severe easterly storm struck with 87 MPH winds recorded at Blue Hill observatory. On March 17, 1956 the infamous "Saint Patrick's Day" blizzard struck and two days later on the 19th a second heavy snowstorm commenced.

But the Grandaddy of all March storms was the great blizzard of March 11-14, 1888. Many stories have been written about how this blizzard cut off and immobilized Washington, D.C., Philadelphia, New York City, and Boston, with drifts 30 to 40 feet high. But this storm was also a great marine disaster from Chesapeake Bay through New England.

Over 200 vessels were sunk, grounded or abandoned, while more than 100 seamen died in what they called the "Great White Hurricane". This was during the days of sail, and to be at sea during such a monstrous storm, took all the skill and courage of captain and crew to just survive. I don't think the pages of weather history contain a record of a more gallant fight against the elements of nature than the log of the American Ship Annie M. Smull.

The log was written from Colombo, Ceylon to New York. His vessel was in position east of Chesapeake Bay when he encountered the storm. In his log he refers to the wind as being "Force 7" or "Force 11 to 12". This is a numerical value on the Beaufort scale; force 7 being 32-38 MPH and force 12 exceeding hurricane force of 74 MPH. He also mentions the use of oil-bags. This was a method of using oil to quiet dangerous waves and prevent the seas from crashing on board the vessel. Let's go to sea now, in the year 1888.

MARCH 11 — Midnight to 8 a.m.,: Fresh breeze and dull overcast sky. 5 a.m.: Went out of the stream, hauled up NNE., and went in again. 6 a.m.,: Barometer 30.11; chopping cross-sea all night; wind SE, 5. 10 a.m. Fresh and quite fine for a SE wind; went out of the stream again on a N. by E. course; and the sea got smooth once; Barometer 30.06. Noon: latitude 36 degrees 38' N., longitude 74 degrees 9' W., Barometer 30.02. 2 p.m.: Wind SE., 5, Barometer 29.96. 4 p.m.: Barometer 29.86. 6 p.m., Barometer 29.76, wind increasing to force 6. 10 p.m.; Wind still at SE., force 7; Barometer 29.71; sails furled to lower top-sails, foresail, and upper main-topsail; weather thick and rainy. Midnight: Barometer 29.66; course all day between N. and NNE.

MARCH 12 — 2 a.m.: Wind shifted to NNW., force 11 to 12; Barometer 29.61, but at 4 a.m. fell to 29.36, then steadily rising until noon, when in latitude 30 degrees N., longitude 73 degrees 40' W., it reached 29.51; Barometer record ended here. At 2 a.m., when wind shifted to NNW., braced around, clewed down upper main-topsail and hauled up foresail and mizzen-topsail and sent men to furl them, but gale increased to a hurricane and blew them to pieces, also blowing lower foretop-sail away, and main-topsail yard broke short off in the slings. We also lost both topsails. Terrific gale and blinding snow, ship lying on beam-ends with yard arms in water and making water fast. Ship covered with snow, and ice making fast. At 10 a.m. shipped a sea which took two boats, one man, and everything about decks; saved the man; five men with hands and feet frost-bitten and three injured by washing about; all hands lashed to pumps and working them continually. All rooms and galley washed out; ship lying with hatch coamings under water. Cargo shifted at 8 p.m.; wheel-shaft broke, and steering-gear completely smashed; secured rudder with tackle as well as possible. Foreyard sprung, main-yard gone at sheave hole, and the remainder of sails cut from yards to keep ship to wind. Tarpaulin in mizzen rigging. Midnight: gale still raging and frightful sea; oil-bags over, which work well for the NW sea, but have no effect on the NE and SE sea. Pumps still going, but don't gain any; 4 feet of water in the ship; snowing hard all the time. This is worst gale I ever experienced; ship making bad work of it and straining badly.. Eight men unfit for duty; bad outlook; covered with snow and ice. Hard luck!

MARCH 13 — Midnight to 8 a.m.: no change, still snowing, and gale as bad as ever; ship straining badly, and can't gain any on the pumps, working them continually as well as we can with a disabled crew; sea very bad, making a clean breach over the ship; at daylight a little less wind, and sea more regular; still snowing. Noon: foretop-sail and jib; managed to get before the wind; lost the jib. I intend to run for warm water and thaw out; steering with tackles on tiller; pumps going constantly, no luck; ship has about 4 feet list to starboard and steers badly. Bent spare lower foretop-sail and set in. More moderate at midnight. No suction on the pumps, but the water don't gain on us; all right. Heavy snow squalls. Large sea from N. my hands are swelled so I can hardly hold a pen.

The vessel Annie M. Smull made it to port, but many another went down with all hands in that fateful storm of March 1888.

February Summary

February 1985 began cold but ended with record high temperature readings being set on the 24th. The 70 degree reading in Boston on that day broke the month's all-time high reading set in 1930.

Total melted precipitation, at my station in Marshfield, was 2.59 inches, 1.03 inches below normal. There were 14.75 inches of snow, 3.15 inches above normal. The maximum 24-hour rainfall was .60 inches on the 13th. Maximum 24-hour snowfall was 11 inches on Feb. 6-7. Rain, .01 inch or more, occurred on 6 days with a trace on two days. Snow, 1.0 inch or more, occurred on 3 days.

The mean temperature was 28.2 degrees, 2.2 degrees below normal. The average daily maximum readings was 38.3 degrees, while the average daily minimum was 18 degrees. The low temperature for the month was 6 degrees below zero on the 4th with a record setting high reading of 67 degrees on the 24th.

There were five clear days, fifteen partly cloudy days and eight cloudy days. The average wind speed was 14.7 mph; Normal is 14 mph. The highest gust was 62 mph on the 12th.

The normal heating season is from Sept. 1 to May 23. Some 23 percent of the heating year remains.

March Outlook

From the 7th-12th it will be fair and cold with windy conditions and possibly a few snow flurries. 13th-20th a storm period is indicated with a major storm of rain though we may have heavy snow depending on the track of the storm. 21st-28th another major storm with high winds can be expected. The month will be stormy and should have above average precipitation. The last three days should be fair, windy and cold.

Weather Q. and A.

Q. Does the word "Whirlwind" appear in the bible?

A. Yes — frequently, in the old testament, thunder, lightning, tempest, rain, storm, showers, clouds, rainbow, snow and hail are also used. The word season appears in the bible but not the word weather.

Have a good day and a nice forever.

Dooley begins search for new employment

"From the start, this department was against an outsider and it caused a lot of apprehension. But it has eased a bit... me and my men were getting used to each other, getting attuned to our likes and dislikes.".

Two years of turmoil abruptly ended Monday night when selectmen decided that Fire Chief Martin Dooley's contract will not be renewed.

Since his appointment, there has been a rash of grievances filed by a demoralized force. Community residents have been divided in their support of the chief versus the firefighters. For the past two years, an invisible line has been drawn, separating the rank and file from their commander.

Selectmen emphasized it wasn't a matter of personality. It was the chief's management style that triggered his termination. Chief Dooley has eight months remaining in the present contract with the Town of Cohasset.

In the meantime, the 48 year-old chief, who fully anticipated the decision this week, is sending resumes "all across the country" in hope of securing employment before his contract termination.

And despite his optimistic outlook for the future, the chief feels the decision was unnecessary."I always felt that things could have turned around. But now I understand the politics involved," he said. "From the start, this department was against an outsider and it caused a lot of apprehension. But it has eased a bit. Under it all, me and the men were getting used to each other, getting attuned to our likes and dislikes.

But this is a small department and there is a lot of peer pressure," the chief added.

The selectmen, he felt, had their own reasons for denying the contract renewal "but their excuse was 'management style.' I don't even know what that means," he said. The bottom line, he added, was the leader was let go, rather than firing the entire team.

At Monday night's meeting, everything was orderly and concise. Selectman Rocco Laugelle moved that as of December 31, the chief's contract not be renewed.

Responding to that recommendation, selectman Cliff Mitman stated, "I have the greatest respect for the chief as a professional and as a firefighter. When you look at things you have tried to implement as far as firefighting and techniques, there is not much objection. A lot of things you have implemented seem to make sense.

But this job is divided into two parts. The technical side, I am comfortable with the things and the changes you have made," he continued. "The other side is the people and management style. On balance, the shortcomings outbalance the positive side."

Mitman suggested the changes implemented by the chief during his tenure should have involved more input from his department. "I see things being done without notice or discussion," he added.

Selectman Laugelle said simply that for "the Girls hit the road to Worcester for state hoop finals

By Lisa Shumaker

It was an emotional night Tuesday for the Cohasset girls basketball team as they swept the Brandeis University court clean with a 54-43 victory. Now, the road leads to the Worcester Centrum where Saturday the girls will be vying for the state championship.

With tears of joy, the girls team exited the Waltham campus Tuesday night. Coach Bill Fallon beamed his approval and appreciation of this team which will likely bring home the first state championship in Cohasset's history.

"Overwhelmed" is how one team member described the night which will be long remembered in Cohasset's sports history. It was a long road to travel, but they have made it to the top.

Tracey Fitzpatrick was high scorer for Cohasset with a game-winning total of 21 points. Carla Lucas also played an outstanding game, earning 13 points.

Sarah Seavey gained seven points during the night. Coach Fallon singled out Janet DiGorolamo as the one player who controlled the entire team throughout the night.

So, it's onto the Worcester Centrum at 10:45 a.m. Saturday. The girls will be matched against the winner of the Central- West division game.

Last week the girls team set two milestones in Cohasset High School's history. First, by defeating Nauset on Tuesday, the Skippers became the only girls athletic team from Cohasset to win 20 games in a single season. Second, with a victory over Medway Friday, the girls became the first Cohasset team, boys or girls, to capture the prestigous title of South Sectional Champions. (We all know the boys basketball team matched this achievement on Saturday, but the girls were first).

When asked about his team's overwhelming success, Coach Fallon replied, "Winning the South Sectional Championship is a tremendous accomplishment, but a well-earned one." Most of the girls on the team have been playing together for four years and their combined efforts have produced this championship team.

The Skippers had to surpass two tough teams last week to become the best in the south. Tuesday, Cohasset roared past Nauset, 48-28. The team came out quick in the first quarter to leap ahead, 13-4. However, they cooled down in the second quarter and slipped out at half-time with a five-point lead. In the third quarter, Cohasset's defense took over and wore down Nauset, finally blowing them away late in the third.

Fallon pointed out several reasons that keyed this victory. First, despite a substantial height disadvantage at every position, Cohasset handled the boards very well. Second, the Skippers with their incredible defense, held the top scorer in the Cape and Islands

Unique food store to settle in Cohasset

A new concept in supermarket shopping will be coming to Cohasset this summer.

A "unique type of shopping experience" will be located in the 10,000 square foot building which once housed the Corner Meat Market at the Cushing Plaza.

It is not just a gourmet shop, according to owner Jim Bildner, president of J. Bildner and Sons. It is a produce and meat market, a supermarket that"treats every customer with respect... attempting to make food shopping a pleasurable experience."

Bildner says the store will open July 1 and will employ 50 to 60 persons. Extensive renovations, costing the firm about three-quarters of a million dollars, must be completed before the store opening.

The company first opened in 1983, and currently has two shops in operation. The first, which opened in the Back Bay in December, and a second which opened this week in Boston's financial district.

Bildner said his company carefully scrutinizes the best location for their type of market. "Early on, we spot out the kind of community where our type of market would mesh. We give personalized, professional treatment to customers who appreciate the difference," he says.

J. Bildner and Sons will offer service meats where one or more butchers will be on duty. There will be no pre-packaged meats, just cut-to-order specials. There will also be an extensive array of bulk produce, exceeding any other area store, he promises.

The store will also feature about forty feet of pre-prepared gourmet items, such as roast duck, cornish hen, cuts of lamb and many variations of pastry.

"Basically, our feeling is that food shopping is something we all have to do. So why not do it in a pleasurable atmosphere, where you are treated with respect? We are going to make shopping a real experience," Bildner states.

Cohasset's week . . .

Voter registration

The Board of Registrars will be in session from noon to 8 p.m. Saturday, March 16, to register new voters for town meeting and the election.

Fire captain appointed

After three unsuccessful attempts, selectmen finally promoted Robert Silvia to Acting Fire Captain.

Although Silvia had scored over 90 in the most recent Civil Service test, selectmen had not made the appointment for the Acting Captain position because of a lack of budget money. Selectmen still had not heard whether a budget transfer request was approved by the Advisory Committee last week when Silvia again attended the meeting, expecting to be appointed.

The advisors approved the $600 transfer request last week, so selectmen could make the appointment this week. Currently, Acting Captain Richard Conley is out on a disability leave, and Fire Chief Martin Dooley said it was imperative the staff position be maintained in the department.

Computer additions reviewed

Monday night, selectmen discussed the progress made in solving the town's computer problems with Bernard Bornstein, a resident who is familiar with computer programming.

The board members wanted to know if the previous problems with the computer system had been resolved, and if future dilemmas can be expected with added usage. There is a warrant article for the April 6 Town Meeting which requests $42,000 for the purchase of additional computer equipment. This equipment is currently on loan to the town from Data National, in an attempt to cure a prolonged processing problem with the system.

Bornstein, who has volunteered his time and expertise to the town, emphasized that the main users of the computer, the accountant's office, the school department and the water department, have all indicated their approval of the most recent changes. But no matter how well things are operating now, he said, there is no guarantee for the future if additional programs are placed into the system and changes are made to the ones currently in use.

Selectmen Chairman Cliff Mitman said they have been informed that in order to purchase the additional equipment, it must be written down in a specific proposal and sent out for a contracted bid. Although this step is legally required, it is most likely that Data National will be the sole company to respond to the bid proposal.

The system, which has been in use for a little more than a year, had been experiencing several problems, specifically a time lapse in data processing.

"The question is," Bornstein stated to selectmen, " can this system do the job for the town? I can't answer that personally, only the departments that use it. But, when applications change, I can't say that the processing time won't be slowed again."

Mitman noted that significant changes in use or increased usage is not expected. "But we still have some ill-defined issues here," he added. "It's now costing us $42,000 today for something that should have been done two years ago. "

Matter sent to counsel

Building Inspector Edward Poskus has forwarded correspondence he had sent to Kenneth Eaves of Ken's Foreign Auto Repair to the Town Counsel for appropriate action.

According to Poskus, he informed Eaves in December that there were numerous unregistered motor vehicles on the King Street property, along with "cast-off automotive parts". He requested that the property be cleaned and all debris removed by December 26.

During a telephone conversation January 8, the owner promised to clean the property of all unregistered vehicles except one allowed by law. Eaves said he would also clean up the site. It was never completed, according to the inspector, although he was given six weeks to accomplish the project.

Because nothing was done to the property, Poskus referred the matter this week to Town Counsel Richard Henderson.

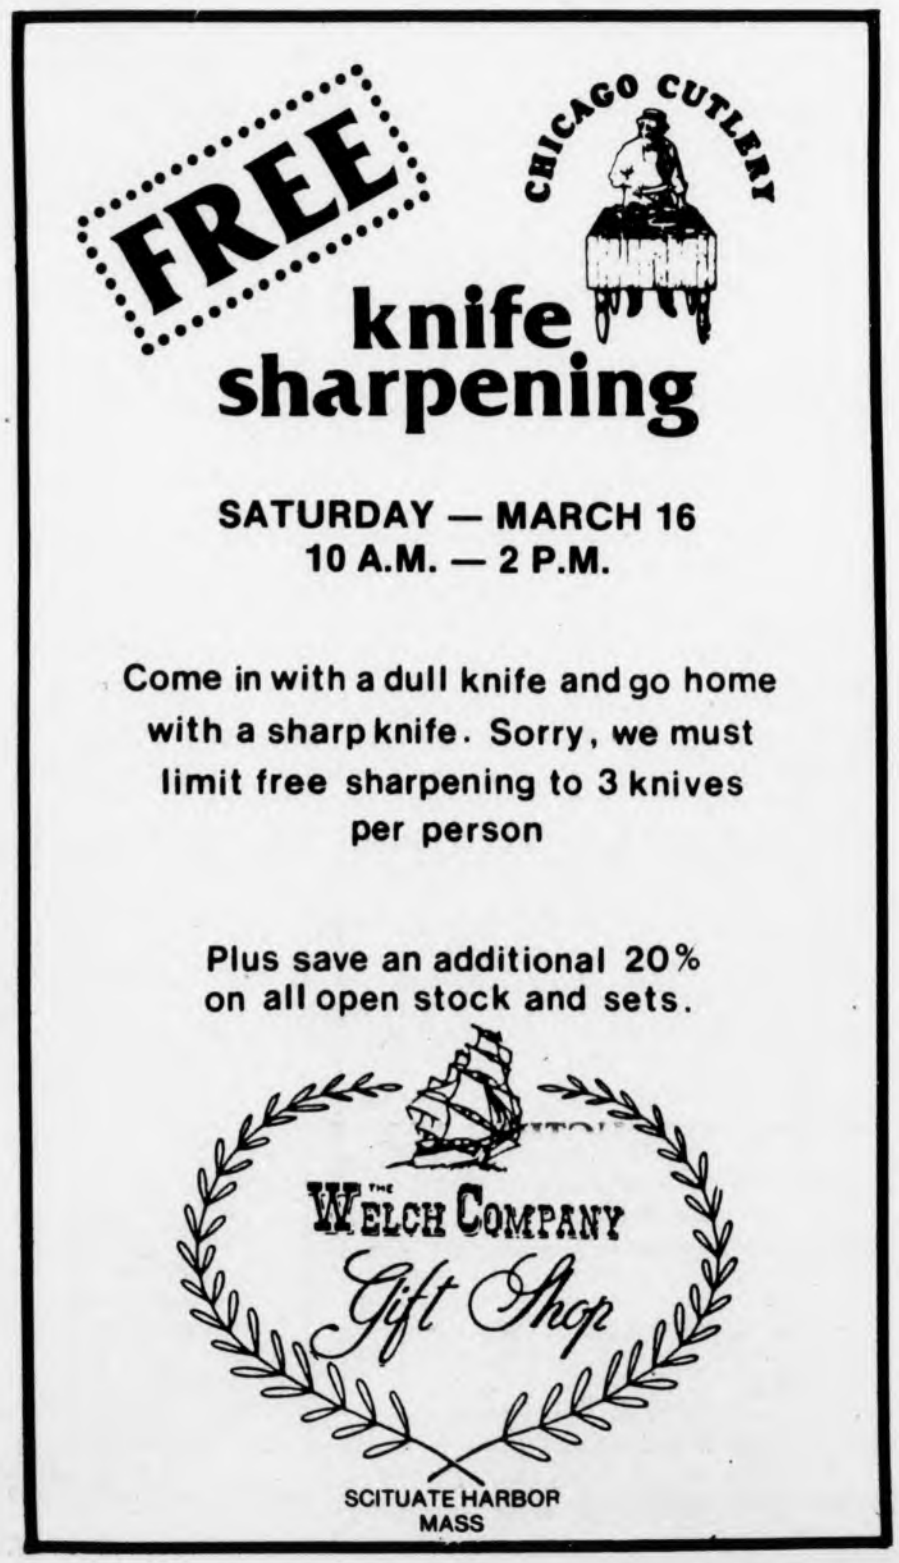
Assessor resigns

Assessor Chairman Brian Wilkin informed selectmen Friday that he had resigned his position on the Board of Assessors, effective that day.

Wilkin stated in a brief letter to the board, "Due to an increase in commitments of my business, I do not feel that I have the time necessary to devote to the office of assessor."

Selectmen accepted the resignation and noted that an official letter must be sent by the Board of Assessors. Then two members of that board and one selectmen will vote on an appointment to replace Wilkin.

SEMASS details discussed



During the February meeting of the Disposal Area Study Committee, it was determined that the design of the landfill transfer station will cost the town about $5000.

The state, however, has sent an application for reimbursement for up to 90 percent of that cost. A schedule for design would have to be met to qualify for the grant.

In other SEMASS business, it was determined that the state-regulated acid gas scrubbers will cost between $6,000 and $13,000, which would impact the charge per ton from $4 to $9. The SEMASS corporation will be meeting with the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering to determine which scrubber is required and at what cost.

Tuesday night tragedy in Cohasset

While Cohasset High School students celebrated with the girls basketball team in Waltham Tuesday night, tragedy occurred back home. Elation over the victory evolved into tears by the next morning when news of the Beechwood Street accident spread through the school.

At 7:04 p.m., a car driven by 16 year-old Michelle Stone of 383 South Main Street swerved across the yellow line on Beechwood Street and crashed into a tree. Thirteen year-old Desiree Yess, an eighth grade student at the high school, was pronounced dead at South Shore Hospital at 8:18 p.m.

As of Wednesday morning, Shawna O'Leary, 13, of 3 Ledgewood Lane, a passenger in the vehicle, was in critical condition at Childrens Hospital in Boston. She was transferred there from South Shore Hospital Tuesday night.

Also injured in the accident was the driver, Michelle, an 11th grade high school student, who was in satisfactory condition at South Shore Hospital with a fractured arm and abrasions. Amy Shepherd, 13, of 8 Buttonwood Lane, was in satisfactory condition at the hospital with multiple trauma.

Police said the girls were being driven by Michelle to CCD class at St. Anthony's Church. There has been no determination as to the cause of the accident, but Safety Officer Cliff Jones is investigating.

Norwell and Scituate ambulances assisted the Cohasset Fire Department with the accident victims. Firefighters used the Jaws of Life to extricate the girls from the vehicle.

High school principal Richard Streeter noted that Desiree's mother has been a speech therapist in the Cohasset school system for many years. Desiree had attended Cohasset public schools all her life.

Streeter said all the girls are considered "very good students, no problems at all. They have very good families."

The atmosphere following the girls' basketball victory was toned down considerably, Streeter said, as students entered the school Wednesday morning. A moment of silence and prayer was offered to the victims.

"We were naturally very proud of our school Tuesday night, but the news of the accident took us down," Streeter said. "All of the students feel the

ZBA reviews business variance on Ripley Road

By Melissa Barcomb

At the Zoning Board of Appeals meeting last Thursday, Dr. Robert Sceery requested a variance for his office at 89 Ripley Road. Sceery relocated his practice to his home on Atlantic Avenue.

Although the office on Ripley Road rests on the edge of the downtown business district, it is zoned as a residential area. Sceery wishes to be able to sell the property for business and/or residential use. He feels that if the building is restricted to residential use, it will not sell because of various reasons: "the house is extremely small, there is no back yard, and no full bathroom or kitchen," he stated.

A letter was submitted by the Board of Health stating that the existing sewage system would not accomodate the building for residents, and a permit could not be obtained to install a septic system.

Sceery's engineer presented his hardship as owning a piece of property that would be useless and has no sale value.

Neighbors stressed that anything other than professional use of the building would depreciate the neighborhood. The board considered the wide range of possible professions and agreed to specify what professions would or would not be appropriate if the reli f is granted.

There is a limitation of one person to every 200 square feet for downtown offices. The building at 89 Ripley Road encompasses 750 square feet, therefore allowing three employees, which Sceery has always abided by. The number of employees will have to be considered when the zoning board makes its final determination.

Speaking in opposition of Sceery's application was Burt Pratt of 75 Ripley Road. Pratt regarded his opposition as "friendly," referring to his personal feelings toward Dr. Sceery and of his practice. Although Pratt was part of a petition in favor of Sceery's practice, in 1967 he presented a report limiting the property to residential use only. Sceery was granted a special relief in 1969 and has been a pediatrician for 18 years on Ripley Road.

Pratt expressed support of Dr. Sceery's practice and said, "I wish he would stay there another 18 years." Pratt feels that the house can be salvaged for dwelling purposes. He also suggested that the building has been used previously as a home.

Board members made no decision and took the matter under advisement.

In another case last week, the board heard from Stephen and Margaret Lacroix of 150 Doane Street. In August, 1984, the Lacroix's purchased the property at 150 Doane Street. A variance was requested to allow their house to remain eight feet away from the property line instead of the required twenty feet.

At this point, the Lacroix's do not intend to sell their house, but if they do, they would need a technical relief because they believe the house doesn't conform to the zoning laws when it was built in 1968.

After some research, the board concluded that the 1968 bylaw did not require a setback. Therefore, the building is in conformity with the bylaw and a variance is not necessary.

Still no decision has been made on Dr. Patrick Morrissey's request for a variance to build a new road off King Street to accomodate an eight-unit subdivision.

The board granted Harry Ritter a variance to allow his house on Chief Justice Cushing Highway to remain a two-family dwelling.

Please use alternative transportation

Senator William Golden and Representative Mary Jeanette Murray remind South Shore commuters to utilize mass trasit and alternative transportation routes when commuting to Boston during the upcoming second phase of the reconstruction of the Southeast Expressway.

March 7, Sen. Golden and Rep. Murray met with DPW Commissioner Tierney to discuss the state's plans for relieiving traffic congestion and related transportation problems associated with the reconstruction process.

Reconstruction will begin March 18 with the return of the "Jersey" barriers. Weather permitting, two southbound lanes will be closed to traffic on the first of April. Tow truck services and police coverage during commuter hours will continue as part of the reconstruction project.

Sen. Golden repeated his prior requests that the DPW synchronize the lights on Route 3A. Commissioner Tierney indicated that he would make immediate inquiry into that matter. Sen. Golden also stressed the importance of using mass transportation and alternative routes to minimize additional traffic congestion and problems caused by the reconstruction.

Rep. Murray joined Sen. Golden in stressing the importance of public transportation. Rep. Murray stated, "I hope that the commuters will again support the Department of Public Works by using alternative methods of transportation.

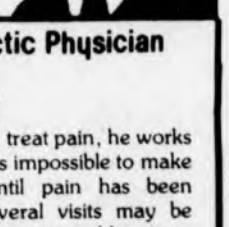
UP IN SMOKE



The Civil Aeronautics Board ceased to exist on December 31, 1984. It almost left a stiffer no-smoking rule in effect, beginning in 1985, than had been enforced in the past. After considering a complete ban on smoking on flights of two hours or less, a rule closer to the one that passengers already know was adopted. As long as they check in on time (usually 10 minutes before departure), passengers are guaranteed a no-smoking seat. Cigars and pipes are still banned from aircraft. Cigarette smoking is not allowed on commuter planes which are aircraft seating 30 or fewer passengers. The Departure of Transportation now enforces these rules.

Chiropractic for HEALTH

by Dr. Kevin M. Neill, Chiropractic Physician

PHASING IN

Although a chiropractor does not, per se, treat pain, he works very hard to eliminate it. In many cases, it is impossible to make corrective adjustments on the spine until pain has been eliminated. During this initial phase, several visits may be necessary. During the second phase of treatment, subluxations (misalignments) will be corrected, allowing the body to make its own necessary repairs. Ligaments will begin to tone up. Muscles will again start to provide support and tissues will cleanse themselves. The patient may find himself more alert, less depressed and even desiring healthier foods. During this phase, fewer visits will be necessary. During the final phase of preventive maintenance, pains from the first phase may have been forgotten but regular checks are still recommended.

The alleviation of pain and discomfort does not come about by the single wave of a magic wand. Depending on circumstances, more than one visit may be in order. It is important though for complete patient understanding and involvement in the process. At the COHASSET CHIROPRACTIC OFFICE, 760 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Suite 12, we welcome your calls, visits and questions. It is our goal to help you achieve a happier and healthier lifestyle. Our personal concern is your health. Tel. 383-1211, 1214. Daily appt.

better of the town," of which the fire department is a large part, he would vote to deny the contract renewal.

And selectman Mary Jane McArthur reiterated the sentiments voiced by the other board members. Looking downcast as she spoke to the chief she stated, "Martin, you know I was a strong supporter when you first came. I am sorry it didn't work out."

To that the chief responded, "I more than you."

McArthur noted it was not a problem of a technical nature, it was a matter of management style which prompted her decision.

Chief Dooley said he will not pursue employment as a firefighter. He will be seeking a similar administrative position. "I am not going backwards," he stated. "not under any circumstances. I feel I have done the job. What people have not agreed with here, they might agree with someplace else."

The past two years for the former Hartford, Conn. resident have not been without merit. Chief Dooley said he has learned from his experiences here, and will take with him many fond memories and lessons.

"It's been a very hectic two years. But I also feel I've accomplished a lot. The department is now a lot more professional, and productivity is way up, as I have stated in the annual report. The professionalism of the rank and file, and the call force has gone way up since I took over the department," Chief Dooley added.

The call force was one of the major accomplishments during his administration. There are now 20 active members of that force who respond in larger numbers than in previous years.

Chief Dooley is not bitter about the time he has spent in Cohasset. He has many friends, and admitted "Cohasset is an awfully nice place." He hopes his future employment is somewhere in the state, but he will go wherever there is opportunity.

"Life is positive," he said this week. "This has been a good all-round learning experience for me. I feel I am a better person for it."

With the lessons learned, often quite stressfully in the past two years, Chief Dooley said he can now offer another department the wisdom of his education and continuing experience.

Busy schedule for Brownies

Brownie Troop 4625 has been busy this winter. Four new Brownies have been invested: Catie Campbell, Caitlin Connelly, Joanne Larrabee and Amanda Ross.

Earning "Friend Maker Patches" were Elizabeth Corcoran, Caitlin Hurley, Melinda Johansen, Sarena Quemere, Amy Silvia, Erin Stiemle and Martina Snyder.

The leaders, Marsha Silvia and Kathy Quemere, took the girls on a discovery trip to Boston during February vacation. They took the T, toured the Westin Hotel, had lunch at Montillio's, viewed Boston from the John Hancock Tower. They all had a quick respite and walk through the Boston Public Library.

Boosters Club presents Magicians on Sunday

The Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club presents the Harlem Magicians (featuring Marques Haynes, former Harlem Globetrotter) vs. The Cohasset All-Stars Sunday, March 17, at 3 p.m. at the Cohasset High School gym.

Preliminary recreation league foul shooting and lay-up contest begin at 2 p.m.

Advance sale tickets are $4, adult; $3 student. At the door, tickets will be $5, adult; $4 student. Tickets are available at home boys' varsity basketball games, Horizon Video and Good Sport, as well as from Booster Club members.

Paul Merrifield, one of the newcomers of the Harlem Magicians, talks about how he made the team. "I knew 'Boom Boom' Wheeler, who has watched me play ever since I was a kid in Greenville, Illinois. He watched me during my high school career and, having played with Margues Haynes on what was probably the best of all Harlem Magicians teams, he has made it possible for me to now become a member of Marques Haynes' Harlem Magicians and I am eternally grateful to him for introducing me to Mr. Haynes," he says.

After graduating from secondary school in Greenville, Illinois, Merrified went onto Junior College at Burlington, Iowa, which is a tough hoop institute and while he was on the squad in 1979, that particular quintet made the National Junior College tournament and finished eighth in the nation. Upon graduating from Burlington he matriculated at Missouri Southern State in Joplin, Missouri, where he came under the coaching guidance of Chuck Williams, a fundamentalist and purist who helped his game immeasurably.

Merrifield, who is a very honest and sincere individual, mulled over an offer to play in Portugal a second year but advised the Ovar management in Portugal that he had the opportunity to go back to the Magicians and preferred to do so because it would give him the opportunity to acquire a better knowledge of the game of basketball under the able guidance of Marques Haynes.

In addition, Merrifield was very well aware of the fact that Haynes will not hold back a player from advancing to a more lucrative basketball position, if one becomes available.

The owner-coach of the Magicians projects the possibility that, "In view of the fact that Paul Merrifield is just 25 years-old, there is a likelihood that he might be able, ultimately, to latch onto an NBA team. All this young fellow needs is exposure and he's going to get it with our team since we play 250 games in and around every community that fields basketball teams, both in the United States and Canada, and his play has to come to the attention of NBA scouts, who are on the lookout constantly for new youngsters who have the potential to make their respective team squads."

Annual report of Cohasset Cable

American Cablesystems recently presented a check for $609.50 and a report on cable TV progress for 1984 to the Board of Selectmen and the Cohasset Cable Advisory Committee.

According to General Manager Stephen Farquhar, American Cablesystems now serves over 12,000 subscribers in Scituate, Cohasset, Norwell, Hull, Hanover, and Hingham. There are currently 1219 subscribers in Cohasset.

Accomplishments during the first year of Cohasset cable television include the establishment of a preventative maintenance program for signal quality, expansion of repair hours to include evenings and Sundays and live coverage of Town Meeting and various town activities.

The $609 check represents the cablesystem's annual franchise fee.

In Farquhar's report to selectmen and the Cohasset Cable Advisory Committee, it was noted that the studio, editing and portable equipment is all fully operational and the programming hours are expanding.

Workshop training which was started in January, 1984, continues. One hundred sixty eight residents have been trained in television production and 21 have completed training in editing and advanced studio production.

CC—TV also has a character generator, which is used to put messages on community interest on Channel 3. This C.G. has been used to put on 964 messages of community interest in 1984.

In the past year, CC-TV has covered events such as the Cohasset-By-The-Sea Road race, Town Meeting, Concerts on the Common, White Christmas, Music in Our Schools, Cohasset Bloodmobile, Cohasset Bike Race, the selectmen and school committee, Christmas Concert and FirstFest. Cohasset Cablesystems has worked with the Cohasset Rotary, the Chamber of Commerce, the South Shore Art Center, the Cohasset Chapter of the American Red Cross, the Cohasset Swim Center, the Social Service League, the First Parish Church, the Second Congregational Church, the Recreation Department, the Historical Society, the school department, and the school athletic department.

Four regular series include Regional Requests, Rock After Dark, You Are The Light of the World, and Rok Tok. These shows are produced weekly and continue to provide valuable TV production experience to the volunteers involved.

Cohasset Community television created 186 hours of programming, including special events, regular shows and numerous local sports. The system cablecast over 600 hours of programs on Channel 3, from May through December, 1984. This process of cablecasting was done by the seven interns under the supervision of Chief Programmer Jeffrey Rhind. These interns provided much creative and operational support to the program director throughout the year.

According to Farquhar, "Within a period of 12 months, Cohasset Community Television has evolved from ideas to reality, from a concept of local volunteer TV to the existance of a fully operational TV studio creating exciting informative shows that bring the best and the brightest of Cohasset to all its cable subscribers."

loss of Desiree and sorrow for her family."

Although some school-related field trips were cancelled the following day, Streeter said the school had no control over the state-scheduled boys basketball game which was to be played Wednesday night. "If we had any control over the scheduling, we would not be playing," he said.

Funeral arrangements for Desiree Yess are being completed by the Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer Street.

Visiting hours will be from 6 - 9 p.m., Friday.

A funeral Mass will be celebrated Saturday at 10 a.m. in St. Anthony's Church.

Out-Of-District Tuition to Rise

In its continuing efforts to increase revenue, the South Shore Regional School Committee approved a $400 hike in tuition payments for students who attend Vo-Tech, but live outside the region. The annual cost will rise from $3,350 to $3,750.

This year, 53 students from non-member towns attend Vo-Tech. Leonard Cody, head of the school's Guidance Department, predicts that the figure will remain about the same next year. Cody said that the level of non-region enrollment depends upon how many students from the region sign up. "We can only take so many students," said Cody, "and we have to serve our towns first."

☐Bruce and Mary Edmonds of Pond Street fame are once again preening like peacocks over their grandson's latest feat. Peter Lawrence has been a ski racing competitor for three years in the United States Ski Association. In competition at A-Basin a couple of weekends ago, he qualified for the Junior Olympics to be held this month at Winter Park. Peter took first place in the giant slalom, third in the slalom. He races for Keystone. Peter is the son of Paul and Joan Lawrence of Cody Park, and is also the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence of Spring Street in Cohasset.

☐Phillip and Joanne Lehr are walking around with big smiles on their faces — they are brand new parents! Their son is Robert Joseph Arthur Lehr, a name that is longer than he is at the moment! Congratulations to all.

☐Speaking of basketball, this Sunday (St. Pat's Day) will be lots of fun. The Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club will present the Harlem Magicians, with Marques Haynes featured, against the Cohasset All-Stars in the High School gym at 3 p.m.
Advance tickets are $4 for adults, $3 for students. At the door, tickets will be $5 and $4 dollars. Horizon Video and Good Sport, as well as booster club members, all have tickets. Preliminary recreation league foul shooting and lay-up contests will be played first, starting at 2. Sounds like a basketball lovers dream! The raffle drawing will also be held, so there will certainly be a fun-filled day.

☐Ozzie Ingram and Al Odermatt were both involved in a kick-off dinner last week. They were among the 800 people that were at the Sheraton-Tara in Framingham for the Kick-off dinner for the Cancer Fund. They are the representatives for the South Shore. Peter Mahigan and Mary Richardson, both of Chronicle, were there to start the "crusade chronicle." Next month is Cancer Month, with Mr. Ingram and Mr. Odermatt South Shore Unit directors.

☐Congratulations to the Cohasset Drama Club, another CHS team that is a winner! Keep up the good work, gang!

☐Great news from Germany — Schweinfurt, to be exact — from Mike Mahoney, to be precise. Mike, who is serving with the Army over there, has just received word from the Department of the Army that he has been nominated to West Point. Good going, Pfc. Mike Mahoney.

☐The art center is holding an open house on March 24 from 1 to 3 p.m. Meet instructors, enroll in classes and get an opportunity to see a special exhibit of works by Osgood and Deer Hill elementary schools.

☐Two former CHS students, now students at Providence College, have been named to the Dean's List for the Fall semester. Pamela Johnson of 60 Forest Ave., a humanities major and member of the Class of 1985, and Lauren Murphy of Surrey Drive, a political science major and also a member of the Class of 1985.

☐Anyone wishing to advertise in the Cohasset Rotary Club Telephone Directory and Buyers Guide is advised that the deadline for doing so is March 25. Advertising in the directory, together with donations from the public, have enabled the club to give scholarships to CHS grads for many years, with last years awards totalling $12,000.

☐There was quite a gathering last weekend in honor of a "big" birthday — Happy Birthday to Bob Donahue.

☐Lots of students home on spring break, and they are all supporting the basketball teams in their bids for the State titles. The crowds have been wonderful, and the teams have certainly provided everyone with more excitement than anyone would have dreamed of. Hats off to the teams and their coaches, and continued success. Hopefully we'll see everyone in Worcester at the Centrum.

☐Navy Ensign John J. Riley, son of John J. and Virginia M. Riley of 17 Haystack Lane, recently completed the Aviation Pre-Flight indoctrination School, with academic excellence.

During the six-week school conducted at Naval Aviation Schools Command, Naval Air Station, Pensacola, FL, Riley was introduced to the naval aviation environment and given instruction in basic aviation related subjects.

A 1980 graduate of Milton Academy, Milton, and a 1984 graduate of the U.S. Naval Academy, Annapolis, MD, with a Bachelor of Science degree, he joined the Navy in July 1976.

☐Barbara Dalrymple has joined the Hull office of the Jack Conway Company, according to manager Peter Murray.

A Boston University graduate with a bachelor of science degree in business administration, Dalrymple has also taken income tax courses. She has worked in the finance and computer fields and also managed her own ceramics business.

Dalrymple is a member of the Parent Student Organization at Cohasset High School and is Class Advisor for the Junior Class. She was also a member of various sports booster clubs.

Dalrymple lives in Cohasset with her husband, Bruce, who is Vice President of Purchasing for Howard Johnson's. They have three children — Sandy, 22; Susan 20, and Douglas, 16.

A difficult decision

Selectmen had to make a difficult choice this week. It was not theirs to make in the privacy of a closed door Executive Session. It was done in full view of the public. And for once, there was an audience.

Selectmen, in brief, unpretentious statements, told Fire Chief Martin Dooley that his contract would not be renewed when it expires December 31 of this year.

Their reasons were spread before the chief and the attendees, for all to hear. There was no grand scheme, no voices raised.

No one spoke against the move. And, thankfully, no one, including the numerous firefighters sitting across the aisle from their chief at the meeting, applauded selectmen's actions. Everything was civil and proper.

Yes, the chief was bitter and had some things to say about losing the best employment he ever had. Who wouldn't? After all, who would like to be swallowed up in front of everyone and spit out? It's happened throughout his two years in Cohasset.

Sometimes we wondered why the chief would prefer to remain in a town so divided in its opinion of him. There was no one neutral on the subject of Martin Dooley. You were either for or ag'n him.

But it was his choice to stay, and for his tenacity he must be given credit. His firefighters have not been with him for a long time, almost the entire two years. It is a difficult, if not impossible task to command a department that is in constant battle against your every move.

But, looking at all sides of this human situation, we feel selectmen made the correct decision.

We saw this last year when the firefighters attempted to bring charges against their chief. Although no formal charges were ever substantiated, we learned a lot about our fire chief. We saw a man who came from a different state with many years of firefighting under his belt. This man was born and bred to fight fires. He knew the in's and out's, the how's and why's of fighting fires. If anyone was ever caught in a blaze, we realized then that Martin Dooley would be the best man to respond.

But we also saw a man who came to a new department crippled by one massive flaw. He did not know how to handle his personnel.

Get him to a fire and watch him in action. But ask Martin Dooley to communicate with his men, and he was handicapped. It's no secret that one minute Martin can be as sweet as honey, and turn into a fiery tyrant the next.

He was not the leader we needed in that transitional period - a man who could sit with his men and talk about concerns and problems. He'd blow up one minute, and try to buddy up with his staff the next.

Now, we aren't saying the Cohasset firefighters are a bunch of Boy Scouts either. They're responsible, in at least some small way, for the myriad of problems and grievances spewing from the department the past two years.

But they deserve someone who can listen to them, who knows how to include his men in some decisions, gather their input and suggestions in an earnest manner. Mutual respect is the element that was lacking on both sides from the beginning.

Maybe we've all learned some lessons from this difficult example. We hope the department will continue under new leadership next year and prosper with a new chief.

For Martin Dooley, we wish him no bitterness. Only the best. We hope he once again finds that best job in the world, and that this time it's for real.

Boys aim for state final action

By Mike Berger

With a sheer mind of basketball destruction, the Cohasset boys basketball team picked up the level of intensity to a higher level and blew away the Wareham Vikings to enter the finals of the EMass Division III finals.

"Awesome" was one of the words used by Coach Eddie Minelli to describe his team's 98-60 victory Saturday night before 4,000 fans at Brockton High School.

Transforming energy into emotion, the Skippers seemed determined to show the high school basketball world how good the team could play.

Wednesday night the Skippers were due to play Umana, 17-4, in the Division III finals and Minelli emphatically believes Umana will be the best team the undefeated 23-0 Skippers will play this year.

"They're better than New Bedford, they have played tougher Boston schools, are very intelligent, have more size and and are quicker. They will be the best team we have faced all year," he said.

But what fueled Cohasset's entry into the basketball finals was a scary moment against Medfield when the Skippers were in danger of losing everything with a minute to go in the semi-final game of the Division III South Sectionals last week.

Medfield, hitting 85 to 90 percent of bomb after bomb wiped out an 11-point Skipper lead to take leads twice in the final minute of play.

But the Cohasset fans became the omni-present sixth man on the court. With a minute to go, the crowd was electrifying as Minelli used hand signals to tell his players what to do in the timeouts.

"The noise was deafening. I think the kids realized they were in serious danger of losing everything and the crowd noise lifted them up," Minelli said.

Forward Phil Bernstein converted an offensive rebound and center James Creed followed with a crucial defensive rebound, was fouled and cashed in on the free throws to ice the victory, 56-53.

Medfield hit eight of its first nine shots in the fourth quarter and led 51-50 with 59 seconds remaining on the clock.

"And their shooters kept hitting. Kids we never expected to hit kept shooting 20 footers, 18 footers and didn't miss," Minelli said.

However, the importance of role playing, the key strength of the Skipper team, surfaced in the fourth quarter.

Phil Bernstein, who hadn't scored all game, rebounded a Dave MacDonald miss and put Cohasset up 54-53 with 20 seconds left. Then, defense and rebounding clinched the win.

But it wasn't easy. Tony Bogarty grabbed an errant Medfield pass but the referee called traveling and Medfield had another chance.

A 14-footer by Medfield's Mike Rogers was in and out and Creed grabbed the rebound and was fouled with four seconds left. He hit both free throws.

Bogarty and forward Brian Edwards tied for scoring honors with 18. Creed added ten points and other Cohasset scorers were MacDonald, 4, Bernstein, 2 and guard Bobby Schultz hit for two jump shots in the second half for four important points.

Minelli said the Medfield scare hit home to all of the Skippers. "I think that game told us we had to pick up the intensity. I think most of our season our attitude was play not to lose. Against Wareham, the feeling was the same as it was against New Bedford, play to win.

"It didn't matter who the team was. No one would have beaten us Saturday night. We were flawless."

Wareham's fatal mistake was trying to run with the Skippers. Medfield slowed the game down and was successful.

The Cohasset defensive press bothered the Wareham Vikings. Creed, blocking nine shots and hauling down 17 rebounds in only one half of play, was the other defensive intimidator.

Cohasset led 10-0 after 3:22 had expired and 23-7 after the first quarter. It was 53-20 at halftime and 45 points, 76-31 in the third quarter. The bench made its debut halfway through the second quarter.

Bogarty led the scoring attack with 28 points and Bryan Edwards followed with 24 points. Other Cohasset scorers were: MacDonald, 10, Creed, 8, Bernstein, 4, Shultz, 4, Tom Larson, 2, Mark-Crough,3, David Shumaker, 2 and freshman Mark Smith, a 6-2 freshman, made his debut with 13 points including two three point plays.

If Cohasset beats Umana Wednesday, it's on to the Worcester Centrum Saturday afternoon for the Massachusetts finals against the Western finalist.

Outstanding employee

Claire P. Donovan of 55 Pond St., was selected as a recipient of the Commonwealth Citation for Outstanding Performance by the Department of Youth Services. The award was presented at a dinner hosted by Governor Michael S. Dukakis on Dec. 11 at the Boston Park Plaza Hotel, at which he personally recognized the accomplishments of outstanding employees of the Commonwealth.

The Commonwealth Citation for Outstanding Performance is part of the new Massachusetts Performance Recognition Program initiated in July, 1984 by Governor Dukakis and implemented by the state's Department of Personnel Administration.

It is an annual event that has been designed to encourage and reward the efforts and accomplishments of outstanding Commonwealth employees. Each year, selected employees or groups of employees in each state agency who have demonstrated exemplary work performance will be awarded the Commonwealth Citation, based upon nominations provided by their supervisors or colleagues.

"We will offer the customer a wide range of choice items. We expect to do very well in Cohasset," he adds.

As part of their commitment to the consumer, Bildner says the company will include a consumer advisory panel which will meet monthly. They will provide company officials with feedback from the community, regarding the store's selection and service.

"J. Bildner and Sons will be an upscale, unique type of supermarket. It's a cross between the nicest supermarket you have ever shopped in, and a very exclusive gourmet shop," he says.

Renovations to the former Corner Meat Market have begun and will take about three months to complete.

DON'T BURN THE ANTS
POEM FOR T.K. ON HIS 12TH

Remember that picture of you
With the dandelion?
When I think of you
In years to come
I'll remember you
As a posie.

You were born laughing
And everybody who saw you Laughed, too,
And wished
To taste
Your sunshine.

When you were seven
You chose to Stand up for a friend.
Your teacher said,
"He is incredibly kind."
I beamed for you.

You are warm
And kind and sunny
And funny and
I don't want anything
To ever change that.
But I see a man coming.

Last summer he and Bart
Set fire to some ants
And I yelled,
"Don't burn the ants!"
They laughed; afterwards
They talked of love.

Your love shines —
A liquid stream so pure.
I stop to bathe in you.
I see your man
And think that
He will do.

There is a need for planned development

To the Editor:

I read your article "Future Growth Reviewed" with interest. It is encouraging that there is some effort being put into this subject.

There seems to be no shortage of poor planning examples in Cohasset. The ghosts of these are haunting us today. For instance, everyone's favorite subject — the sewer system — is the result of overloading and adding to a system with a known finite capacity. The consequences were easy to predict. The town is left to face a massive financial project (whichever solution is selected) that will have an impact on every taxpayer in town.

There are towns that have taken the initiative to preserve the quality of life that make living in them attractive. The South Shore is experiencing a lot of growth. Taking a look at western and northern suburbs of Boston is a sobering revelation. With the better transportation networks serving those areas, the growth has been much more rapid than on the South Shore. Perhaps we are lucky to be able to have a "sneak preview" of what fate awaits us if we do not establish growth guidelines, zoning regulations, ect., to deal with with the accelerating growth on the South Shore.

I suggest that Cohasset decide for itself what size it wants to be and what the character of the town should be. Let's not have these things dictated to us by completed development projects that, like an abandoned child left on our doorstep, must be cared for with taxpayers dollars. Let's set the guidelines and stick to them and keep Cohasset a nice place to live and raise families.

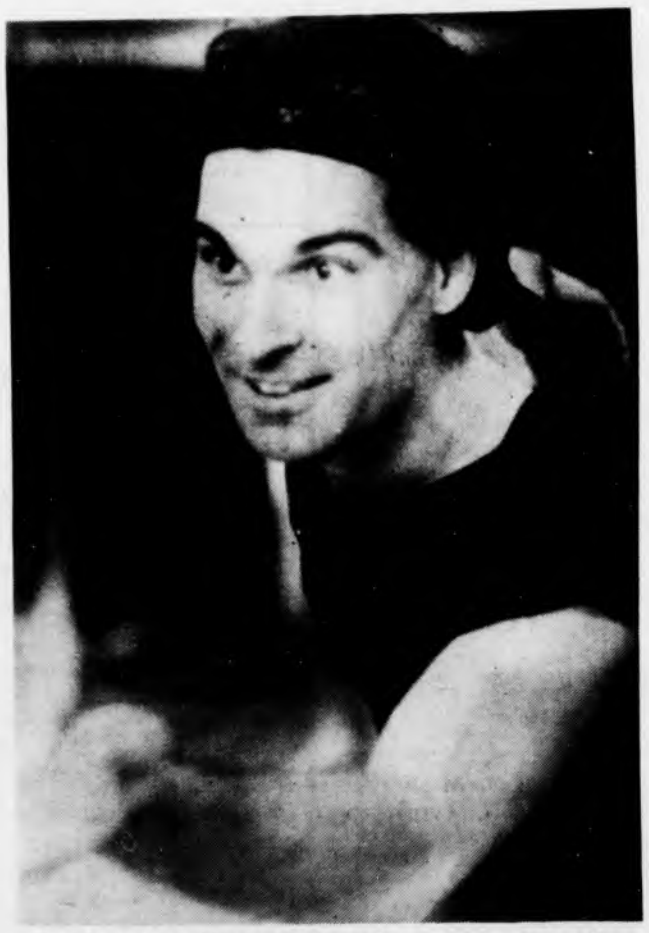
Osgood artist-in-residence

Syma showed us the film of Captain Silas! We observed different materials for characters and scenery. Peanuts were people, buttons were money, the sea was made of popcorn! Trucks rolled on spools. A shoe served as a sailboat. The dog was a fishing lure, a shaving brush dived in the sea as a dolphin. When a sea serpent appeared, it took us a while to figure out that it was a red washcloth! Most of Truck Island and Sugar Island were constructed of sugar cubes.

This was a wonderful introduction to Syma, our artist-in-residence for 15 days.



All children will design a diorama about their favorite fairy tale or folk tale. So please send a shoebox in for this project. We do have a few extras, so don't be overly concerned if you have trouble locating one.

A "core group" of children from each class will work with Syma to construct a large installation (a stage set for a play to be written on the ultimate fairy tale) in our hall!

The program was coordinated by the school and Syma with assistance from the PSO Arts Enrichment Committee.

Marie Price, kindergarten teacher, and Sue DeMichele, parent volunteer, are providing on-site coordination and assistance.

Funding was provided for by grants from the Institute for the Arts, ~~which~~ is funded by the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities and is a project of the Education Collaborative, and the Cohasset Arts Lottery. The Parent School Organization (PSO), and the school department also helped fund the program.

Candidates Corner

James L. Gallagher

During the past five years I have been a member of the Cohasset Recreation Commission, serving as Vice-Chairman since 1983. Because of that position, I have been involved with town affairs in general, and have had specific interaction with most all town boards, committees, and departments. As the Recreation Commission laison to both the Harbor Study and Cable TV committees, I have been afforded much insight to the various town-wide projects, development, and concerns.

Further, I have been very active in numerous interactions with both the Board of Selectmen and the Advisory Committee during the past few years. This experience has offered me further insight to various problems and concerns facing residents and town government.

As a volunteer coach and administrative coordinator for a large number of youth and adult recreation programs, I have developed a broad-based knowledge of community needs. I feel that my years of first-hand exposure and experience in a wide spectrum of functions relating to a number of aspects of town government, qualify me for election to the Board of Selectmen.

Having been a resident of Cohasset for 25 years, with every intention of remaining a resident in future years, not only offers me the necessary insight to the needs of all residents, but makes my interest and concern for our community a personal one.

I am able and willing to dedicate the necessary time and effort to do the job well. For the consideration of your vote, I stand on my prior record of service to the Town of Cohasset.

Chamber criticizes planning bylaw changes

By Lisa J. Messersmith

At a planning board hearing last Thursday night designed to hear public opinion on several proposed zoning bylaw changes, Joseph Quinn, representative from the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, criticized board members saying the changes "will cause a great harm without commensurate benefit to our town, . . . an elitist attempt to alter Cohasset's historically balanced socio-economic blend."

"The proposed changes have been developed in a virtual vacuum and will result in severe increases in taxes and an erosion of the existing tax base," Quinn said. He and other Cohasset businessmen called for a "temporary moratorium on all zoning by-law changes" and recommended the formulation of a master plan for the town.

The Chamber of Commerce submitted these words in writing to the planning board.

"We do not feel we are elitist," planning board chairman Christine Bassett said. By bringing the three residential area lot sizes under the bylaw to the sizes built on under current practice "cannot be called snob zoning."

The planning board's concerns for increasing the residential lot sizes were drainage and density. The members want to ensure that further development in the town does not put unbearable strain on the land.

The tax rate will be effected, member Robert Sturdy said, "if uncontrolled, irresponsible development" is allowed to get a foothold in Cohasset.

The planning board voted to recommend all of the zoning bylaw changes. Also recommended was the water supply protection moratorium zoning bylaw.

The definitions for maximum permitted coverage and structural coverage will be recommended at town meeting, and yard required and height definitions were redefined by the board.

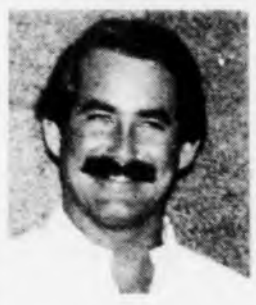
The minimum required lot area for residential area "A" will be recommended to change from 12,000 square feet to 18,000 square feet. For residential area "B" the lot requirement will change from 20,000 square feet to 35,000 square feet. And for area "C" the requirement will change from 30,000 square feet to 60,000 square feet.

Also to be recommended at town meeting will be a change in height in relation to the distance to the nearest lot line in a residential zone. "No point of the building shall be higher than its horizontal distance to the nearest lot line."

In the buffer zones between residential and commercial areas several changes were made. No building or structure shall be built within 100 feet of a residential zone. A 30-foot green strip shall also be maintained on a commercial district if it abuts a residential area. Another 20-foot green strip must also be maintained along any street frontage of a commercial industry or business.

Cluster zoning was another area of concern for the members of the planning board. The planning board will recommend a "maximum of 25 percent to be covered by impervious surface, at least 45 percent of the land to be dedicated to open space, and no more than 25 percent of the open space may be called marginal land.

The planning board also considered a change in the parking zoning bylaw. Although this change does not fundamentally alter the parking bylaw, this change will "give a good base," Bassett said, on which to work to change the entire parking bylaw next year. The members wanted further time to study the parking conditions in Cohasset before changing them.



Under the recommended change, no more than one third of the required parking spaces "may remain undeveloped or set aside as a green area at the sole discretion of the planning board . . . until such time as the planning board may require that all or part of the undeveloped parking space be built." This change was designed to give more flexibility in the site plan review process.

Three citizens' petitions called for amending the parking bylaws for Cohasset, calling for seven spaces for each 1,000 square feet of net floor area, parking spaces for sub-compact cars, and decreasing the space for regular sized cars.

The planning board voted to not recommend these three changes in the parking bylaw because the members believe the "whole parking subsection should be rewritten" after more time is taken to study the parking situation.

The recommendations proposed by the members of the planning board will be voted on at Town Meeting.

League to a mere nine points. Third, all of Cohasset's baseline people shut off all attempts by Nauset to generate an inside game. Finally, and most importantly, Fallon said, "Nauset had trouble with our full court pressure in the third quarter, and it eventually wore them down."

Offensively, Sarah led all scorers with 13 points, followed by Tracey , who had 12. Fallon also cited Janet as having an exceptional game, as well as scoring nine points.

Friday, the girls continued their winning streak as they stormed past Medway, 48-30. Expecting a tough opponent, Fallon was very pleased with his team's performance, especially during the second half. After a grueling first half, Cohasset was up by only one point. By the fourth quarter, however, the girls were fired up and outscored Medway, 17-6. Fallon called this one of the major factors leading to the victory. In addition, Fallon felt that the game turned in Cohasset's favor when they picked up some key points after attacking Medway's feeble pressure.

Once again, defensively the baseline players, consisting of Anne O'Leary, Vicki Spooner, Tracy Fitzpatrick, and Carla Lucas were the key to the win. These four not only controlled the boards, but they played a major role in limiting Medway's high scorer, who normally averaged 23 points, to only ten points.

Sarah continued to lead Cohasset in scoring with 13 points. Anne picked up 10 points and 13 rebounds. Fallon referred to Anne's performance on Friday as "phenomenal." Tracy had nine points, followed by Carla with seven and Janet with six.

According to Fallon, "This win was a total team effort as the well-balanced distribution of points would suggest."

So, now it's off to Worcester and the state finals. Good luck to a great team!

Swimming honors . . .

Annie Henry, a seventh-grade student at Cohasset Jr. High School, placed first in 11/12 figures and first in the 11/12 solo category at the New England Age Group Synchronized Swimming Qualifying Meet in Springfield on Sunday, Feb. 24.

Annie's high figure scores also placed her third in the 13/14 age group. Her first place finish will enable her to represent New England in the Eastern Regional Age Group Meet the week-end of March 23-24. The top three solos, duets, trios, and teams from this meet will go on the International Age Group Trials in April.

Annie also swam in the age 15-18 team routine with six other swimmers from the South Shore YMCA in Quincy. The team placed third and also qualified to go on to the regional meet. The South Shore YMCA team is coached by Annie's mother, Mrs. Carol (Wm) Henry, who was very proud of her team's performance.

The Law and You

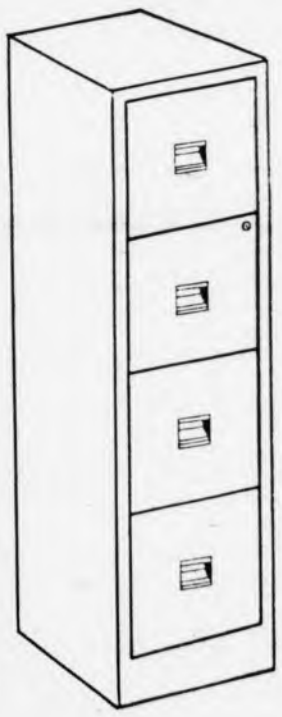
DAMAGES

In the award of money damages to the winning party in a contract suit, courts face the problem of determining how much the loser should pay. The court's primary aim is to enable the prevailing party to gain the same position he would have had if the contract had been properly carried out. The court first attempts to make a determination as to how much the loser's performance was worth. If the winner has completely performed, that amount goes to him. The court will also determine how much the winner's remaining performance would have cost him. It then deducts that amount from the value of the loser's promised performance, awarding the plaintiff the difference.



Sometimes people are entitled to damages and don't even know that they have a legal avenue open to them, so that they can bring the matter to court. Because the legal system is such a complicated one, it makes sense to consult with an attorney who will have the answers and the expertise you need. LAW OFFICES OF RICHARD PRICE, 760 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Rt. 3A, Cohasset, 383-9882. I am available daily by appt.

Politicus — by David A. Mittell, Jr.

A few good thoughts on St. Patrick's Day

It has been done so well and it has happened so quietly that until we think about it we're hardly aware that anything has happened at all. The typical South Shore town, predominantly Yankee and Yankee-run between 1620 and 1950, has absorbed and is now being run (and very well run) by a variety of Irish, Italian, Jewish, etc. descendents of 19th century pilgrims — not 17th century ones.

This has happened without rancor and without displacement. The English descended Yankees are still here and very much present on planning boards, school boards, and boards of selectmen. Largely Protestant, they work side by side their largely Catholic Irish and Italian neighbors. They shop together, they play racquetball together, and their children go to school together.

All of this is no news because it is entirely good news. I state the obvious because there is a place in the world where fond South Shore neighbors have blood ties on separate sides of a bloody quarrel. With the approach of St. Patrick's Day that place, Northern Ireland, inevitably gets into the news with the cant of its extremists. Ian Paisley calls the Pope Hitler's living agent, while the Irish Republican Army marks the occasion by murdering nine members of the Ulster Constabulary.

The Old World learnt its democracy from the New, and the New World sowed its democracy in Virginia counties and in Massachusetts towns. Massachusetts men practiced their independence in open town meetings for a century before they fought for it in 1775. The reason why there is never any news here today of "confessional" differences between Irish Catholics and English Episcopalians is that the open town meeting is a place where everyone's rights are respected. The democratic method continues to work its temporal miracle.

In Ireland the troubles have been going on at least since the Normans invaded Ireland about 100 years after they invaded England. Even before that the Celts had been buffeted by history and pushed from the heartland of Europe to the extremities of Scotland, Ireland, Cornwall, and Brittany. When Caesar wrote of conquering Gaul or "Gallia," he was only using the Latin version of the word we call "Gaelic" or "Celtic."

What is the connection between historic troubles in Europe, St. Patrick's Day, and good neighbors on the South Shore? It is this: for good or for ill we have the potential of exerting great influence on events in Northern Ireland. When we, the descendents of English paupers and Irish peasants, live in harmony together, we show our flesh and blood in Ulster that their hatreds are not inevitable. But it is equally true that when the Irish Republican Army lobs 40 pound mortar shells into a roomful of scared policemen, they have paid for those mortars in large part with American — including Boston — money.

The extremists on the Protestant side make no bones about regarding their Catholic neighbors as subhuman, and therefore their murder akin to destroying pestilent animals. But the Catholic extremists tend to embroider their terror in romance and ideology. Marxist led, they cut and shift like all Marxists and tailor their rhetoric to their audience. It is thus that they and their fronts (such as Noraid) cultivate Irish-American dollars by likening themselves to our Founding Fathers. It is thus that some Irish-Americans in Greater Boston, whose traditional respect for the police is comparable to their respect for the priesthood, allow themselves to be duped into making financial contributions that purchase the mortars that murder the policemen in the country of their ancestors.

For the Irish-American who loves the land of his ancestors, probably the best argument against supporting the I.R.A. is this: "Do you really want to hand over Ireland to these people?" These are people who have been begged by the Pope on his hands and knees to forsake their violent ways, and have refused. These are people who (cynically and as a tactical maneuver) liken themselves to George Washington as they blow up innocent Christmas shoppers in London. Turn Ireland over to them?

It makes no more sense for those who love Ireland to turn Ireland over to the I.R.A. than it would have made for those who love America to have turned this nation over to the "Weather Underground" in 1970. The Weather Underground set off bombs and thrived awhile on our contemporary troubles. They vanished from prominence as soon as we were able to reestablish tranquility and decency as the dominant method of political dialogue.

The Irish Republican Army and its clone, the Ulster Defense Association, only continue to thrive because the troubles continue. On both sides they are deeply committed to the troubles as an alternative to any form of compromise. They are unalterably opposed to tranquility except on the basis of the dictatorship of their own ideas.

Our role as we celebrate St. Patrick's Day and all the good things it symbolizes for us — Christianity, our rich Irish heritage, etc. — isn't to find the solution to these historic troubles. But in the democracy we successfully practice in our daily lives, we who revere both Ireland and England can be a powerful example. And in refusing to give money to the I.R.A., the U.D.A., and their fronts in America, we can, like the doctor taking the Hippocratic Oath, pledge at least to "do no harm."

If the Pope can beg as much, one reporter can fall in line and do the same.

Beacon Hill Roll Call

The House and Senate continued to meet informally and there were no roll calls during March 4 - 8. Formal sessions are likely to be scheduled the week of March 11.

This week, "Beacon Hill Roll Call" previews 10 key bills which will be considered as the 1985 session gets underway. These bills are expected to be the source of much debate in the House and Senate in a few weeks.

KIDS' TESTIMONY— This bill would allow children who are victims of physical or sexual abuse to testify out of court on videotape. Sponsors, noting 15 states have similar laws, say it will allow children to be free from the pressures of the courtroom and the alleged abuser and claim many prosecutors currently are refusing to prosecute cases because of the traumatic effect on children.

POLLUTION VIOLATORS— A bill authorizing the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering to assess administrative penalties for pollution law violations was approved in the Senate but delayed in the House last year.

This year, environmentalists and industry representatives have agreed to a number of changes in the bill which they hope will result in some version of the measure being passed. The bill has already been given unanimous approval by the Natural Resources Committee.

MIDWIFERY— A controversial bill heard by the Health Care Committee would create a Board of Registration in midwifery. The measure would require midwife candidates, who would not have to be doctors or nurses, to have a diploma or certificate from an approved training program and would establish regulations to test and license midwives.

Sponsors say such a board would keep unqualified people out of the profession and would give well-deserved professional status to those who were qualified. Opponents say the bill would increase danger to mothers and babies and would lower the standards of births in the state.

IMMUNIZATION— The Health Care Committee has heard testimony on a bill requiring students to present proof of immunization against diseases such as mumps or measles before the students enter a college. A similar bill was filed last year, but the recent outbreak at Boston University has fueled hopes for passage of the measure.

COMPARABLE WORTH— A special committee studying comparable worth has filed a bill requiring the State Department of Personnel Administration to review state government jobs and determine "equitable compensation relationships" between male dominated and female dominated jobs.

Sponsors say something must be done about unfair pay disparities, but opponents say the measure as written might tie the hands of personnel administrators and undermine the collective bargaining process.

SMALL BUSINESS— Possible cutbacks in the federal Small Business Administration Program may give new life to a refiled bill creating a state small business authority and development bank.

Sponsors say the measure would offer help for small businesses across the state. They note that during hearings around the state when the bill was first filed in 1980, small business owners claimed they were overtaxed, overregulated and received little recognition and help form the state government.

BAN ADS— The Government Regulations Committee has heard testimony on various proposals to prohibit alcoholic beverage advertising. Sponsors say the ban would help combat the alcohol abuse problem while opponents say it is unconstitutional and that education efforts and special programs are better suited to solve the alcohol problem.

MAIL REGISTRATION— Members of MassPIRG and the League of Women Voters have both said they are considering conducting a drive to put the question of allowing mail-in voter registration on the ballot in 1986 if the legislature does not pass the proposal this year.

Sponsors say the system has worked well in 21 states and would truly open up the electoral system. Opponents say the procedure would be costly, time consuming for city and town clerks, and will open the registration system to fraud.

LT. GOVERNOR— The office of Lieutenant Governor has been vacant since January when then Lieutenant Governor and now Senator John Kerry resigned.

Although the state constitution has no specific provision to fill the vacancy, the sponsor of a bill to call a special election bases his bill on sections of the constitution which he says would permit an election.

Several other bills being considered would actually change the constitution to allow a vacancy to be filled the next time it occurs.

SCHOOL BUSES— Supporters of seat belts in school buses say the belts would save lives while opponents say the belts can actually cause serious injuries. The conflicting arguments were heard by the Public Safety Committee as it considered bills filed to require the belts on all school buses.

Another proposal would prohibit students from standing in school buses.

After 20 years, Sec'y Johnston hasn't changed his tune

By Jane Lane

Twenty years ago, armed with a Bachelor's degree in history, Philip Johnston began a career in social work. Since that time, he has progressed upward on the administrative ladder, carrying with him the burden of memories - of days and years spent with the homeless, disabled and despairing.

Now, as Secretary of the Executive Office of Human Services, Johnston works not in the trenches, but among the officials who call the shots and hold the purse strings. And, although the setting has changed significantly, the early ideologies have not. His hand remains extended to the poor and disabled. His other hand appeals for funds to support that help.

Johnston, in a move unprecedented in recent state administrations, is holding a series of public hearings on the proposed FY86 Human Services budget. That proposed package represents a 7.4 percent increase over last year's budget, and includes several new services and programs, specifically aimed toward the homeless and children.

But it must be noted, Johnston emphasized during a meeting last week at the Mariner, that the budget increase is almost totally offset by increased savings and revenues from established programs. The highly successful Workfare is an example of one program that has resulted in substantial savings for the state. The employment program provides welfare recipients with training for specific jobs. Since its inception 14 months ago, the program has resulted in the placement of almost 13,000 mothers in fulltime employment.

A priority of the Johnston administration, he said repeatedly, is to provide programs and services for the state's 10,000 homeless, and to protect and service the increasing number of child abuse and neglect cases reported each year.

Another significant program proposed for the next fiscal year is a major capital plan, encompassing "tens of millions of dollars" to rehabilitate "disgraceful" state institutes for the mentally ill, and to construct state prisons. According to the Marshfield resident, this proposed expenditure request is expected to fill the gap caused by overcrowded jail conditions and the continual decay of state hospitals.

Johnston, when asked if he would recommend sending anyone for treatment to a state hospital admitted, "I don't think so. I would try for a private hospital. Unfortunately, they are accessible only to the wealthy."

A series of out-patient treatment centers for the mentally ill have cropped up in the South Shore during recent years. Community services provided to all mentally ill persons is an increasingly popular alternative to housing patients in state institutes, he added, noting that hospitalization costs the Massachusetts taxpayer about $30,000 per year per patient.

Regarding the administration's stepped-up efforts to construct prisons, Johnston noted that the current plan calls for construction upon current prison sites. With the hundreds of acres of state-owned real estate, a prison could be built upon a portion of the land, and revenue-generating income, such as private developments, would be placed upon the remaining property.

Talking with the Mariner editors last Friday, Johnston noted that of those diagnosed as chronically mentally ill, the majority are in the 20's. He said that following the move in the 1960's and 70's to relocate patients away from institutions, there must be more subsequent community care. Residential care programs, which by tradition have been controversial measures, must continue. It's up to the governor, Johnston said, to resolve the political issue of where and how to locate half-way homes in local neighborhoods.

"Several of these facilities, including a home for mentally retarded residents in Scituate, have been done very well. It was accepted well by the community. Unfortunately, it takes just one person to upset the whole thing in these cases," he said.

Currently the Department of Mental Health is the largest agency under the banner of Human Services. It employs 18,000 staff people, about 35 percent of the entire state employee force. Although there are only about 2200 in-patients being treated by the department, more than 300,000 patients are serviced in some variation.

Referring to the Department of Youth Services, Johnston explained how growth in staff and number of cases has conversely resulted in better service. He noted that in the past few years, there has been an 89 percent increase in the number of reported child abuse and neglect cases. "The irony," he said, " is that although there is a gradual increase, it signifies we are doing a better job. Through education and awareness, people are reporting these cases to us, and we in turn, provide the treatment for them."

Johnston, when asked if he would recommend sending anyone for treatment to a state (mental) hospital admitted, "I don't think so. I would try for a private hospital. Unfortunately, they are accessible only to the wealthy."

Johnston added a personal note of hope, saying with increased economic prosperity, there is usually a residual decline in the stress that leads to such incidents. "In Massachusetts we are on an economic roll," Johnston stated. "Predictably, there should be less abuse than during a recession."

In a question and answer session later that day with local legislators, Johnston and members of his administration discussed the proposed $3.3 billion budget for next year.

Within the Thayer Public Library in Braintree, several area lawmakers and department officials discussed the pending fiscal picture and the problems these departments are attempting to resolve.

Standing before many of his former House collegues, Johnston explained the major priorities of his budget. Preventative services for the state's homeless is a top concern of his administration. Targeting the largely urban communities and providing them with well-run facilities is a goal for the coming year. According to the governor's cabinet secretary, permanent housing, employment and mental health services will result in taking many of these people off the street.

A $2 million bond authorization for the construction of facilities for the homeless is part of his pending agenda, Johnston said.

The second priority within the budget refers to services for children, those physically and emotionally abused and neglected. Through public awareness, more cases have been reported to authorities, evidence that the Department of Social Services and the Office for Children are completing their assigned tasks.

A thirty percent increase in the Office for Children budget, he said, is necessitated by the increased number of abuse reports, along with a stepped-up program to license and monitor day care facilities.

In the day care program alone, there is a proposed $17 million increase. That money will be alloted to an expansion of the state day care facilities, and employment and training of an increased number of staff. Salaries for those facility workers will be increased by a $7 million budget total. In order to attract and retain competent professional teachers, the salaries must remain competitive, Johnston said.

Several of the area legislators turned their focus to overcrowded prisons and the need to build new facilities. One bill filed this year in the House of Representatives calls for state prisons to be operated by private concerns. "Prisons for profit" would separate facilities for repeated drunk driving offenders from persons incarcerated for other offenses. Johnston noted this was an interesting, if not highly controversial subject that will be debated on the floor this year.

There were discussions centered on the battle between community hospitals versus health maintenance organizations, and the controversy of county-operated, state financed jails. Of the former, Johnston said his major objection is that HMO's have traditionally denied access to the elderly and the poor. Although there is one model plan in Worcester, he said the governor should initiate more such programs throughout the state.

There was also concern voiced about the increased need for nursing home care provided to a greater number of veterans in this state. Johnston said the office of Human Services has heard this claim repeatedly, and is in the process of contracting additional nursing home beds for these veterans.

All agreed the state must provide better continual information to the local communities and their representatives, when proposing locations for residential treatment facilities. Too many instances in the past, they said, the state has failed to communicate and the plans were dissolved in a maze of confusion and frustration. Recalling one such instance in Quincy, Rep. Brownell said residents there remain distrustful of the state "because they tried to slip in" a residential program without regard for neighbors and local officials.

At a later stop last week at the Coastline Community Counseling Center in Braintree, Johnston met with several of the staff members and board of directors. Greeting them with his support of their programs, Johnston listened to an outline of the newest services at the Braintree facility.

The latest program offered to the public deals with a preventative treatment for sexual abuse. Here, psychologists are working, in conjunction with the local police and District Attorney's office, with people who have sexually abused, or feel capable of abusing other people. Johnston, who claimed to have never been a liberal when deciding between incarceration and treatment, voiced his support of this innovative out-patient program.

A preventative child abuse program has also been developed by the center for use in South Shore school systems.

"Programs such as this, "Johnston noted, " are so important to me and the administration. The 1986 budget is really a budget for children, and you are showing a commitment to do these types of sensitive and difficult programs.

Financial seminar for women

Women, even those who regularly pay the family bills, generally are poorly informed about money matters.

To help prepare women to take charge of their lives, financially and legally, in the event they are left alone, the Social Service League of Cohasset will sponsor a seminar Wednesday, March 20 at 1 p.m. at the Walton Rodgers Hall, St. Stephen's Church.

The seminar is entitled, "Are you prepared? A subject that concerns everyone." Panelists will be Suzanne Ganley, investment counselor, Garnder and Preston Moss of Boston, and Attorney Anna H. Doherty of Marshfield. Refreshments will be served.

Statistics have shown most women will be on their own, losing their husbands through either death or divorce. This means they may not only have to deal with emotional problems, but also with reduced income, budgets, wills, taxes, estates, investments and other financial metters without necessary background.

Honors to local girl

Cheryl Turner, 17, of Cohasset and Karen Twomey, 17, of Hanson, both members of the Young Women's Organization of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in Hingham received a gold medallion necklace in recognition of their outstanding performance of goal-setting over a six year period.

The awards were made at a dinner party held at the home of Mrs. Harold Burnham in Duxbury. Burnham is president of the young women's group. The seventeen girls of the class, accompanied by parents, met to celebrate a new year of goal-setting and personal progress.

Where will Wompatuck children go to school?

By Elisabeth Gorfinkle

While Hingham may have a moral obligation, school Supt. Lewis Ernst says it does not have a legal obligation to enroll schoolchildren residing in Wompatuck State Park during the fall and spring months.

A growing number of families in the last two years have lived in the park's 175-site camping area while looking for jobs, housing or money to pay the rent. A few of these families have claimed the park as a legal residence and have asked Hingham to admit their children into the school system.

Two children were refused entry to Plymouth River Elementary School last year, and one teenager was not allowed into the high school this year, said Ernst. "My position will remain the same no matter how many kids try to enroll from the park. Once you start, you set a precedent," Ernst said recently.

"We don't consider Wompatuck a legal residence. And if we sneak kids in (to the school system), something can later go wrong like an accident which would qualify the kid for a special needs program (under Chapter 766)," he said.

"Once you start enrolling these children, you can't single them out and deny them a special needs program because they live in Wompatuck. I don't do business by committing the town, then finding out later the commitment is to a huge expenditure, which wasn't proper or perhaps legal," he said.

Gilbert Bliss, director of the state's Division of Forests and Parks which regulates Wompatuck, agrees with Ernst's position. He said regulations concerning camping will be reviewed during the annual regional hearings held March 27. And a policy which reinforces recreational instead of residential use will be in place by next fall.

"Hingham is the only community in the state where we have ever had this problem," he said. "I don't see any legitimate way a person can set up a residence in a campground."

But a Hingham church group and an attorney from the state's Department of Education disagree with Bliss and Ernst.

Dr. Robert Schooley, co-chairman of Hingham Congregational Church's outreach committee, said last week, "I feel the school committee is being short-sighted and self-serving. The main concern is with the school budget, not with the education of children."

Last fall the church's congregation was approached by a family that had moved from Abington to live in a pop-up trailer in Wompatuck, while looking for housing in Hingham. The family's daughter had been refused admittance to the high school.

The congregation's outreach committee responded by writing letters on behalf of the family to school officials in Hingham, Norwell and Cohasset (the 2,877-acre park is contained in those three towns and Scituate).

In November, the committee drafted a letter asking the Department of Education which towns were responsible for the child's education. The draft, submitted to the chairman of the Hingham School Committee, Dr. Robert Carr, prompted a closed meeting attended by church members, Carr, Hingham's selectmen, the town's counsel and an official from the Division of Forests and Parks, Schooley said.

"We first looked into a quiet enrollment, then we asked if we could pay tuition. We were told no because of their preoccupation with Chapter 766 for special education," he said.

The committee then sent the letter to the Department of Education. "We didn't want to involve the Commonwealth in a local matter. We weren't trying to open the floodgates of Wompatuck State Park campground to Hingham schools. We had just wanted that one girl to be allowed in (the high school)," he said.

Schooley said the committee would have been in favor of Norwell schools Supt. Robert Bunnell's hypothetical approach of immediately registering children from Wompatuck and coping with problems as they came up.

Schooley said he felt school systems have a moral obligation to see that these children receive schooling, even if it's just for about six weeks in the fall and spring.

The park limits stays in the campsite to 28 days from June 1 to Labor Day. Currently, no limit on stays are made from the time of the park's opening April 1 to the beginning of June, and from Labor Day to the park's closing Oct. 15.

Ernst said last week the church group had not approached the school committee with the idea of paying tuition. And towns which are willing to admit these children should realize that the state will not negotiate cases concerning Chapter 766.

Attorney Frederick Mandel from the Department of Education wrote back to the church group last December. His letter was sent on to Carr.

Mandel said he based his opinion that Hingham should allow the child to attend school on a broad definition of the word residence in the Massachusetts General Laws Chapter 76, Section 5: "Every person shall have the right to attend the public schools where he actually resides."

"In our opinion the law should be read literally for any living situation to avoid the technical questions of custody, guardianship and domicile. The point is to get the kids into school no matter what," Mandel said.

He added that Section 6 of the same chapter allows a child with legal residence in one town to attend the schools of another by paying tuition.

"The main question is if a temporary stay in a park really is a residence. This issue has not gone to court. And the court could go either way. We haven't to date enforced our position. A private citizen could take it to court. It's not up to the department," he said.

Mandel said that Ernst's apprehension about the potential abuse of Hingham's special education program was understandable, though it has been known to happen rarely.

He said cases exist where parents have abandoned special needs children, to take advantage of Chapter 766. "The town of last residence must pay until the child is 22 years old. So if the last known residence is Wompatuck, Hingham can be socked for (as much as about) $40,000 (a year). The department has tried to get in a line item for abandoned children. But, now Chapter 766 is not negotiable," he said.

Ernst said he thought it unlikely the issue would be brought to court, because no cases were pending and the Division of Forests and Parks would probably take action by the beginning of the next school year. "It's a puff of smoke at this point," he said.

CREATURE COMFORTS — by Liz Gorfinkle

Animal control officers want regional animal shelter

The animal control officers of Hingham, Cohasset, Norwell, Hull, Hanover and Scituate need a regional animal shelter to house both dogs and cats.

Stray cats are routinely brought to local veterinarians to be euthanized, according to Hingham's ACO Paul Murphy. And since the privately run Shishone Kennels, Marshfield, closed its doors to stray and impounded dogs last June, the officers have been resorting to putting dogs up in their homes and in various shelters.

"These towns have never come through in providing public shelter," said Murphy, who has even converted his garage into a temporary pound.

Due to the lack of a centralized public facility, it has been difficult for the ACOs to trace dog owners or place animals with new owners. The best of communication networks hasn't been able to surmount the problem, he said.

The Hingham selectmen support Murphy's proposal for a regional shelter that would be built on an existing foundation in the town's former Ammunition Depot off Fort Hill Street.

The proposal is also supported by Hingham School Superintendent Lewis Ernst. The school department, which was made trustee for portions of the depot by the federal government, must clear the proposed use of the property with the General Services Administration.

Murphy is currently busy seeking grant funding and putting together a study committee requested by the selectmen of people from the towns who are interested in animal welfare.

If all goes well, said Murphy, the project should be under construction in about two years.

He said it was premature to estimate cost, but the regional shelter is planned to be a model facility. "It would be the first of its kind on the South Shore. It would have all state-of-the-art equipment for sanitation, heat and ventilation. It would also have a small clinic room for visiting vets and offices," he said.

One of the most useful services the regional shelter would provide is an adoption program.

Shelter personnel would both place deserving animals in good homes and provide information on proper pet care.

Murphy's vision would bring more order into the lives of these towns' animal control officers. It would also create untold happiness for residents and animals alike.

If you want to give your input or join the study committee, ACO Paul Murphy can be reached week days by calling his office (749-5910). His office is in Hingham Town Hall, 7 East St., Hingham 02043.

Ted Jr.'s running?

The Mariner has learned that Edward M. Kennedy, Jr., son of Sen. Ted Kennedy, has decided to run in 1986 for the congressional seat now held by retiring House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr.

Young Ted's decision has upset one prominent Democrat also planning to run for the seat, who had thought he had been promised Ted, Sr.'s endorsement. The Democrat in question spent most of last week futilely trying to get in touch with Sen. Kennedy in both Washington and Hyannisport.

In running for the seat, Ted, Jr., who has not yet reached the mandatory age of 25 to serve in Congress, repeats the pattern set by his father in 1962. Ted, Sr. ran for the Senate that year at 29, and did not reach the minimum of 30 required to be a senator until just before taking office.

A bounty of fruits and vegetables

Just about now, many of us feel we can't wait another day for summer's bounty of fresh vegetables and fruits. If you, too, have this craving, stop by at the Produce House on Rte. 53 in Hanover, in the block of stores across from Eton's. Five days a week at the unearthly hour of 3 a.m., you'll find Larry Russo prowling the aisles of the Chelsea Produce Market. As manager of Produce House, he returns with his fresh produce to fill his shelves with a dazzling display of our everyday needs, plus an innovative selection of such fruits as the kiwi, the fuzzy-skinned, tart green fruit grown in New Zealand and raddicchio, a handsome red and white chicory from Italy--a salad vegetable being featured by more and more restaurants. Bok choy is a type of Chinese cabbage which, chopped and stir-fried with a little ginger and garlic, makes a nourishing side dish, for it is low in calories, but high in protein. Fresh ginger nestles next to fresh water chestnuts, hot horseradish and diacon, a mild radish that must weigh at least three pounds. Al says it keeps well in your crisper, but he will slice it if you ask for a smaller amount. Anise, much like celery with a licorice flavor, shares counters that are filled with more ordinary needs, all crispy under a blanket of crushed ice. Here is one way of using up a bunch of celery while it's still fresh and crisp.

CELERY AU GRATIN WITH ALMONDS

3T butter or oleo
3 c. thinly sliced raw celery
1 c. shredded blanched almonds
3T flour
2 c. hot milk
Salt and pepper
1/4 c. grated sharp Cheddar or Parmesan cheese

Melt butter in heavy skillet. Add celery and almonds. Saute, covered, over low heat for 10 to 15 min., or until celery is tender. Blend in flour. Gradually stir in hot milk. Cook, stirring until sauce is smooth and thickened. Season to taste. Turn into greased 1 qt. baking dish. Sprinkle with grated cheese. Bake in 400 oven until bubbly. Serves 4 to 6.

One of the things I have yet to discover in any local market is that English delicacy called clotted cream; rich, golden, buttery cream. Reading through "Dairy Diary," a charming little book Janet Ingram loaned me, conjured up visions of tea and scones, strawberries and clotted cream. I've never seen a cookbook quite like this one sent to Janet by an English friend, for it even includes horoscopes. Even if you're not a believer, it's always fun to read of what the future holds, so for those Pisces born between Feb. 19 and Mar. 20, "get lots of exercise," and its comforting to read, "the solving of day to day problems is easy for you." The only problem facing all of us when making this appetizer is not to devour all of this tempting

HERB CHEESE

8 oz. cream cheese
1 T. each chopped parsley and chives
1 clove garlic crushed, optional
Pepper to taste

Blend all ingredients together and spoon mixture into serving dish. Chill, preferably overnight and remove from refrigerator an hour before serving with crackers.

Speaking of afternoon tea, a custom as dear to the English as our morning coffee break, either custom is special indeed if it includes a slice or two of Marie Moss'

DATE BREAD

1 c. chopped dates (1 pkg.)
1 tsp. baking soda
1 c. boiling water

Mix above ingredients together and let stand while mixing together the following:

1 egg
1/2 c. sugar
2 c. flour
2 to 3T melted butter or oil
1/2 c. chopped walnuts
1 tsp. vanilla

Bake in 350 oven for 50 min. in greased and floured loaf pan. NOTE: This recipe is one given to Marie years ago by a friend so it's truly tried and true--I can vouch for that as I've tasted it. You'll notice there is no salt--good for those on a salt-free diet.

Area Democrats to raise funds for Ethiopian relief

By Claire McDonough

Donkey: A quadruped of the horse family.

Camel: A large ruminant animal of Asia and Africa with one or two humps.

In Africa, a donkey can be purchased for $75 while a camel costs $450.

Why are local Democrats trying to buy them?

Donna McGee, Regional Chairman of The Donkey Project, says the idea originated when Democratic State Committee Chairman, Chet Atkins, wanted to become involved in some kind of action project which would provide relief for victims of famine in Ethiopia.

Atkins said this famine "threatens to strangle the lives and spirit of a brave, dignified people."

Why donkeys and camels?

"Because," McGee said, "there are areas of Ethiopia that are inaccessible except by pack animals. Many people die there each day and without these animls it is impossible to help them."

The Cohasset resident added the Democratic Town Committees of Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Scituate and Weymouth will sponsor a cocktail-theater party April 21 at the New Bell Buoy in Scituate Harbor.

Alan Medici, co-owner of the Bell Buoy Restaurant agreed to provide hors d'oeuvres without cost and party-goers may purchase their own beverages to maximize the amount of assistance which will actually reach the famine victims.

Following the cocktail party, a theater party is planned at the nearby Scituate Playhouse on Front Street. The film has not yet been selected, but McGee said it will be appropriate for all ages and family participation will be encouraged. Tickets will cost $10, and the committee is also looking for sponsors, patrons and donors.

All checks should be made out to Grassroots International, a non-profit, Massachusetts-based relief agency which will purchase the animals and facilitate their use in Ethiopia.

Dan Connell, Executive Director of Grassroots International, explained the pack animals are an essential element of famine relief.

"Northern Ethiopia is a war zone, and the government will not permit normal transportation into the area. Planes — even Red Cross or United Nations planes — are shot down if they attempt to pass through areas that are held by the rebels.

"For this reason, we travel at night, because there's no bombing then. The food is taken on trucks to distribution points, then loaded onto the animals. This is the only food getting there.

"It's not only saving lives; it stems the 1,000 to 3,000 refugees who have been leaving Eritrea and Tigray daily and pouring into the Sudan. It lets people stay on their own land so that if there's any rain at all they'll be able to replant in the spring.

"In addition to food, Grassroots International is providing farm tools to be used in the rehabilitative phase of assistance."

Connors added Senator Kennedy, who with his son Teddy Kennedy, Jr., serves as honorary co-chair of Project Donkey, has been very active in trying to establish "mercy corridors" to allow Red Cross and United Nations workers to have safe passage to the famine areas, but to date the Ethiopian government refuses to discuss the possibility.

McGee said that the regional committee will appeal to community groups, churches, school children and other organizations to join in the Donkey Project.

"This isn't a political issue," she stresses. "It transcends politics. It's a human issue. There are people — innocent, helpless victims of drought and oppression — who by the thousands are dying horrible, agonizing deaths. Ten dollars may be a lot to pay for a movie, but is it a lot to pay to save a human life?"

Connell agreed, adding, "People in Ethiopia hear constantly that food is being flown in, but they don't see much. When they know that we are taking these positive steps, it will boost their morale tremendously. They'll know that the people in Massachusetts care, that Americans care."

Wah Lum Kung Fu students perform special Lion dance

The Wah Lum Kung Fu Academy of Cohasset performed the Lion Dance at five South Shore restaurants February 23. Complete with Chinese drum, gongs, and fireworks, each lion dance was followed by a brief demonstration of kung fu.

The academy is located on Route 3A, behind Riddle's Food Mart.

The five students honored to assist SIFU John Loupos in the performance of the lion dance included: Joe Branley, Danny Jacobs, and Jamie Young, all of Scituate; David Bailey of Norwell, and Henry Murray of Hingham. Participating in the demonstrations were Craig Avila and Kevin Williamson of Scituate; Richie Morrison of Cohasset; and Eric McCracken of Hingham.

The traditional lion dance is performed at Chinese New Year, August Moon Festival, Double Ten (October 10), and at the opening of kung fu schools and businesses.

At each of the South Shore restaurants, the academy students announced the lion's arrival by briefly entering the restaurant, winding its way through the kitchen and back into the front area to dance amidst a rain of fireworks, ignited to frighten away any evil spirits.

It is hoped that this gift of the Wah Lum Academy to the community will help bring East and West to a closer understanding of one another's customs. This first South Shore Lion Dance celebration will be an annual tradition which the academy will seek to perpetuate each Chinese New Year.

For more information about the Wah Lum Kung Fu Academy of Cohasset, please contact SIFU John Loupos at 383-6822, or visit the academy at the Jonathan Livingston Square in Cohasset.

There will be refreshments for parents and a Wearing of the Green contest.

Chamber opposition to cutback

The South Shore Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors, voted to oppose the proposed elimination of the Small Business Administration by the Reagan Administration.

South Shore Chamber President Peter F. O'Connell has written a letter to U.S. Congressman Brian J. Donnelly expressing the Chamber Board's position.

South Shore Chamber Board of Director's vote comes on the heels of a similar vote by it's affiliate, the South Shore Economic Development Corporation, which is the local distributor of the S.B.A's 502 and 503 loan program.

Osgood health education

As part of the Health Education Program, Dr. Steve Golden gave a lect re to the third grade students at the Joseph Osgood School on Tuesday, March 5. The subject was the human body.

Dr. John Burns spoke to the same group the following day on dental health.

Reverse mainstreaming

Reverse mainstreaming is the latest endeavor at the Osgood School. Small groups of first grade students join the Early Special Needs Program, for a weekly project. Everyone benefits from the experience. This week's project was to make winter bird feeders. We watch the birds in front of the Osgood and enjoy our labors.

Social Studies conference

Ms. Joan Robbins, a member of the Cohasset High School Social Studies Department, attended the New England Social Studies Conference in Boston Friday, March 8.

During the all-day conference, Ms. Robbins met with the representatives of social studies publishing houses and attended seminars on social studies teaching methods and curriculum.

Ms. Robbins is a member of a recently organized Cohasset Committee which is presently studying the implementation of needed curriculum reform in Grades K-12. She presently teaches American Studies to 10th graders and senior electives in Law and Psychology.

New phone-a-thon date

Because Cohasset's basketball team faces Umana Wednesday night for the Division championship, the Parent School Organization has changed the date of the Phone-A-Thon to Thursday, March 14, from 7 to 9:30 p.m.

Members of the PSO board and other volunteers will be calling to answer parents' questions about activities and programs and ask for continued support of the PSO's endeavors to enhance the quality of education for Cohasset's children.

The "State of the Union" newsletter which parents received last week outlines some of the way the PSO works.

Please make a generous tax-deductible pledge tonight to help fund the events and equipment planned for the 1985-86 school year.

Calendar

Thursday, March 14: PSO Phone-A-Thon, 7 to 9:30 p.m.

Friday, March 15: Deer Hill and Osgood report cards issued.

Monday, March 18: School Committee, CHS, Room 107, 8 p.m.

Thursday, March 21: PSO Board Meeting, CHS new study hall, 7:45 p.m.; Kindergarten orientation, Osgood School, 9:30 a.m.; State Drama Festival finals, John Hancock Hall, Boston (through Saturday).

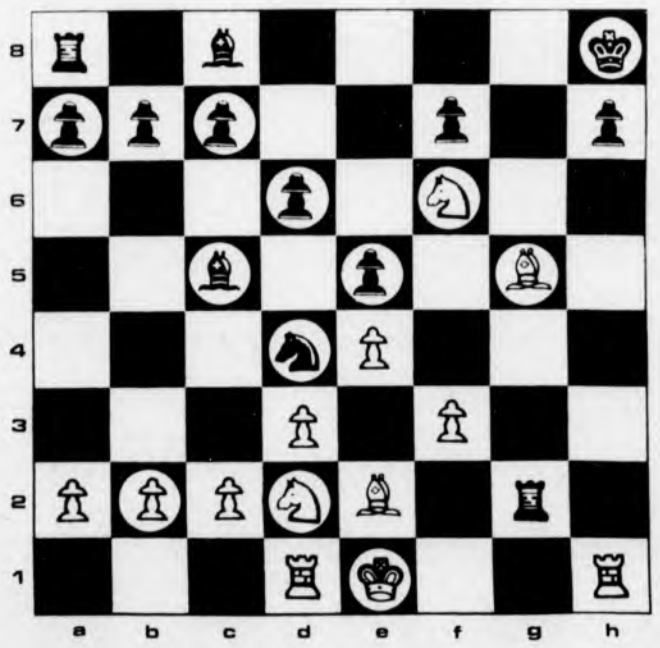
Some obscure move

By Chris Bernstein

Last week's quiz dealt with an obscure move called en passant. The quiz (just in passing), demonstrated the possibility of using this maneuver to your own advantage.



I was informed, by some of the local chess talent, that I was in error and that white could mate in one, by moving either f4 or h4. This would have been so, if not for the classic en passant. It seems my fiends were on the right track, but came up short on their attack. The solution was, in fact, 1.f4ch. forcing black to capture, 1. . . . PxP*ep*;2. Bf2 mate.

Thanks for the input, my fellow chess fiends, but h4 wouldn't work. Better luck next time. This week's quiz is for Alan at The Clipper. Get this one right, get a Hershey, payable on demand!

Conference for kids

For a few hours on Saturday, March 16, children can enter the worlds of magic, origami, marine biology, rockets, archaeology, and computers. They can learn to make forest furniture or attend other sessions on military history, public speaking, math, and Trivial Pursuit. All this and more will happen at MA/AIP's sixth annual conference for kids, parents, and educators at the University of Massachusetts, Boston.

Sessions for parents and educators include parenting gifted children, creativity, and a panel discussion on "Gifted and Talented Programs: How They Work." Five area educators will describe program models and answer questions and concerns about gifted and talented education.

Everyone is invited to the program at the Kennedy Library. The John F. Kennedy movie will be shown followed by a tour of the museum. The registration fee includes admission to the library.

For registration materials contact Dorothy Wondolowski at Deer Hill School, 383-6115.

History essay contest

Eleven Cohasset eighth graders were awarded winners in the recently held American history essay contest sponsored by the Mass. Daughters of the American Revolution. Medal winners included: Matthew Drinkwater, Paul Froio, Katie Horn and Letitia Linsley. Those winning certificates were: Felecia Bartow, Sarah Bishop, Alison Crehan, Diana Kornet, Abbie Barrett, Steven Migliaccio and Amy Hobbs. The honored students are all members of Donald Kelly's eighth grade American history class.

The essay contest was monitored by Edward Sheehan, chairman of the junior-senior high school Social Studies Department and Dorothy Bates, a math teacher in the school and an officer in the Mass.DAR.

The subjects of this year's contest was "The Contributions of Black Soldiers," or "Patriots During the American Revolution," or "The Statue of Liberty, The Lady with a Lamp."

The Cohasset entries will now be eligible for the state DAR contest. These awards will be made later this month.

Women's history week agenda

State Representative Mary Jeanette Murray,-Third Plymouth district, announced that the Massachusetts Caucus of Women Legislators marked the beginning of Women's History Week by presenting their legislative priorities.

As in past years, the caucus is concentrating on areas of economic concern to women. "American women have played and continue to play a critical economic, cultural and social role in every sphere of our nation's life," said Mary Jeanette Murray.

"Women constitute a significant portion of the labor force working in and outside the home and are essential factors in a family's self-sufficiency," she continued. "Ensuring an environment of equality for women ensures a strong nation."

To address economic equality for women, the caucus has targeted such bills as prohibiting sexual harrassment (H.3247); and insurance discrimination (H. 2403); creating a state office of women business enterprises (H. 2890); improving child support collections (H. 2197) providing third party reimbursement to nurse midwives (H. 311).

Also included on the caucus agenda are a number of bills to assist victims of rape and domestic violence. The women legislators are actively seeking alternatives to courtroom testimony for child victims of sexual and/or physical abuse in the form of videotaping testimony (H. 1200).

"We are committed to our agenda for this session and will work hard to see that these issues are addressed," said Rep. Murray. Each year members of the caucus review legislation and the budget and agree on a fixed agenda for the year. Almost eighty percent of their 1984 agenda was adopted by the legislature and members are anxious to see an equally successful year in 1985.

Town affairs night

Meet the candidates running for office in Cohasset at the League of Women Voters Town Affairs Night, March 26 at 7:30 p.m. at Town Hall.

Town Affairs Night gives candidates an opportunity to acquaint themselves with the community and for us to get to know them so we can make an informed choice when we cast our vote.

All persons who have filed for town office have been invited to attend this meeting. Each candidate will have an opportunity to speak and field questions from the audience.

Also, during the evening, the League will conduct a mini-warrant review. Key warrant items such as the zoning by-laws and appropriations, have been studied by League members, and their findings will be presented. This informative discussion can give the voter a better understanding of the complex issues facing out town.

A Voters Guide will be available to the public. It will be a reprint of the local candidates' responses to a questionnaire prepared by the League.

Mark March 26 on your calendar and come to this informative eveing. Refreshments will be served. For more information, call Peggy at 383-0296.

PATCHES by Lois Martin

What we're missing is manners

If it catches on, if courtesy comes back into vogue, this generation will have pulled off the greatest coup society has known.

Maybe you haven't seen it yet. Perhaps you haven't heard the call put out by yet a few for good manners.

But I have.

There was a recent reprint of an editorial from a midwestern newspaper, suggesting that basic courtesy was the solution to many problems. A return, it said, to kindness would eliminate the chaos with which we are too familiar in both public and private relations. It was so simple a solution and so right.

Then there was a Globe feature about a woman who teaches small children manners. She was, of course, dealing pirmarily with the table kind, the right fork, the mouth that isn't jammed with more food than incisors can handle, the correct and safe grip on one's goblet.

Superficial, some might say. But not really. We've seen a few adults who could use the reminding and the course is taught on the unfortunate premise that too few good examples of manners are on view in the home.

My mother used to quote a little ditty she'd been taught, something like this: Good manners is when you do and say the nicest thing in the nicest way.

It never caught on in in-house chatter among her offspring but it has proved memorable enough to get here. That's two points.

So far as I'm concerned one of the people to have the greatest handle on what manners should be was Samuel Taylor Cooleridge. He wrote about polite society a bit, referencing the right fork stuff, and went on to say that while that was useful enough, good manners had far more import.

He said the person who wanted and used the skill, kindness and fortitude to insure others were comfortable in his or her presence, was the person who exhibited true manners.

None of that embodied phoniness, dishonesty, charade. Instead it meant one refused to seize a moment to embarrass or demean someone else. That included abstinance of plucking spaghetti strings in the first two fingers. It ranged all the way to avoiding making a guest or a host or a business companion feel uncomfortable because of clothing, or grammar, or tripping awkwardly on the sidewalk.

There has been, it's true, some confusion between manners and courtesy. There should be none. They should be synonymous and should mean an absence of unkindness in favor of a presence of grace. That's all.

Recently I interviewed a man whose job it is to counsel violence out of men who have grown accustomed to either hitting or demeaning women, or both. His program is called Emerge. But the fantastic thing about it, I thought, was that it carried the key to human relationships, whether one is married or single, old or young, rich or poor. Be nice . . . or lose out on a lot.

Within the last couple decades we've made a big deal about letting it all out, insuring we aren't filled with silent hostility. Well, we've accomplished that. Very little hostility goes unseen or unheard. And what's it got us . . . ticked, is all.

We've seen the hostility habit, felt it, used it, got it all over us, and now, by grace, there's a call, ever so soft, to return to treating one another nicely.

In Emerge, for example, the retraining is toward taking absolute blame for hurting another person, physically and verbally. It goes on to demand of the individual that he treat someone else with respect just as he would like to be treated.

Imagine what would happen if we resort to harmless behavior instead of the hostile kind, courtesy in lieu snide stuff. There would be fewer car accidents, because people spread up to 60 percent of their anger on the highways. There would be a stunning decline in the number of lawsuits we wage on one another, when communication deteriorates to vituperative swapping of foul indictments.

There would be few firings, a stronger economy in shared good humor and intent.

There are times, I'm certain, for righteous indignation. Even so and even then , one does not have to compound a lousy situation. It is possible to restrain its meanness by choice.

We should give it a whirl, get ourselves to a point where nice is natural, kindness, a piece of cake.

Provocative anyway. I'll give it a go. . . Thank you, for your consideration.

MUSINGS

By John H. Cutler

☐ A few more old laws: An early 20th century law passed in Meridian, MS., forbids businessmen to beat drums during a lunchtime stroll.

To take a bath in Boston, you must have a doctor's prescription.

In South Dakota, an 80-year-old woman cannot stop on the street to talk to a young married man.

A woman cannot take a bath in a business office in Carmel, CA.

In Natoma, KS., it is illegal to practice throwing a knife at someone wearing a striped suit.

It is illegal to put tomatoes in clam chowder in Massachusetts.

☐ I don't know how many drinks F. Scott Fitzgerald had when he said: "The victory belongs to the spoils." Incidentally, JFK probably didn't know he was quoting Count Ciano when he said: "Victory has 100 fathers, but defeat is an orphan." It has also been said that victory has 100 memories, but defeat has amnesia.

☐ Joe Louis was probably the greatest heavyweight boxer who ever lived, but he knew his limitations: "Every man's got to figure to get beat sometime," he said.

☐ Can't you just imagine Mae West saying this: "If I had my life to do over, I'd do the same thing except I'd start earlier."

☐ "You think things are bad," said Senator Steward to a reporter. "How bad do you think they would be if we were to follow all the editorial advice in the newspapers."

☐ The zoo in Belem, Brazil, is not what it was 40 years ago. I revisited the zoo a few weeks ago and found no emus, a vicious black bird about the size of an ostrich, giant anacondas or giant jungle ants.

☐ You're in Jordan Hospital if a nurse wakes you up to give you a sleeping pill.

☐ An item from "Good News" put out by St. John's Church: "Preserve me from minding little stings or giving them."

☐ Excerpt from a real estate ad: . . . 21 x 21 reproduction family room . . .

☐ Adolescence begins when children start bringing up their parents.

☐ Advertising helps raise the standard of living by raising the standard of yearning.

☐ If the Bank of Boston advertises for a receptionist, the ad should read like this: Wanted: A smart young woman to act as deceptionist.

☐ The word posh is an acronym for Port Out Starboard Home.

☐ I don't like Elvis Presley, so I was glad to hear him admit: "I don't know anything about music. In my line you don't have to."

SAAB HAS MORE CARGO SPACE THAN BMW, AUDI, AND VOLVO. COMBINED.

If you add the maximum cargo space of the Audi 5000, the Volvo GLT Turbo and the BMW 733i, you get a total of 53.3 cubic feet.

Yet one Saab 3-door gives you 56.5 cubic feet of maximum cargo space.

As you can imagine, the Saab is a lot more useful than any of the others when you pack up the summer house, provision your boat or make an impulsive buy at a tag sale.

Only the Saab gives you this flexibility because only the Saab has a rear seat that folds down.

Others may claim that as an unfair advantage. But when you test drive a Saab, you'll agree it simply makes good sense. SAAB The most intelligent car ever built.

A salute to two great high school tean

Girls lose a heartbreaker

By Lisa Shumaker

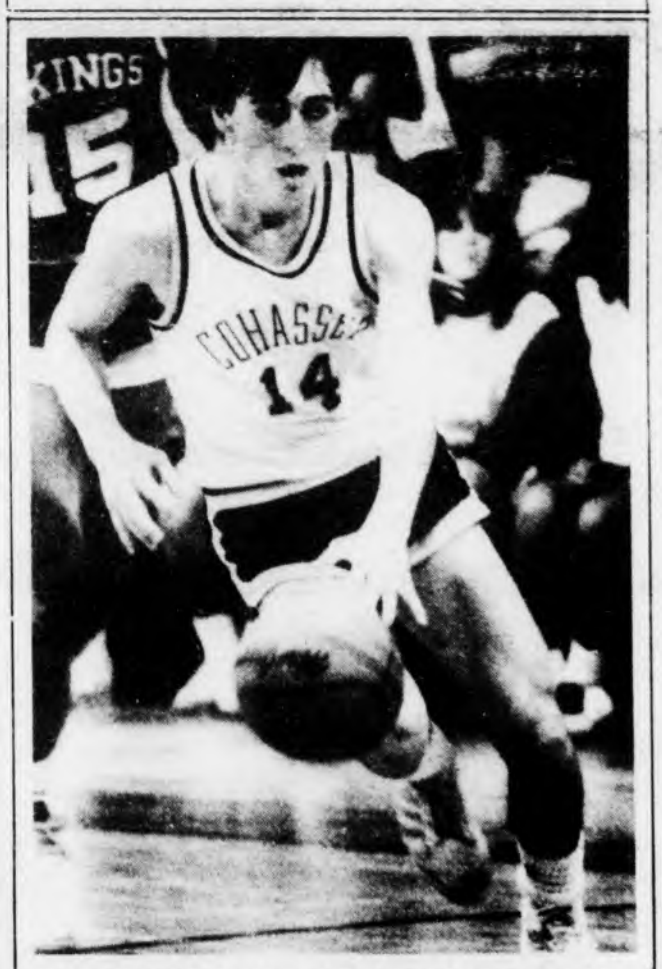
It was a week of intense emotion as the varsity girls basketball team's season finally came to an end Saturday when they were defeated by Quaboag in the state championship game at Worcester, 51-50.

However, the loss of the state championship title, "should take nothing away from our great season," according to head coach, Bill Fallon. "Some crucial mistakes in the last couple of minutes caused the loss. We put in a good effort overall, however."

Senior Carla Lucas played with incredible intensity and emotion, scoring 14 points to lead all of Cohasset's scorers. Tracy Fitzpatrick, also a senior, followed Carla in scoring with 12 points and had an outstanding game as well.

Sarah Seavey rounded out the Skippers' list of high scorers, picking up 10 ponts and showing a lot of spirit in her last high school game.

Of course, the girls wish they could have been rewarded with the state championship title, but as senior tri-captain Lucas said, "We have nothing to be ashamed of."



Among the team's achievements is an impressive overall record of 22-4. This record represents the most victories of any girls' sports team in the history of Cohasset High School.

Not only did the girls set records in their own school, but they now hold the prestigious titles of co-champions (with Norwell) in the South Shore

Boys drained after victorious season

By Mike Berger

What does it mean to the Cohasset community now that the boys basketball team has climbed from a 1-17 record to best the cream of the crop in the Bay State.?

"I would have to say that first we made thousands of people happy. People came out to support us because we showed excellence in team play and we were fun to watch," said a reflective and tired coach Ed Minelli.

"I really don't think the kids are aware of what this means yet. I don't think they really realize the extent of their accomplishment.

"We are No. 1 in Division III in Massachusetts, ranked first for a high school our size in New England and Northeast Basketball Service thinks it's a possibility we may be first in the country."

"When I think back, I think the one thing which pulled us through these championship tournaments was when we faced Medfield and we were behind in the fourth quarter. The crowd didn't let us lose. The emotion was electrifying. It was a like a force field; an invisible sixth man on the court.

"People came to our games who didn't have sons or relatives on the team. Overall we had great student body support," he said.

While Cohasset won the state Division III Championship last week, Minelli will be the first to say it wasn't the Skippers' best overall playing effort.

He acknowledges his team was tired and emot-

Ready, set, go on March 31 !

By Jane Spitz

At 12:45 p.m. on Sunday, March 31, some 800 runners will gather at the Cohasset Common where the ninth 10-kilometer (6.2-mile) Cohasset Road Race By the Sea will begin.

Organized by Rotarians Peter Logan and Roy Fitzsimmons, the annual event is the result of hundreds of local residents' efforts. It will be videotaped by American Cablesystems and shown live on community station Channel 3.

Traditionally, the police, fire and highway departments, the Board of Selectmen, local businesses and the Boy Scouts join together to create an enjoyable afternoon of comaraderie, sportsmanship and fun. In their common goal to raise money, an anticipated $3,000, to be contributed to the Rotary Scholarship Fund for Cohasset High School seniors, these members of the community begin planning weeks before the actual day of the race.

There is the application review process by which entrants are officially registered and assigned numbers. While there is no qualifying time, the fastest runners are given the lower numbers and start in front.

Cohasset's week . . .

Notice to taxpayers

The second half of fiscal 1985 Real Estate bills were mailed last week. This payment is due in the Collector's office on or before May 1, 1985.

For any late payments, interest is computed at 14 percent from April 1. If for any reason, you fail to receive tax bill, duplicate copies are available at the Collector's office, 41 Highland Avenue, or call 383-0611. The Town Hall hours are: Monday through Thursday, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.; Thursday evening. 5:30 to 8 p.m.; Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Our past policy of bringing delinquent tax accounts to tax title has changed. We will be proceeding on the unpaid 1983 and 1984 real estate taxes through the services of a municipal collection agency by the end of March.

Payment of town water bills

The Board of Water Commissioners wish to remind consumers that failure to pay their water bills may result in the shutting off of their service.

In its continuing effort to address delinquent accounts, the department has reviewed all bills that are overdue. The law authorizes the department to shut off service in order tocollect payment. A fee of $25 will be charged to have a service reinstated.

The Water Department relies heavily on customer payments for its operating budget and therefore all delinquent revenue forFiscal1985 must be collected immediately.

Fire chief search committee

Selectmen decided Monday night that a five-member search committee will be formed to look for a replacement for Fire Chief Martin Dooley. The board voted last week not to renew the chief's contract when it expires in December, 1985.

The committee will be comprised of three citizens at large, and one retired member of the Fire Department. Selectmen will also contact the Firefighters Union, requesting them to submit the names of three persons interested in serving on the committee. One person will be selected by the board members.

Selectmen said there are standard questions and procedures used by the Masachusetts Municipal Association regarding the hiring of a fire chief, which could be used as a guideline by the citizens' committee.

Hazardous waste coordinator

Selectmen, based on the recommendation from the Board of Health, appointed Victoria Graken the town's Hazardous Waste Coordinator. She will replace Fred Johansen in that position.

Assessors vacancy

Anyone interested in filling the vacancy created by Assessor Chairman Brian Wilkin's resignation from that board, should immediately submit a letter of interest to the selectmen.

The board of selectmen hope to make an appointment at their meeting Monday night. The assessors formally notified board members of the vacancy Monday, and therefore, selectmen have seven days to name a replacement. The new assessor will serve on the board until the following election in April, 1986. That is the unexpired term of the former chairman.

Osgood evacuation

Students at the Joseph Osgood School were evacuated for about ten minutes from the building early Monday morning while an outside electrical transformer was being repaired.

Fire Chief Martin Dooley, who was at the scene, directed the school adminstrators to order a short fire drill and evacuate the building. In the event of a power surge following the transformer's repair, the chief wanted to guard against the possibility of a fire inside the building.

During the morning, lights in the school had been flickering on and off. When Mass. Electric was called to the scene, a faulty transformer was found on the pole outside the elementary school.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle, an employee of the electric company who was also at the scene, said the drill was completed smoothly and the chief did not order the students back until everything was functioning properly.

Votech budget recommended

Based on new revised figures, the advisory committee voted this week to recommend approval of the 1985-1986 South Shore Regional Vocational Education High School assessment to Cohasset.

Although Cohasset's annual assessment had originally been estimated at a lower rate than last year, the final figure is actually 22 percent lower than the current assessment rate. Next year, with about six students attending the facility, Cohasset will pay $16,632. That is an additional $1942 decrease from the figure originally presented to the advisors last month.

School budget compromise

The advisory committee voted Monday night to approve a proposed 1985-1986 school budget of $4,248,275.

That figure represents a 4 1/2 percent increase over this year's approved budget. The numbers were worked out this week during a meeting with advisory committee members and school administrators.

The school department had been stalled at a figure which was five percent higher than this year's total. The advisors had insisted on limiting the increase to four percent. The compromise, according to Advisory Committee chairman, was worked out in a cooperative effort with the school officials. The extra one-half percentage point actually means the school department will have $20,320 more than the advisors originally recommended.

Supt. Eugene Crowell was not available Wednesday morning to explain whether the added budget funds would eliminate staff cuts. That was a proposal he said two weeks ago may occur because of the budget restrictions.

Budget flickers as more streets lighted

One-third of the town turned dark when Proposition 2 1/2 hit Cohasset.

In an effort to decrease spending, selectmen authorized a survey to determine which street lights could be extinguished.

This was a movement not limited to Cohasset. Communities throughout the state turned street lights off, dramatically reducing municipal electric bills.

Street lights along Cohasset roads were examined, with the public's safety the guiding factor. Wherever a light could be shut off, without jeorpardizing the public's safety, the order was made to Mass. Electric Co. Lights illuminating streets crossings, fire hydrants and alarm boxes, school property and intersections, remained.

In the end, about one-third of the town's lights were shut off. Since that time, according to Selectman Rocco Laugelle, about two dozen have been turned back on. Residents in those areas have formally notified selectmen of their request. Using public safety factors as guidelines, selectmen have made the determination, one by one, to re-illuminate the petitioned neighborhoods.

This week and last, two Hillside residents requested that selectmen turn on two, and perhaps three lights which were shut off about four years ago.

Jean Salvador of Cushing Road cited several burglaries and attempted break-ins of residences and businesses in that area. She asked that a light at the end of Smith Place be turned on. Selectmen, dubious that one light could solve all future crimes in the area, nonetheless approved the request.

This week, James Lane resident Pauline Keating asked that the light at the corner of that street and

Interview for Ex. Secretary

Selectmen interviewed the first of the final two candidates for Executive Secretary. The final candidate will be interviewed next Monday night. Selectmen are expected to make the final selection the following week.

Michael Wood, a former assistant to the Norwood Town Manager, was interviewed this week by selectmen. He left that position in the fall to pursue a Master's degree at Brown University in Rhode Island. He currently has one more course and his thesis to complete before be obtains the degree.

Selectmen said they have selected seven areas in which the candidate should be knowledgeable, including supervisory experience, computer experience, experience with municipal and state laws, experience with cooperative efforts with department heads and various municipal boards, financial budget and control experience, and personnel experience.

Wood explained the administrative arrangement in Norwood, where there is a Town Manager, and two assistants, one who handles citizens complaints, and the other to deal with financial management. Wood said he dealt primarily with the budget and financial matters of the town, although for the past year, because of an illness of the other assistant, he had to perform both jobs.

"We all worked toegther. That's my philosophy, to coordinate the activities of as many as possible to achieve a project," he told selectmen.

Wood told Selectman Frank England he would have no trouble relocating from Rhode Island to Cohasset because he is finishing his current course requirements in a research project. His Master's degree will be concentrated in the field of political science, he noted.

"You're a soft-spoken guy," Selectman Rocco Laugelle said to Wood. "Cohasset is a close knit community. How do you think you'll handle the day-to-day operation of this town?"

Wood answered,' Check my references and you'll see what kind of administrator I am." Laugelle answered that "I don't go for references."

The candidate added, "I like taking the soft spoken approach until I know how to deal with a particular situation and who I am dealing with. I will listen to anything someone says to me, but if I have the authority to make a decision, I'll make it my way. I have no trouble dealing with people individually or in group situations."

Wood explained that in Norwood he had to devise and implement a townwide central purchasing system. That procedure demanded a lot of interaction between the Assistant Town Manager and several independent town boards. His philosophy, Wood said, is to sit down and work things out.

When Laugelle questioned him about having "two strikes against you" for being an "outsider," Wood answered, "it could be a strike against me, or it could work to my advantage. I can take what's

SS Vo-Tech budget reduction

Faced with the defeat of their embattled budget, the South Shore Regional School Committee last week voted to risk reducing the budget by an additional $149,000 in the hopes that increased state aid will compensate for the shortfall.

It is a risky gamble for South Shore Vo-Tech because the money, enrollment-based state education aid known as Chapter 70 funds, has already been denied to the region.

The funds were frozen at last year's levels because state-wide school enrollment has shrunk.

South Shore Vo-Tech has grown, and School Supt. Clifford Easton is trying to convince state authorities that Vo-Tech is thus entitled to an additional $149,000 in aid.

Easton said he has initiated negotiations with the state to secure the increased funding, but so far has gotten only a positive verbal reception to his petition, but no concrete promises.

If the state refuses to grant the funds, the school will be forced to balance its 1986 budget with teacher, equipment and instructional supply cuts. "This is a critical gamble," said Easton. "These aren't things we can easily afford to lose. If we do, it puts us right back where we started." Easton said that the cut was an attempt to demonstrate to the towns that the region was sympathetic to the limitations imposed on town budgets by Proposition 2 1/2. "We are telling the towns that we are willing to share the risk," said Easton.

Despite the risk to the school, committee members felt that without further reductions in the assessments to the eight member towns, the budget would certainly be defeated.

The budget must be approved by six of the eight towns.

Although Norwell approved the Vo-Tech budget at its Town Meeting and Cohasset, the only town whose assessment was previously set to decrease, is likely to raise no objections, Hanover, Scituate and Whitman officials have publicly stated their opposition to the budget.

Hanover has led a campaign to convince towns to set their own assessment levels at the same increase allowed for local school systems, causing a flurry of antagonism between local governments and the Vo-Tech administration. Superintendent Easton has warned that such an action would be "illegal."

"The towns can either say 'yes' or 'no' to the budget, but according to the regional agreement, they can't change it."

Easton said that it is important for area residents to realize that not only is vocational/technical education by nature more expensive than traditional education, but unlike local schools, Vo-Tech pays for its own retirement fund, health insurance, groundswork and snowplowing. "These things add up, so it's impossible to compare our budget with the local schools."

Easton and Norwell representative Robert Molla publicly thanked the citizens of Norwell for their support and understanding.

School Committee members said last week that they continue to stand firmly behind their budget, which requests an increase of 20 percent over last year, but agreed that taking a gamble on the state aid was necessary to make the figures more palatable to the towns.

The cut reduces the budget increase to 16 percent. Assessments will now range from declines in Norwell and Cohasset to a 40 percent hike in Hanson.

The latest figures now assign the following assessments: Cohasset, down $4,678 to $16,636; Hanover, up $29,759 to $160,262; Norwell, down $5,047 to $75,638; and Scituate, up $11,738 to $109,148.

Easton noted that the individual towns receive

Chiropractic for HEALTH

by Dr. Kevin M. Neill, Chiropractic Physician

SYMPTOMS OF SUBLUXATION

"Subluxation" simply means that two or more parts of the spinal column have moved out of alignment. As a result, the patient may experience pain. In addition, a subluxation can interfere with the proper functioning and healing of other vital parts of the body. Pain is the one symptom that motivates most people to visit a chiropractor. Ironically, it is the last symptom to show up but the first to disappear during the healing process. Another symptom is "fixation." Fixation is a reduction or loss of mobility in one or more joints of the spinal vertebrae. Swelling as well as inflammation may also occur in the damaged joint area. In addition, muscle spasms, tingling sensations and loss of control over certain muscles, or organs are potential signs of subluxation.

Periodic chiropractic exams serve to deal with problems before they develop as well as detect threatening sitations early on. By such a prudent routine your daily lifestyle and overall health goals may be more readily achievable. For the chiropractic applications that can be of benefit to you, we welcome you to call the COHASSET CHIROPRACTIC OFFICE, 760 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Suite 12. Chiropractic care not only restores health, but it also builds health. Tel. 383-1211, 1214. There's less money for more street lights

Cushing Road be turned on. Selectman Laugelle said that light, which illuminates an intersection, was mistakenly extinguished, and promised the light would be turned back on. Selectmen said they will look at the location of the second light to see if it is in a significant public safety area.

Town Accountant William Signorelli said this week that at the rate the town is progressing, the street light budget, without any additional requests, will be depleted by the end of June. The three additional lights, and the possibility of more requests, will result in a cost overrun before the end of this fiscal year.

Laugelle, who is employed by Mass. Electric, said he is not surprised that $12,304 is left for the remaining four fiscal months. At an average monthly rate of $3400, that budget will be gone by July 1, without any additional lights turned on.

Laugelle said that, depending on the size, one street light costs the town between $70 and $80 per month. Despite any increase to the town's budget, however, Laugelle wishes all the lights could be re-illuminated.

"I'd love to see them all turned back on. Some day, that may be what the town wants," he said. The selectman added that street lights are a proven deterrent to crime, and a necessity for pedestrian and vehicular safety.

Police Chief Joseph Kealy agrees. "Although some studies have indicated that darkening an area actually can prevent crime, I believe in more lighting. I think that is a much more effective deterrent to crime.

I'd love to see every one of the street lights turned back on," he added.

Chief Kealy, then a Cohasset Police Sergeant, accompanied Selectman Laugelle during a street light survey. Since then, he knows several have been turned back on. "If I had my way, I'd turn them all back on," he commented.

Regarding the reported burglaries in the Hillside area of town, Chief Kealy said his department is aware of only a couple of incidents.

January 2, about $60 was taken from the Strawberry Parfait, and during the past weekend, about $30 was taken from Charlotte's hair salon on Cushing Road. There was also an attempted break-in at a Cushing Road home two weeks ago, he added.

"These incidents are under investigation," the chief said. "We don't know if they are related."

The chief also said residents of that area have experienced several annoyance-type phone calls. In response to the reported incidents, Chief Kealy said the department has beefed up patrols in that area.

He refuted Salvador's claim last week to selectmen that there is a "rash" of break-ins in that section of town. "We are aware of the situation, and we are responding to it. I have spoken personally with the residents of the area about the problems," he added.

At last week's selectmen's meeting, Salvador also questioned "when are we going to get a police chief who resides in this town.?" She told the board members the chief couldn't be reached at home during a recent episode in that area.

Selectman Laugelle responded by stating when Kealy was hired as chief, "we voted at the time that he did not have to live here."

Kealy, who resides in Marshfield, would not comment on the statement by Salvador.

GREECE'S STONE FOREST

When one thinks of Greece, one usually conjurers up visions of remote island beaches and caves. However, a green plain in west-central Greece offers a site even more remote and certainly more visually thrilling. Rising up to heights of a quarter-mile are stone formations called Meteora, "rocks in the air." Meteora are the remnants of a prehistoric inland seabed. The rushing and eddying of water as it drained into the Aegean Sea eroded the sandstone into spectacular, natural skyscrapers. Lofty caves were used by hermits in the 11th century seeking sanctuary. In the 14th century, monastic orders built monastaries atop the pillars to house their art treasures. Five still remain for you to visit and marvel at.

Everyone loves a race by the sea

"We don't want to exceed 800 entrants for safety reasons. The sharp turn at the beginning of the course on Elm Street, for instance, gets people bunched up. The more runners there are the more likely bumping and tripping becomes," explained Logan.

Cohasset's relatively narrow roads may not be optimum for a race, but with careful planning--such as street cleaning by the highway department which will begin next week--this unusually scenic route sets the race apart from many of its kind.

Bill O'Brien, who runs the route once or twice a week, describes the course as very interesting. "It's got hills and the ocean view, it's a professionally run and competitive race. The record time is about 28.29 for a 10-k race and with last year's winning time recorded at 30.20, you're talking almost world class time."

Having competed in many official races including the Boston Marathon, O'Brien has participated in the Cohasset Road Race for all of its nine years. "The way to judge a race is by repeat runners," he said.

With 230 entrants in 1977, the race has grown every year since, and 60 percent of the participants have run in previous years.

Sarah Lindsley, a national class runner at 10-k, is another runner who returns each year. A former resident of Cohasset, Lindsley will fly in from Chicago and is expected to win the women's open class as she has in the past. According to Fitzsimmons, the percentage of women runners has increased yearly.

"It's become quite a popular competition for young people, both athletes and non-athletes. If it wasn't for this race, most of our high school kids wouldn't run in a road race," said Clark Chatterton, the athletic director at Cohasset High.

There is a total of ten classes in the race. Each of the categories consists of male and female divisons: under 14, 14 to 17, 18 to 39, 40 to 49 and 50 years old and over. Teams of three members each are welcome to participate. A computer that clicks off each finishing position and notes the time on a readout allows the results of the race to become immediately available for posting.

The enthusiasm of the crowd along the route, which is expected to be anywhere from 3 to 5,000 people this year, is an essential part of the race, according to the organizers as well as the runners. With unpredictable weather conditions which in the past have ranged from sleet and hail to summer temperatures, runners can use all the assistance they can get. The cheers of encouragement together with offerings of water and oranges have aided runners in completing the challenging course.

"We've never sought big name runners. We want to give the amateur a real chance at winning and at the same time maintain the local flavor," said Fitzsimmons, who founded the race that began as a JC Scholarship fundraiser. Half of the runners are from Cohasset and Scituate.

The fire department's ambulance that follows the last runners, the highway department road blocks, police crowd control and the dog officers enforcement of a leash law together with the donations from local businesses make this event possible.

The Cohasset Road Race is not the Boston Marathon. It doesn't try to be. Awards commemorating achievement are given but there is no prize money. The real reward is in the event itself.

As a New England Athletic Conference approved race, the competition is used as a qualifying speed run for the mid-April Boston Marathon. For others, it marks the beginning of the racing season after the difficult training conditions of winter. But, most importantly, it is an occasion for the entire community and its organizations to work together toward a common goal.

THE PEREMPTORY CHALLENGE

When prospective jurors are called for duty in civil cases, they may be requested to fill out detailed questionnaires. Among other things, they may be asked to describe their education, employment and any lawsuits in which they have been personally involved. Lawyers for both sides take part in selecting the jury and can ask questions as the jurors are being selected. If a prospective juror is biased for or against one side, that juror can be eliminated through a "challenge for cause." In addition, each side usually has the right to exclude a few jurors without giving any reason. These are known as "peremptory challenges." If one feels uncomfortable with a person on the jury, your attorney can exercise a peremptory challenge without establishing a bias.

Remember that your legal rights are only as good as your ability to protect them and that only a trained attorney can represent your best interests. If you are in need of legal advice of any sort please call your attorney today. LAW OFFICES OF RICHARD PRICE, 760 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Rt. 3A, Cohasset, 383-9882. I am available daily by appt.

□Must begin with talking about what the whole town hasn't stopped talking about all season! You guessed it, the dynamite basketball teams and their super-human efforts put forth this year. The girls played the most dramatic game ever in their bid for the States, and all that watched were ever so proud of their efforts. The boys played well, too, and it sure was thrilling to see them in the middle of the basketball court with huge grins, the trophy that they worked so hard for in tow, and all as happy as could be. The coach even sported a "Red Auerbach cigar". . .Congratulations to both teams, and thanks for a fine season you provided for the spectators as well!

□Lots of people back from warm weather vacations, all looking elegant with their tans. . .Best tan award goes to Tina Watson! My, one can get mighty jealous just looking at her!

□At a recent school meeting, Headmaster Christopher Wadsworth announced the awards for the Winter Sports season. Jeffrey C. O'Neill, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald J. O'Neill of Cohasset, received a varsity letter in hockey.

O'Neill attends Belmont Hill as a five-day boarder, a program which permits students to live at the school from Monday through Thursday and to be with their families on weekends.

Ian Cox, seven months old, fidgets a bit as Dad (Edward) adjusts his cap to guard against the blustery March winds.
(Rose Cundari)

Belmont Hill School is an independent day and five-day boarding school for boys in grades 7 through 12. Small classes, a rigorous and traditional academic program, school-wide athletics and other activities provide students with the opportunity for personal development and strong college preparation.

□Here's to Arlene Orr and hoping that she makes a speedy recovery.

□Received an auction catalog from the Glastonbury Abbey last week, and it sure looks nifty! The benefit auction is to be held on March 30, at the Hingham Armory on Central Street. There will be a preview and silent auction from 2 to 7 p.m., with the live action beginning at 7. The auctioneer will be John C. Rosselle of John C. Rosselle Co., Inc. As is always the case, the donations are nothing but the best, and they are spectacular, so be sure to put the date aside on your calendar and be there!

□Congratulations to Steve and Leslie (Jones) Brigham on the birth of their son on March 6.

□The "New Friends" Committee, under the auspices of the Social Service League of Cohasset, gave an informal tea for the residents of the Elm Street Housing recently to explain the program. The plan is to reach people in Cohasset who would enjoy visits by another person. These visits are "one-on-one" and it sounds like a wonderful idea for those who are alone and/or lonely. The committee is looking for those who would like to be visited as well as those who would visit. For further information, call the Social Service league at 383-0771 or 383-0821.

□Jody Butman has become a member of Home Center Realty in Hingham. Jody is married to Robert Butman and has two children, Jami and B.J. Good luck in your new business venture.

□The new supermarket that will be located at Cushing Plaza should be wonderful! Word is that the one like it in Boston is a pleasure to shop in, and that Mr. Bildner is going to do his best to make sure that the store will be the best possible. Cannot wait for July 1. . .

Ah spring! Jonathan Richter leaps for joy (with help from his father, Bill) at the arrival of warmer weather.
(Carol McCann)

□Don't forget Town Affairs night, which is to be held on March 26 at 7:30 at the Town Hall. Run by the League of Women Voters, it is always an informative night, and one that conscientious voters should not miss.

□Hats off to the eighth graders who were awarded prizes in the history essay contest sponsored by the Mass. Daughters of the American Revolution. Matthew Drinkwater, Paul Froio, Katie Horn and Letitia Linsley were all medal winners. Felecia Bartow, Sarah Bishop, Alison Crehan, Diana Kornet, Abbie Barrett, Steven Migliaccio and Amy Hobbs all won certificates. All these entries will now be eligible for the State DAR contest, awards to be announced later this month.

□Finally, good luck to the participants in the State Drama Festival, to be held on March 22. "Voices From the High School" should win it all!

□Keep the news coming, via phone or mail.

Recreation news

Annual Easter Egg Hunt

The Cohasset Recreation Department will conduct the ninth annual Easter Egg Hunt for children three through 12 years of age, Saturday, April 6 at noon at the Deer Hill School Field.

This year there is a distinct possibility that the Easter Bunny and some of his helpers will be on hand to help out with the hunt. There also may be live animals at this year's hunt.

Children will be divided into three separate chronological groups: Group 1, ages 3 - 5 (with parents); Group 2, ages 6 - 8; Group 3, ages 9 - 12.

Please gather around your designated area sign before noon.

Individually wrapped chocolate eggs will be scattered about the designated areas. In each group three or four of the eggs will be wrapped with masking tape and will have a number on the tape. Should you find one of the numbered eggs, hold on to it as you will receive a prize from the Easter Bunny.

This year's program sponsors are: Cohasset Rotary Club, American Legion Post No. 118, and the Cohasset Police Association.

Rain date will be on Saturday, April 13 at noon at the Deer Hill School Field.

Dog Obedience Classes

The Cohasset Recreation Department will offer three levels of instruction for dog obedience classes to be taught by Laurie Ann Clevland. All classes will be held at the G.A.R. Hall in Scituate, and will begin Sunday, March 24. Beginner training classes will be held at 6 p.m.

The purpose of these classes will be to teach novice pet owners basic obedience and responsible per ownership. Subjects to be covered proper use of voice, corrections, stay commands, getting the dog to come, heel, etc. Helpful hints on dog ownership and responsibility will also be included.

The obedience will include those exercises beneficial to the pet owner, as well as those thinking about eventually showing their dogs in obedience. And intermediate advanced class will be held at 7 p.m. This class is designed for dogs that have had some prior basic training or have completed the recreation department beginner class.

For the above classes, owners are required to have their dogs equiped with a humane choke chain. The proper size of the chain is determined by measuring the dog's neck and adding four inches. Absolutely no spike collars will be allowed!!! It is also strongly suggested that the handlers wear comfortable shoes and clothes for these sessions.

For all classes: The fee is $17 per dog for the eight-week, one-hour program. Dogs should be a minimum of three months of age, and there is no limit on maximum age. To register please call the recreation department office at 383-6791. Classes will be limited in size.

Housing meeting set

There will be an opportunity to voice concerns about residential housing for mentally disabled adolescents or young adults.

There will also be an opportunity to voice concerns about continuous availability of workshop placements.

The Scituate Special Education Advisory Council is sponsoring a meeting with State Rep. Frank Hynes and Mary Ann Walsh, who works in the Executive Office of Human Services in charge of the Bureau of Transitional Planning, Wednesday, March 27 at 7:30 p.m. in the Scituate High School library.

Commuter questions

Last week, State Senator Bill Golden visited the Mariner office to discuss the possibility of resurrecting the South Shore commuter rail service.

Contrary to popular belief, Golden is not advocating this proposition without the full support of his constituents. That is why he and Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray have asked to place four questions on the April 13th ballot. These referenda will be used to determine our feelings about the reinstatement of commuter rail in our community.

As Golden explained last week, the costs of this project can not even be measured, since the destination of the train has yet to be decided. And he realizes that not everyone wants to use the train, especially those with varied schedules into and out of Boston. But the train will be one way to get a large number of commuters off the expressway.

The four questions which will be placed on the ballot include: Should the South Shore commuter rail service be restored on the existing Greenbush Line, which runs from Boston (South Station) to Scituate?

Would you commute on the Greenbush rail line if such a service was available?

Should the state restore commuter rail on the Greenbush Line, if restoration of this service would require the Town of Cohasset to subsidize operating costs?

Should the Greenbush Line terminate at either the Hingham Shipyard or the Hingham Ammunition Depot on Fort Hill Street if the state restores commuter rail service on the South Shore?

Sen. Golden anticipates the cost of restoring the line will be substantial, considering the potential loss of MBTA revenues to the participating communities, and perhaps a higher assessment to those same towns.

He promises that in the near future, a regional discussion session will be scheduled for local residents and officials to talk about the problems and solutions. Sen. Golden emphasizes that commuter rail must be a cooperative venture between the participating towns, if the project is to succeed.

A note of congratulations and thanks to the Cohasset organizations who have brightened an otherwise somber week. The Cohasset High School boys basketball team deserves all the media hype they can grab. These guys are the untouchable. Their coach, infamous Eddie, deserves much of the credit.

The girls team, along with coach Bill Fallon, lost a true heartbreaker this week. But we still love them, and we can't wait till next season. On to bigger and better things! An added note, the Mariner coverage of those games wouldn't exist without the super efforts of Lisa Shumaker. We think she's terrific - the most reliable reporter on this newspaper.

Amidst the hoopla of the sports team, is the victory of the CHS Drama Club. They were honored last week for the best ensemble peformance during the state drama festival semi-finals. This week it's on to the finals and more awards. We are equally proud of these kids, and their mentor, Ron Emmons.

A final word of congratulations to the Cohasset Garden Club who earned "perfection" ratings at last week's New England Flower Show. A hard-working group of ladies, whose work was viewed with envy and amazement by all who observed their exhibit.

Chamber's reaction to bylaw changes

To the editor:

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce has adopted the following position on proposed changes to Cohasset's Zoning By-Laws.

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce predicts that the proposed Zoning By-Law changes, if accepted, will cause great harm without commenserate benefit to our town. The Chamber represents not only the business people, but a broad cross-section of townspeople who will be hurt by this elitist attempt to alter Cohasset's historically balanced socio-economic blend. We predict the following long lasting effects if the proposed changes are adopted:

Fact - The proposed change will increase minimum lot sizes by approximately 100 percent and will severely restrict all building which can take place on those lots

Predicted results - Fewer available lots will cause severe local inflation

Predicted reaction -

1. The inflation of assessed values will cause rapid increases in property taxes under Proposition 2 1/2.

2. Increased taxes will make it difficult or impossible for the elderly, small business people, school teachers, policemen, firemen, municipal employees and others on fixed or middle income to stay in town.

3. The cost of carrying a mortgage will preclude all but the very affluent from living in Cohasset.

4. Children who grew up here will not be able to own a home unless they are wealthy or unless parents can sub-divide their existing property.

5. Sub-dividing existing property will become almost impossible because minimum lot sizes will nearly double.

At the invitation of the Planning Board, the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce submitted indepth recommendations on several of the Zoning By-Laws. The Planning Board established it's own subcommittee at the direct request of the selectmen to develop changes. Virtually all of this work was ignored. The proposed changes have been developed in a virtual vacuum and will result in several increases in taxes and an erosion of the existing tax base.

In the interest of preserving the present quality and diversity of our town and its people, the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce calls for a temporary moratorium on all Zoning By-Laws and recommends that a Master Plan be reviewed and adopted. We must take the future of our town out of the hands of a few, and retain Cohasset for all those who currently enjoy it. A Master Plan must be finally completed; then changes should be made of a continuous objective. The current 'Band-Aid' approach will destroy the Cohasset we all love.

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce

Delay questions

To the Editor:

Gov. Dukakis has taken the first important step to restore commuter rail service to our region. The MBTA is launching a study on the environmental impact of the project — this is the second step in the long process.

While local referenda are a vital part of the process, it would seem prudent to delay local ballot questions until the public is better informed on the issues.

If the issue must be presented to the electorate at this time, it is important that each question be carefully worded:

1. The question: "Would you use commuter rail?" should be part of a two-part question that also asks: "Do you commute on a regular basis to Boston's central business district?"

2. The question: "Are you willing to pay a local assessment for rail service?" is premature.

The first priority is to get the South Shore included in the MBTA commuter rail network which now enjoys state/federal subsidy of all operating deficits.

If at a later date this subsidy is threatened, the "will you pay?" question should be put to all the towns served by the commuter rail network...not just to those towns on the South Shore.

Brooks Kelly, Executive Director
Plymouth County Development Council

Phone-A-Thon cancelled

The PSO Phone-A-Thon came in the midst of a tragic time in Cohasset. A time for pulling together, a time for leaning on one another, and not a time to be concerned about fundraising.

The PSO decided to postpone the Phone-A-Thon until sometime in April.

When we do have our Phone-A-Thon, we ask the parents of Cohasset students to aid us financially, so we can continue with our programs. We do not want to see our programs suffer, and your financial support is needed to keep the PSO programs and projects.

Movement consortium

The last performance by the Movement Consortium at Cohasset High School will conclude with two productions on Wednesday, March 27 at 10:05 a.m. to 10:55 a.m. The performances, which will include some of the CHS students who have particpated in the consortium workshops, will take place in the upstairs gym.

'Life is for the giving, not the taking'

The church was filled with family, friends and neighbors who came to mourn the loss of a young life.

Saturday morning, the bells of St. Anthony's Church sounded as the small casket bearing the body of 13 year-old Desiree Yess descended the stairs of the church into the waiting hearse. The eighth grade student, who was killed in a car accident Tuesday night, was buried on that sunny, blustery March morning.

The concelebrated funeral Mass began at 10 a.m. within the stark white walls of the church. Rev. Richard Bourgeois of Glastonbury Abbey was the principal celebrant.

As a trumpet sounded, a glorious voice filled the open building. The glistening white and pink casket entered the church as pallbearers walked beside it.

A reading from the Gospel reminded us "for everything there is a season. A time to be born, a time to die. . . a time to mourn, a time for dancing."

Another song, a strong voice singing with soft guitar accompaniment tugged at our hearts as we listened. "I have loved you with an everlasting love," the voice sang.

A second reading from St. Paul stated, "if I have no love, I have nothing. Love is patient, love is kind."

The two passages are often read at marriages, but are clearly apparent for more somber occasions. The readings fit so well with the message Desiree had attempted to impart in her liftetime, Fr. Bourgeois later explained.

The Gospel reading was also in keeping with her outlook in life, "love your enemies as you wish them to treat you."

Fr. Bouregois' homily tied the themes together. With words from Charles Dickens, he began, "It was the best of times, it was the worst of time. It was a season of light, it was a season of darkness. It was the spring of hope, it was the winter of despair."

Such a sudden and seemingly senseless death, he said, serves to remind us to re-evaluate the quality of our lives. Through Desiree's death, he said, there comes a challenge for us all "to become more like Christ, to accept all others unconditionally."

Parents, he continued, must re-evaluate the quality of their relationships with their children. "Do not wait until all other obligations are less demanding to spend time with your children," Fr. Bourgeois warned.

Friends and spouses should become more understanding of each other. "This moment," he said, "is our time, our day, our opportunity, our challenge."

How many lives did Desiree touch? Fr. Bourgeois wondered. How many people were healed by her love? Her death represents a challenge for us all today - to value all others, to respect, to enjoy and to love others.

"The choice, as Desiree chose, is for imaginative strength, and the tapping of our talents and resources," Fr. Bourgeois reminded her friends. "She did not leave these gifts for us to lay on a shelf and collect dust."

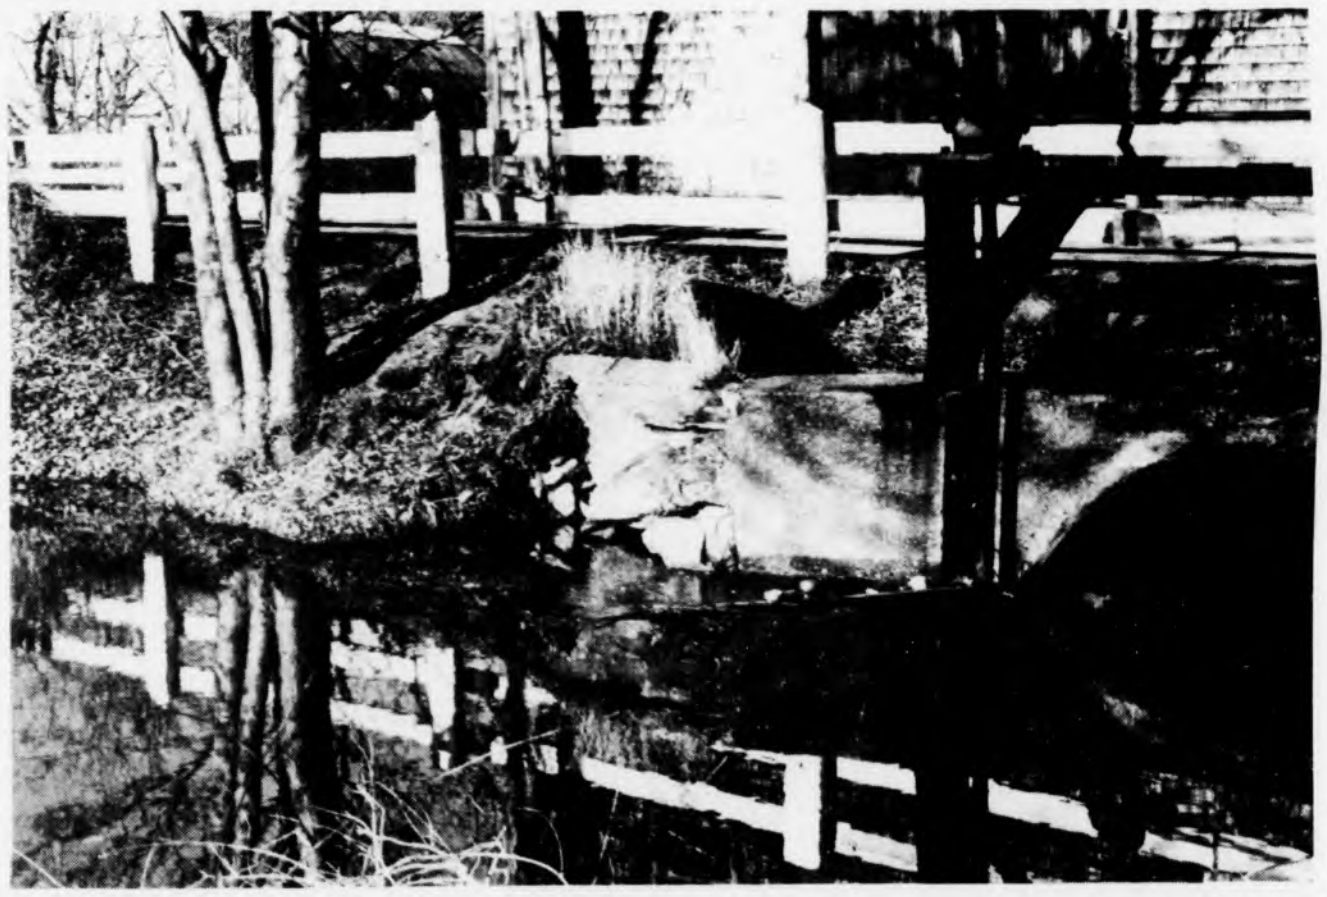
No matter the endeavor, he said, Desiree acheived to the best of her ability. She allowed herself "to be borne away on the wings of passion and enthusiasm."

Noting how Desiree loved to sift through Sandy Beach and bring home rocks to paint, Fr. Bourgeois commented, "I can just see St. Peter's desk strewn with painted rocks, and his wallet empty."

Thanking her parents Jim and Denise " for your gift to us," Fr. Bourgeois asked her hundreds of friends and neighbors to "pledge to continue the promise of our presence and support and our prayers" for Desiree's family. Prayers were also offered with the Stone's, the O'Leary's and the Sheppard's.

A close friend of the Yess family, Robert Pura of Stoughton, offered a personal message to the people who filled the church.

Desiree was, he said, "a complete package." She was a girl who thrived in athletic competition, a bright scholastic star in our schools. The rules by which she lived, he said, included "if I don't want to do something, it won't happen; don't do anything in moderation; and life is for the giving, not the taking."



Desiree's pleasure, he said, was in making others happier. The last days of an elderly neighbor's life were spent with Desiree, who helped cook meals, conversed with her, and held her hand.

The young girl's death "has severed an irreplaceable part of us," Pura said. "There will never be another Desiree."

During her last week, she had written a simple note, meant for no one in particular. Pura read it for the hundreds assembled within the church.

Inscribed alongside the prose were drawings of hearts, some broken and shedding tears, and others captured with smiles. The word "simple" was written beside the smiling heart.

Desiree wrote the words, "Although sometimes brokenhearted, keep a smile on your face and it will go away. Which hopefully will make others happy too."

"God was the first to weep . . ."

A sermon by Rev. John Benbow
Second Congregational Church

I wrote this sermon in the days which followed an auto accident in which one young girl died, another was critically injured, and two more were badly hurt. The shock and grief of such a tragic loss affects many people in our small community—friends of the girls and of their families, neighbors, fellow-students—as well as those who are bereaved.

How do we deal with such an event? How do we make sense of our human life when we are confronted again and again with the utterly fragile nature of life itself, and with the loss of what we love the most, and with the random happening that shatters all our sense of safety for ourselves and for those we love? We are forced to face once more the hardest questions and most painful realities of life—questions like the one which haunted a friend of mine as he waited through the serious illness of a child: "Can life really be as fragile as this? Can we lose so easily all that we love?" Those are among life's hard questions—and experience confirms again and again that there are no easy answers to them.

We are face to face with life's hard questions not only when we have to deal with the death of a young person who had barely begun her life, but also when we are faced with illness or death at any point in life, and when we are confronted by the uncertainties and ailments of aging. In each of these circumstances, we are faced with the hard questions of human mortality and of life's fragility. In each of them, we are not only reminded that we are mortal (as if we needed reminding!)—mortality and the fragility of life become our daily companions as we ask those hard questions which have no easy answers.

Can we discover in Christian faith and understanding any word of wisdom or of comfort with which to face life's hardest questions? Looking not for easy answers but for courage, strength and insight, can we find in Christian faith any help for our distress? In this sermon, I want to suggest three elements of Christian faith that may enable us to confront life's hard questions. The three things are part of "the Christian memory," the memory we share of the figure at the heart of Christian faith. They are, first, the memory of Christ, the healer; second, the memory of Christ the crucified; and third, the memory of Christ, the risen Lord. Let's look at each of them in turn.

CHRIST THE HEALER—Our four Gospels agree that Jesus Christ began his ministry by healing the sick and helping the suffering. He encountered a man possessed with the demons of mental illness, a woman with an unstopped flow of blood, the lame, the deaf, the paralyzed, a little girl given up for dead, a boy convulsed with epilepsy—in every case, conditions which confront human beings with the same hard questions we have to ask. Leave aside for now the question of miracles, the question of how healing happened; consider only the fact neither history nor reason can dispute: he served those who suffered. He met head-on not only their illness and pain, but also the suffering of those who loved them—the parents of sick children, the sisters of Lazarus, the friends of the blind, the paralyzed, the mentally ill. This indisputable fact is at the core of the Christian memory of Jesus: that he never turned away from suffering, but met and comforted and stood with all who suffered, and all who loved the ones who suffered. Human suffering was part of the inescapable reality in which he lived his life and did his work. The memory of his never having turned away from those who suffered or from those who loved them reminds us that when we love or suffer we are among those whom he came to serve. Quite apart from the category of miracle and whatever we make of it, the memory of Christ the healer informs us that just as we confront life's mortality and fragility, so did he. Indeed, it may well be that it is only when we find the courage to confront life's hardest questions that we are able to come face to face not only with suffering, but also with Christ. When we deal with life's sorrows and losses, we are standing where Christ the healer stood, and neither his memory nor his presence is very far from us.

CHRIST THE CRUCIFIED—The Christian memory looks back not only to a person who stood beside those who suffered, but also one who came face to face with his own suffering and his own death. When classic Christian faith affirms that "Jesus Christ suffered under Pontius Pilate, was crucified, dead, and buried," it proclaims that his suffering was real—as real as any suffering we encounter, as painful as any loss we endure. He was not some half-real humanoid who floated along without touching the ground: he was real, he was human, and therefore he suffered, and therefore he died. In a world in which mortality is indeed our daily companion, and the fragility of life our knowledge in the night, it ought to mean more to us than it usually does to know that Christ suffered pain and loss. That means he is one of us. It means that no extremity of loss or suffering is alien to him.

William Sloane Coffin, Minister of Riverside Church, lost a son in an auto accident some years ago. He wrestled for weeks with some sort of response to those who tried to "comfort" him with the assurance that his son's death had been God's will. He finally came up with the words I have borrowed as the title of this sermon. God did not "will" that a young person at the beginning of life should die, Dr. Coffin said; "God was the first to weep when my son died."

Christ the healer, Christ the crucified, is he who comes to us to share our human lot. Along with the loving God who weeps when children die, he suffers with us when we are wracked by life's hard questions, and life's fragility, and life's mortality.

CHRIST, THE RISEN LORD—The Christian memory of Christ as the risen Lord transcends mortality with mystery. It invites us to affirm and proclaim that beyond his mortality and our own, beyond his suffering and the suffering of those we love, God's love and power are still victorious. That memory should never be for us a matter of dogmatic certainty. It should always remain for us a mystery we can neither define nor explain. Whenever the Christian faith has tried to rationalize the resurrection or to dogmatize it, it has been little more

Children's art exhibit

An exciting exhibit of pastel abstracts are on display in the children's room of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

Art majors from Mr. Tom Lucas' tenth, eleventh and twelfth grade classes at Cohasset High School have created these imaginative drawings, which in some depict an eerie world of animals and animals' eyes.

In others there is a bold expression of color and of life as it might appear under microscope. There are also several portraits and a selection of still lifes that round out an exhibit that blooms with local talent.

This show was arranged by Regenia Schultz, art chairman for the Friends of the Library with Tom Lucas of Cohasset High School's art department.

Vo-Tech funds reduced, while hoping for offset

state reimbursement from Chapter 70 funds for each student attending a regional school.

The $149,000 cut means that Easton is now obligated to notify all non-tenured teachers that they are in danger of being laid off if the money is not restored or if the budget fails to win approval.

Teachers must be notified by April 15 of the preceding fiscal year if the possibility of lay-off exists.

At last Wednesday's meeting, Easton announced Vo-Tech's first teacher lay-off. Burt Leone, the first teacher hired by Vo-Tech in 1962 has had his contract terminated because of the consolidation of Metal Fabrication and Precision Sheet Metal into a single department.

After several weeks of investigation, the committee rejected a proposal to issue a $450,000 bond for capital expenditures. Though a bond issue would have reduced this year's budget by $86,000, it would have locked the region into high interest payments over the next five years.

Superintendent Easton predicted that if the budget passes and the state aid is forthcoming, Vo-Tech's budget will stabilize and remain in the range of seven percent through 1989. Otherwise, he said, the school will "slide."

Yearbook Fundraiser Set

March 29, a team of combined Vo-Tech faculty and students will compete against the New England Patriots. But the game will not be football. Instead, the two teams will face each other on Vo-Tech's basketball court.

The game is a fundraising effort in support of the school's annual yearbook. Tickets will cost $3.50 for adults and $2 for children. Superintendent Clifford Easton hopes that, if successful, the event will become an annual contest.

Survey leads to center search

After the successful completion of a community-wide survey by the Senior Center Project Committee, the next step will be to locate a possible site for a facility.

According to the survey which was completed in January, 75 persons indicated they would definitely use a senior center in Cohasset. This response was understandable, according to Project Developer Karin Bartow, because only 17 percent of the persons who participated in the survey had ever visited a senior center

The purpose of the survey, Bartow noted, was to find out if senior citizens would use a center. The survey was developed by Bartow and an Advisory Committee working with her on the study initiated by the Social Service League and the Council on Aging and funded by the South Shore Elder Services.

"Now, we want to explore, to plan for the future. We will have to find out what building or rooms are town owned, or will be donated for a center. If we could find some space within town that is affordable," she continued, "then we could begin to centralize what we have by next fall. If there isn't the space available, then I don't know what direction we'll move."

Bartow explained that a senior center would comprise one or two rooms within a building for use

FROM THE KITCHEN

by JOAN PINKHAM

Getting an early start on her spring cleaning, Blanche Carpenter ended up with a tidy kitchen and we got to enjoy an old cookbook she unearthed. The Marshfield Woman's Club published a cookbook in 1940 in observance of the town's tercentenary celebration. It was only a year or so ago that a membership that reached a peak of two hundred in the 40's, declined to a stalwart few who finally gavelled their last meeting to a sad closing. The cookbook they assembled in their hey-day is a treasury of old Yankee recipes such as Mabel Keene Tyler's Indian Meal Pudding, Hattie Paulding's Raspberry Chiffon Pie, Agnes Dow's Doughnuts, Louise Cornell's Pepper Relish and Ethel Peck's Fruit Flip. Here is Deborah B. Lambert's

INDIAN PUDDING

3 pints milk
8 level T cornmeal
2/3 c. minute tapioca
Scald above ingredients together and add
1 c. molasses
1/2 c. sugar
2 well-beaten eggs
Butter, size of a walnut
1 tsp salt (Note: recipe actually calls for "1 salt-spoon," but never having heard of such a thing, I wonder if our readers can enlighten us)

Bake in moderate over for three hours, stirring frequently first half hour.

The 42-page cookbook sold for 50¢ and had the staunch support of local merchants of the '40's era. The Welch Company of Scituate was pushing Pyrex Ovenware, with a 2 qt. casserole selling for 75¢, Brown's Poultry Farm said their eggs "are EGGSactly what you need," T.G. Graham's at Main and Plain St. in Marshfield offered "Hot dinners and Light lunches," while Barstow's General Store of Ocean St. boasted that "We are servants to a high glass of Summer Trade." (Can't quite understand the reference to "glass.") Two former presidents of the MWC, Gretchen Oakman and Nina French, say these recipes are as good today as they were when their federated woman's club was just about the only social group in town, outside of the Grange. Gretchen recalls seeing her mother, Helena Boegner, making this dish from her native Germany. To this day, it's still a favorite in the old antique Cape where Gretchen makes it in the same kitchen. A great favorite with men, she says this dish keeps well in the refrigerator and repeated servings are best warmed up.

HUNGARIAN RED CABBAGE

Cut fine a small red cabbage (2 lbs.). Put 2T lard into hot pot on stove, add cabbage and 1 scant cup water and 1 tsp. salt. After 5 min. add 5T vinegar and 3/4 c. sugar. Steam covered for 1 1/2 hours. Half an hour before it is done, add 3 or 4 apples (sliced). When done, add approx. 1T flour mixed with a little water.

And here is Nina's contribution to the Tercentenary Cookbook:

CRAB DELMONICO

4 T butter
1 c. crabmeat
1/3 tsp. salt
6 T flour
1 c. browned mushrooms
2 T chopped pimentoes
1 c. bread crumbs
2 c. milk, 1/2 c. light cream
2 diced hard-boiled eggs
1/3 c. melted butter

Melt butter, add flour. When mixed, add milk and cream. Cook slowly, stirring until a creamy sauce forms. Continue to stir while adding remaining ingredients, except for the bread crumbs and melted butter, which combine for topping. Bake in buttered, individual baking shells for 20 min. in 350 oven. Serves four.

Sometimes at board meetings of the Community League there is talk of their getting together a cookbook, for their monthly luncheons often feature delectable dishes such as this one served by Marian Brown and her committee: Esther Bailey, Sandra Braga, Priscilla Hall, Nina French, Peg Mason and Barbara Prouty.

ROLL-UPS

1 1/3 cans cream of celery soup
1 1/3 cups milk
2 6 1/2 oz. cans tuna in water
1 10 oz. pkg. broccoli spears
1/2 cup thinly sliced celery
6 oz. shredded cheddar cheese
1 2.8 oz. can French fried onions
8 flour tortillas (found in refrigerated dough section of market, 10 per pkg.)

Mix soup and milk. Set aside. Combine tuna and thawed and drained broccoli, cut in 1" pieces, celery and mix with one cup of soup mixture. Stir in half of cheese and half of onions. Divide mixture in 8 tortillas and roll up. Place seam side down in lightly greased 11x9x2" baking dish. Pour remainder of soup mixture over. Bake covered at 350 degrees for 35 minutes. Top with remaining cheese and onions. bake uncovered for 5 to 10 minutes more. Serves eight.

Cohasset drama final Friday

"Voices," the play presented two weeks ago by the Cohasset High School Drama Club, will have a repeat performance at 8 p.m. March 22 at the John Hancock Hall in Boston. The production will be part of the final competition in the state drama festival.

Two weeks ago, Cohasset won a special award for ensemble acting with the production, and they were moved into the final competition. The play is based on a work by Peter Dee, adapted by CHS director Ron Emmons. It is a series of short scenes depicting life as a teenager.

The cast which won the recent award include: Jilliam Ayer, Erin Brown, Jenna Emmons, Jacqui Fahey, Andrews Galsfeld, Kim Harrington, Glen Hochkeppel, Jen Hynes, Laura Kuhn, John Kuntz, Philip Mahoney, Jim Martin, Shawna McCarthy, Michelle Meagher, and Lisa Pierotto.

All 15 cast members received the award for excellence in acting during semi-final competition, by Professor Sherwood Collins of Tufts University, judge of the festival.

Cast Announced for "Scapino!"

Director Ellen Kelly has announced the names of the cast members selected for the Cohasset Dramatic Club's forthcoming spring production of the comedy "Scapino!"

The Club's final show of its 1984-85 season will have performances on the Town Hall stage on the evenings of Thursday, Friday and Saturday April 25 through 27 with curtain time 8 p.m. and a final matinee on Sunday afternoon April 28 with curtain time 2 p.m.

The cast of characters in this hilarious comedy sees the title role of the lovable rogue Scapino played by Bob Julian, the two fathers Argante and Geronte played by Bill Devaney and John Rice, the son Ottavio played by Ed Lappen another roguish type named Sylvestro will be played by Don Massa, Carlo will be portrayed by Carter Hill, and the two girls Giacinta and Zerbinetta by Amy Nordahl and Beth Colburn.

Polly Di Bona and David Barrett will play the nurse and the headwaiter, respectively. A parade of characters including waiters, waitresses, schoolgirls gypsies will round out the large cast of "Scapino."

The play itself is an adaptation of Moliere's comedy "The Follies of Scapin," adapted for modern stage by Frank Dunlop and Jim Dale. Scott Ketcham is the scene designer for the Cohasset production and lighting effects will be by Tom Finegan. Tamsyn Elliott is the Stage Manager and the Producer is Arthur Paquette.

"Scapino" is a rollicking comedy set in a Neapolitan pizza house and its plot reads much the same as would the libretto of a classical Italian comic opera. Make a note to attend one of the Dramatic Club's performances of "Scapino."

Historical society evening

At the Cohasset Historical Society's recent spring dinner meeting, an audience of about 75 persons was treated to an illustrated talk given by Albert W. Bussewitz, photographer, teacher, naturalist, and for many years the Director of the Massachusetts Audubon Society's Rocky Knoll Nature Center in Milton.

Mr. Bussewitz presented a program of slides, taken by himself, illustrating excerpts from the Journals of Henry David Thoreau. A leading 19th century New England naturalist and writer, Thoreau wrote extensively of his travels and walks in the Massachusetts countryside.

Using photographic slides, Mr. Bussewitz illustrated the various countryside sights described by Thoreau in his Journals and has sought to evoke the feelings experienced by the writer himself. A virtual parade of New England's wild flowers and trees, fields, mountains and streams sprang to life during Mr. Bussewitz's talk, all set to the words of one of nature's keenest observers.

Members and visitors at the Historical Society's spring meeting were treated to a most remarkable and unforgettable program provided by a student of Henry David Thoreau.

Survey leads to search for senior center site

exclusively by the senior citizens.

The survey showed that people are interested in using a senior center. and there is a need to centralize exisiting, scattered programs and where news and information is dispersed for senior citizens.

Seventy-five percent of the 281 who responded to the survey indicated they would use a center. Ten percent said "maybe" and 12 percent they would use one "later." Thirteen percent said they would not use a center and ten percent answered "probably not." The survey answers were grouped into those categories.

As Bartow noted, the largest group, thirty-five percent, indicated they don't know if they would use a center. Given the fact that only 17 percent of the people answering the survey had ever visited a senior citizens center, and a precise model of a center has yet been presented to the senior population, this response is understandable, Bartow added.

The top ten activities the respondents would like to have within the center include: films, lectures, educational courses, cultural trips, social meals, socialization, exercise, arts and crafts, book club, dinner club and dancing.

Question seven on the survey was the focal point of the questionnaire. Depending on how people answered "Would you use programs or participate in activities offered at a senior drop in center?" they were grouped into the following categories: Yes (27 percent), Maybe (10 percent), No response (35 percent), Later (12 percent), Probably not (three percent), No (thirteen percent).

The ages of the respondents were also calculated. According to the previous categories, 52 percent of the Yes group are in the 60's, thirty nine percent are in their 70's and eight percent are in their 80's. In the Maybe group, 55 percent are in their 60's, 45 percent are intheir 70's and none in their 80's.

Forty two percent of the No response group are in their 60's, 42 percent are in their 70's and 14 percent are in their 80's. Eighty five percent of the Later group are in their 60's, 15 percent are 70 years or older. Thirty percent who answered Probably not use, are in their 60's, 50 percent are in their 70's and 20 percent are older than 80.

The people who answered No include 58 percent in their 60's, 28 percent in their 70's and 14 percent older than 80.

Another revealing question, according to Bartow, was one in which persons indicated their awareness of current programs for senior citizens in Cohasset. Sixty nine percent said they were aware of Council on Aging lunch program. Twenty one said they were not aware. Seventy five percent said they do not use it, although 21 answered that they would use it in the future.

Ninety percent of the respondents said they were aware of the Senior Shuttle Bus. Only one percent answered negatively. Nine percent said they used it, and 73 percent said they don't. Twenty five noted they would use the service in the future, and only four percent said they would not.

"Some of the activities are already provided in Cohasset, but most are not in any organized way," said Bartow. "We think respondents are not only looking for these kinds of programs, but for the socialization that goes along with it."

More survey participants knew of the Social Service League's health and social services than those who knew about the South Shore Elder Services home health and caretaking services. Those who use the services of both agencies found them to be very helpful and no longer use because the need does not exist, Bartow added.

If anyone in the community is interested in viewing the complete result of the survey, they may do so by calling Bartow at the Social Service League office. Questions raised in the surveys, in addition to the comments, will be addressed in ongoing publicity, she added.

College registration

Late registration will be taken for college courses at Northeastern University's Weymouth campus during the first week of classes, beginning April 1.

Northeastern officials said that would-be students who have not yet signed up for courses at the Weymouth campus may attend the first night of a course and register for it there, on the spot.

Some 75 courses are being offered at the Weymouth campus, at Weymouth North High School. Most of the evening classes meet for approximately two hours per week.

For more information on Weymouth courses and a free Schedule Guide, contact Northeastern's University College at 437-2400.

A further look into religious inter-marriages

By Elisabeth Gorfinkle

"I've known so many sweet marriages between Jews and non-Jews," Rabbi Benjamin Rudavsky told his audience at the March 10 South Shore B'Nai B'rith Lodge breakfast meeting held at Hull's Temple Beth Shalom.

"The important question is if they are good people who know themselves and what they want," he said.

Rudavsky was asked by the lodge to discuss the issue, for he belongs to the small minority of American rabbis who will conduct intermarriage ceremonies.

In fact, Rudavsky, past rabbi for Congregation Sha'Aray Shalom in Hingham (1974 to 1980) and now a freelance rabbi living in the same town, said he has presided at "hundreds" of these marriages.

"I am not for mixed marriages. But kids today live in an open world and are meeting and falling in love. Mixed marriages are complicated and difficult. For instance, parents must put in extra effort to provide their children with (religious) identities," he said.

Rudavsky was ordained in 1950 by the Jewish Institute of Religion based in New York and served as Hillel director at the Universities of Virginia and Illinois. He served as the spiritual director of congregations in Cleveland and Brookline, before coming to Hingham. Between 1965 and 1980, he also taught Hebrew at Brandeis University, Waltham and Boston University.

In the midst of his busy career, Rudavsky, a reform rabbi who has master's degrees in modern Hebrew literature and philosophy, became involved with the Mixed Marriage Commission of the Central Conference of American Rabbis.

The central conference is the rabbinical association for reform rabbis. And the commission of 12 rabbis, which met in New York and Chicago from 1971 to 1973, discussed the possibility of allowing Reform rabbis marry Jews to Gentiles.

Rudavsky was one of a two-member subcommittee that was in favor of the policy change. The subcommittee's proposal was firmly voted down.

The rabbis' concern with intermarriage is based on a fear of assimilation that goes back to Bibilical times, when men who married out of the faith were cut off from Judaism. In order to insure that property titles and inheritance stayed within Jewish circles, a law was passed which traced religious status to mothers instead of fathers.

Today, many Reform rabbis interpret this aspect of Talmudic law (also known as Halacha, the laws which govern all aspects of an Orthodox Jew's way of life) to mean that they can only preside at a marriage where the Gentile partner has previously converted.

Rudavsky believes that the interpretation is archaic and goes against the grain of the religion. "Judaism at best is a universal religion. At worst it is narrow-minded. In respect to Jewish continuity and survival, I feel we are enriched by the new blood.

"Judaism was never a conversionist religion. Our belief is we don't own the keys to the Kingdom. These rabbis have lost touch with a central Jewish tenet, that we don't proselytize," he said.

Based on the escalated number of requests for mixed-marriage ceremonies, Rudavsky believes their frequency has gone up about 50 percent. He added that out of the mixed marriages he has conducted in the last ten years, 99.99 percent of the Jewish women and 33 percent of the Jewish men are raising Jewish children.

And a new rule of patrilineality instituted by the Union of American Hebrew Congregations (the governing body of Reform Judaism) in 1984 makes it possible for Reform temples to automatically accept the children of Jewish fathers, along with the traditionally-accepted children of Jewish mothers.

"The wonderful thing that I do is I don't diminish a mixed marriage," Rudavsky explained.

He said counselling by rabbis and clergy throughout the courtship and after the marriage, has proven valuable to the couples, especially in the area of rearing children.

"We tell them that they shouldn't be ambiguous and let the kids do it on their own. Kids can't be both because Judaism and Christianity mix like oil and water. But they can and should be exposed to both," he said.

Based on a report in a recent newletter put out by the Central Conference of American Rabbis, a growing number of Reform congregations are insisting that temples hire rabbis willing to preside at mixed marriages, Rudavsky said.

"I say mixed marriages are the wave of the future!"

Boys drained after long road to victory

ionally spent. A hard victory over Umana and the tragic death of basketball fan and friend Desiree Yess made last week very trying for the Skippers.

"But I think these two victories shows what the kids have inside themselves. Although things were difficult off the court, they pulled themselves together to win, no matter what it took," said Minelli.

Minelli tried to postpone the Umana semi-final game Wednesday night (the day after the tragic auto accident) but couldn't because of scheduling commitments.

School Supt. Eugene Crowell addressed the team before they left on the bus trip and expressed the wishes of the Yess family. The basic message was Desiree would have wanted the Skippers to go out, play hard and win.

The Skippers used the Stonehill College chapel to meditate and pray. "I wanted our players to come out of the chapel with a feeling of love, feeling and compassion," Minelli said.

The key to the Umana win typified the strength of "Eddie and the Cruisers." Cohasset had held a slight lead throughout the half and had junior center James Creed on the bench with three fouls.

Minelli inserted his quickest unit and the results was an 11-point run and a 46-33 halftime lead.

The press unit of Bobby Schultz, David MacDonald, Bryan Edward and Phil Bernstein demoralized Umana. "I think when Creed went out, everyone thought Umana would take advantage of our small squad and make a big run at us," said Minelli.

Cohasset wasn't challenged in the second half as its smallest lead was eight points. The Cruisers upped the lead to 11 at the end of the third quarter and the lead increased to 20 points. Minelli then cleared his bench so all of his players could see action.

Leading the scoring parade was Bryan Edwards who scored 27 points and colected 12 rebounds. Creed was next with 21 points and 11 rebounds, Tony Bogarty, 17, Bobby Schultz, a very important eight points, Phil Bernstein, seven points and eight rebounds.

David MacDonald scored two points but grabbed eight rebounds and played a strong defensive game. Todd Trautwein and Mark Crough also entered the scoring column.

St. Joseph's does it

The Cruisers capped off a perfect 25-0 season with a 62-56 win over St. Joseph's of Pittsfield Saturday the Worcester Centrum. But it wasn't easy.

To begin with, the sting of Tuesday night's auto accident still lingered. Jim Creed had to leave Thursday to attend the funeral of his relative.

"My players were flat. They were tired. It was a long, long season," Minelli said.

St. Joseph's tried a deliberate stall tactic to force the Skippers to an unaccustomed slow down game.

The first half was in slow motion. St. Joseph's held the ball for two minutes at a time. The Skippers managed a 16-10 first quarter lead but only scored six second quarter points to enter the lockerroom with a slim 22-21 lead.

But Cohasset picked up the scoring tempo in the third quarter as Bryan Edwards came alive with five straight points. Schultz and MacDonald hit four straight jump shots midway through the third quarter and that propelled the Cruisers to a 44-41 lead through the third quarter.

An Edwards steal led to two Bogarty free throws and that upped the Cohasset lead to 56-49 with 1:44 remaining.

"It was a blue collar game - hard work - and we won it in the trenches," said Minelli.

Minelli, soon to be named Boston Globe Coach of the Year, cleared his bench to allow all of his players the thrill of being on the court for the final two minutes.

A balanced scoring attack again paid off. Edwards scored 19 points, Bogarty, 15, Bernstein scored four points but played a solid game off the boards and Creed, Schultz and MacDonald each chipped in with eight solid points.

Minelli says all of his players are relieved the season is over and the unblemished record of 25-0 remains perfect.

Seniors David MacDonald and Phil Bernstein will leave but Minelli believes the strength of upcoming underclassmen will make the Cruisers a stronger team next year.

Eddie and the Cruisers will return next fall. Save your lungs until then.

A group of 'overachievers'

League, South Section A1 champions, and finally Eastern Mass. champions.

Fallon cited several reasons for the Skippers' overwhelming success this season. First, he believed strongly that his team peaked at the right time and reached its full potential just in time for the tournament.

Second, he felt Cohasset responded well to pressure throughout the latter part of the year. Fallon credited his team's poise to the many years of experience the seniors had during their high school careers.

Finally, Fallon had no doubt that the Skippers' success was mainly the result of a balance of talent. According to Fallon, "The team consists of a group of overachievers. We got an effort out of everyone, and there was never one superstar."

The girls were obviously unhappy about losing their last game; however, according to Tracy Fitzpatrick, who was one of the tri-captains, "We have worked very long and I feel really good to have come within one point of becoming the state champs."

Tracy went on to praise the hard work of Fallon whom she referred to as, "a great coach, the reason we got as far as we did."

Tri-captain, Lucas, also held her coach in high esteem and said, "Before he came, Cohasset didn't know how to win. He built a program geared toward us and gave all of us the desire and will to win." Fallon's principle seems to have worked, because in the past three years his teams have over 50 victories.

Fallon concluded by saying, "We exceeded our goals this year. This is the finest basketball team Cohasset has ever had."

Advisor review by law changes

After listening to a lengthy presentation of the planning board's 12 warrant articles, the advisory committee's immediate reaction was "too much at one time."

Chairman Jacqueline Dormitzer questioned Planning Board Chairman Christine Bassett several times during Tuesday night's session, wondering, "are all these articles necessary at one time?" Basset asnwered that after all the work completed by the planning board, many more could have been added to the warrant.

The Chamber of Commerce, will meet with advisors Thursday night to discuss their arguments against several of the articles which pertain to business development, specifically on Route 3A.

The advisory committee has not voted whether to recommend the articles to Town Meeting.

The basis of many of the articles, Bassett explained, is to leave as much quality land in Cohasset open. Using the best properties for building will retain only the poorer land for open space and will also deteriorate the existing drainage systems. Many of the current articles also pertain to the wave of cluster developments being proposed in Cohasset. Esthetic considerations are also included in several of the planning board's proposals.

Beacon Hill Roll Call

"Beacon Hill Roll Call" records local representatives' votes on several roll calls from the week of March 11-15. There were no roll calls in the Senate.

SUPPLEMENTAL BUDGET (H 5800)

House 139-1 gave final approval and sent to the Senate an $83 million plus fiscal 1985 supplemental budget. Provisions include some $55 million to pay for collective bargaining agreements with state employees; $7 million for snow and ice removal; and $6 million to reimburse cities and towns for conducting the census.

Supporters said the package was a reasonable one which will fund necessary programs and pay outstanding bills. Opponents said the package contained unnecessary items and should have provided for increased local aid and a tax cut. (A "yea" vote is for the package. A "nay" vote is against it.)

Voting "yea" were Reps. Robert Ambler, Suzanne Bump, Robert Cerasoli, William Flynn, Frank Hynes, Charles Mann and Mary Jeanette Murray.

On three roll calls, the House rejected similar attempts to increase the amount of local aid to cities and towns from fiscal 1984 from $860.8 million to $943.6 million.

Supporters said the $82.8 million increase would result in communities actually receiving 40 percent of fiscal 1984 growth revenues which they were promised. They noted that all the final figures are now in and that the higher figure is 40 percent of actual growth revenues while the lower figure was based on estimates which actually have shortchanged communities by $82.8 million.

Some opponents said when indirect aid like court rentals is included, communities have already received close to 40 percent. Others claim it was too late to go back to fiscal 1984 and noted the state is facing new variables and problems.

Many said the House should address the question at the upcoming hearing dealing with the entire issue of local aid and the possible creation of a local aid stabilization fund.

40 PERCENT (H 5800)

House 81-63, rejected an amendment to increase fiscal 1984 local aid to cities and towns by $82.8 million.

Voting "yea" were Reps. Ambler, Flynn, Hynes, Mann and Murray.

Voting "nay" were Reps. Bump and Cerasoli.

$14 PER CAPITA (H 5800)

House 86-61, rejected an amendment to increase fiscal 1984 local aid by $82.8 million and to distribute it on the basis of $14 per capita.

Voting "yea" were Reps. Ambler, Flynn, Hynes, Mann and Murray.

ESCROW (H 5800)

House 97-44, rejected an amendment creating an $82.8 million local aid reserve account to be held in escrow and then distributed through a formula determined by the legislature if the comptroller determines that communities did not receive 40 percent of actual growth revenues.

Voting "yea" were Reps. Ambler, Flynn, Hynes, Mann and Murray.

Voting "nay" were Reps. Bump and Cerasoli.

$75 MILLION TAX CUT (H 5800)

House 96-51, rejected an amendment providing for a $75 million tax cut by reducing the 7.5 percent surtax to 5 percent for 1985. Amendment supporters said the $75 million to fund the cut would come from the $75 million reserve fund which the legislature established last year and which was designated to be used for a future tax cut.

Opponents argued the proposal was premature and said any tax cut should be filed as a bill and be given a full public hearing. They claimed it is irresponsible to consider this proposal in a vacuum without addressing the whole picture including Governor Dukakis' proposed $64 million tax rebate, other tax cut proposals, federal cutbacks, and new state programs.

Voting for the tax cut were Reps. Flynn, Mann and Murray.

Voting against the tax cut were Reps. Ambler, Bump, Cerasoli and Hynes.

RETURN SURPLUS (H 5800)

House 119-23, rejected an amendment requiring that any surplus remaining in the general fund at the end of a fiscal year shall be divided among all persons filing an income tax return the following year by allowing those taxpayers a tax credit equal to the calculated share.

Supporters said the amendment is fair and simply insures that taxpayers, not the state, receive any surplus. Opponents said the amendment is fiscally irresponsible and would also create a bureaucratic nightmare which would simply be unworkable.

Voting for the amendment was Rep. Mann and Murray.

Voting against it were Reps. Bump, Cerasoli, Flynn, Hynes.

NURSING (H 5800)

House 120-20, rejected a bill allowing the state to grant practical nurse licenses only to persons who graduate from a school for practical nurses. Supporters, noting 25 states have similar laws, said only persons with the proper education for practical nurses should be licensed. They said it is unfair that those who fail a registered nurse test are then allowed to become practical nurses by passing the practical nurse test.

Opponents said the bill is too restrictive and argued that persons who study registered nursing usually have superior training and should not be prohibited from becoming practical nurses.

Voting for the bill was Rep. Flynn.

Voting against the bill were Reps. Bump, Hynes, Mann and Murray.

South Shore Art Center spring semester announced

A new semester of courses will usher in the warm spring days of April; the South Shore Art Center's spring semester begins April 1.

Courses in drawing, painting, photography, color, design, sculpture, and children's art are being offered by the Center, 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset. Advanced registration is required for all classes and workshops.

Two courses by sculptor Walter Horak offer a good foundation into the art of sculpting. His Human Figure in Clay meeting on Thursdays, beginning April 4, from 12:30 to 2:30 p.m. is intended to give the students an understanding of the human form and its sculptural possibilities. Working from a live model, the students will explore proportion, mass and volume, expression and gesture and abstraction of the figure.

The focus of his course the Carved Wood Sculpture will be the design and execution of a single piece of carved wood sculpture. From drawings and or maquette the students will develop an idea, select an appropriate block of wood and carve the piece down to a finished state. This course meets Wednesdays, beginning April 3, from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m.

In the design department, Irena Roman will again teach her course Artwork for Reproduction on Mondays, beginning April 1, from 7:30 to 10 p.m. and Louise Kalish will teach Update Your Imagery, a creative color and design course on Fridays, beginning April 5 from 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

Artwork for Reproduction is an introduction to procedures and technique designers use to create artwork for reproduction. Emphasis is on design as a means of communication; class projects are based on professional assignment. Update Your Imagery gives students a chance to explore their creativity and imagination while working with the theories of the interaction of color. Composition and design will be emphasized and developed in both abstract and realistic problems.

A wide range selection of drawing and painting courses are available on the spring schedule, meeting at varying times throughout the week. Monday's schedule includes Katherine Smit's Basic Portrait from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. and Drawing with Charcoal with Virginia Moore from 7:30 to 10 p.m.

Tuesdays's schedule includes Pastel Portrait with Constance Flavell Pratt, 9 a.m. to noon and 12:30 to 3:30 p.m. and Creative Anatomy from 7:30 to 10:15 p.m. Virginia Avery's Watercolor from 9:30 a.m. to noon, and Albert Abany's Oil and Acrylic Painting from 12:30 to 3 p.m.

Thursday's schedule includes David Tandy's Introductory Drawing and Introductory Painting meeting from 7:15 to 10:15 p.m., Abany's Drawing from Nature, from 12:30 to 3 p.m., and Eleanor Avakian's Oriental Brush Techniques from 9:30 a.m. to noon.

The photography department is offering three selections including two Paul Fortin courses, Photography for Beginners on Mondays from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m., and Improve Your Photographs on Wednesdays from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m., and John Droege's Beginning Darkroom on Thursdays from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m.

Four children's courses are scheduled to start the first week of May. These include Lisbeth Koopman-Wyman's Painting and Drawing ages six to eight on Tuesdays, 4 to 5:30 p.m.; Painting and Drawing II for ages nine to 12 with Serena Brundige on Saturdays, 10:30 a.m. to noon; Syma's Child and Sculpture on Wednesdays from 4 to 5:30 p.m., and Brundige's Moms and Tots for moms and their three and four year-olds on Mondays from 10 to 11 a.m.

A junior high workshop by Serena Brundige is slated to begin Friday, April 26 from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. This workshop is designed for ages 12 to 14 and emphasizes individual expression while at the same-time exploring the various art concepts.

CHS career program

Edward J. Leonard Jr. of the Cohasset High School guidance office, announces a new Career Education Program for CHS students. The purpose of this program is to expose the students to the job and career opportunities available to them through guest speakers who are local community residents.

These guest speakers address students on their profession and are matched to academic classes which most closely relates to the skills necessary for that career. In this manner, students may begin to understand the importance of their courses as a foundation for successful careers. Additionally, the students who work in the Audio-Visual Department, under the supervision of Dr. John Packard, A.V. Director, these presentations are video-taped and can be used in the classroom and may be seen on Cohasset's cable station on Wednesday and Thursdays.

Linda Starmer and Robert Davenport, both Cohasset and members of the Parents School Organization, (PSO), have been instrumental in recruiting the speakers for the program. Their committee includes: Susan McNamara, Nancy Sandell, Mr. and Mrs. Peter O'Loughlin, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Dalrymple, Susan Shumaker, Mr. and Mrs. Timothy Marsac, and William Roberts of the Boy Scout Explorer Post.

As a result of their involvement, the English and Science classes have had guest speakers and later this year the Math and Social Studies classes will have their speakers.

Both faculty and students have been pleased with the quality and variety of presentations. Some of the speakers thus far include: Lincoln Bloomfield, writer; Ubaldo DiBenedetto, writer; Betty Isele, author and publisher; Peter O'Loughlin, attorney; Dr. Bernard O'Brien, psychologist; Goodwin Schramn, international advertising manager; Linton Young, national accounts manager; Tanna Kasperowicz, editor; Jeffrey Bettinger, chemical engineer; John Collins, electrical engineer; Charles DeSantis, pilot; Dr. Steven Golden, medical doctor; Dr. Zigmunt Pozatek, oral surgeon; David Whipple, engineer; Aileen Cahill, pediatric care nurse education specialist; Skiddy Casoni, taxidermist; Kevin Gardner, physical therpist; Dr. Michael Rogers, chiropractor; and Dr. Vaughn Pratt, veterinarian.

Everyone associated with this endeavor is most enthusiastic with its beginning and excited about its potential. Committee members are interested in having additional community residents become involved in the program. For more information, contact the high school guidance office at 383-6102.

'God first to weep,' Rev. Benbow than "Christ's easy answer" to life's hard questions. The memory of Christ, the risen Lord, is not an easy answer to suffering. It is instead the culmination of the mystery of suffering and of love, the audacious faith that God's last word is not death but life. It is no easy answer, but a call to live our mortal life in terms of mystery as well as mortality, in terms of courage and power as well as the familiar fragility of ourselves and those we love.

Two prime factors shape our human life. They are chance and choice. Chance is the random reality of our being here at all, and with it the random facts of accident or illness, of genetic endowment or random events. Chance shapes our living and our dying. A car skids out of control; an illness strikes us or someone we love; and these at some elemental level, are events of chance. Choice is our limited but important control of the events that shape us. Chance is what's given to us in a sequence that began when we were conceived and continues until we die; choice is what we do with what we're given, how we shape what shapes us—what we do with our years, and our skills, and our energy.

Chance and choice are the elements of our mortality. Just as there is mystery beyond our mortality, so there is beyond chance and choice another factor. It is the loving grace of God. Beyond the accidents of chance and the decisions of choice, Christian faith has always affirmed, there is the gift of grace. That gift alone may be what gives us the courage to live our chances and our choices. The free gift of God's grace and love is the mystery beyond our mortality. It gleams like a star just beyond the darkest horizons, and gives us courage and strength in the midst of mortality: to live joyfully, though we know we will die; to love even what we know is fragile; to happily receive what we know we can lose—to take our chances and our choices as part of the gift, part of the grace and love that come from God.

God who weeps when children die, God who has come to us to share our fragile mortality—God is Lord of life and death, transcending mortality with mystery. Still, faced with life's hard questions, we have no easy answer. This is all we know, and all we need to know: God is love.

Politicus — by David A. Mittell, Jr.

Secretary Johnston is on the spot

The headlines don't show it, but human services in Massachusetts are in poor shape — in too many ways worse than they were 20 years ago when an era of loud advocacy began. There are some successful programs among those receiving the approximately $3 billion the state now spends on human services. Senior home care, for example, under which the elderly receive nursing and other help in their homes, is a highly cost-effective and spiritually superior alternative to nursing homes.

But in the overview there are far too many human service disasters, so many that one must wonder if state government or any government is able or will ever be able to administer such programs with an acceptable degree of humanity and efficiency. It is in no way possible to give the "overview" in a single article, but a couple of examples will illustrate the categories of the morphosis of failure.

The first category is when ideology (and therefore prejudice) rule over obvious reality — as in the case of the treatment of the mentally ill. In this instance, the ideology that became public policy was "deinstitutionalization." The theory was that the regimented wards of state hospitals were inappropriate, untherapeutic dead-ends for a hospital population much of which was neither violent nor self-destructive.

So deinstitutionalization became the name of the game, and great pressures were put (and continue to be put) on hospital administrators to get rid of their patients. The very sick were discharged together with the somewhat sick. Those who might survive on the outside with plenty of preparation and lots of follow-through were shown the hospital gate with sometimes nothing more to guide them than a piece of scratch paper containing the telephone number of a homeless shelter: the Pine Street Inn for men or Rosie's Place for women.

The result, as Colin Nickerson recently pointed out in his excellent, disturbing series in the Boston Globe, was this: Whereas in Colonial times the mentally ill used to wander from town to town scrounging for food and sleeping in doorways, for a relatively short time in this century they were provided with warm beds and decent food in state-run institutions. Today, however, the mentally ill wander from town to town, as before, sleeping in doorways, and begging for the modern psychiatric equivalent of alms. This is in a state that will spend three times as much in 1986 for human services as the entire 1966 state budget.

Another category in the morphosis of human service failure is the "whoops, we forgot to manage that particular program" proclivity of liberal activists become button-down bureaucrats. A case in point is the W.I.C. (for "women, infants and children") program. W.I.C. is a low-cost, federally-financed, state-administered program designed to prevent malnutrition and its consequences in pregnant women and very young children.

So effective has this program been that the Reagan Administration and its opponents have been able to agree from the start that this is one program worth preserving. It is the program that Ray Shamie referred to last year when he criticized John Kerry for calling President Reagan heartless while the Dukakis Administration was failing to spend federal nutrition money in a timely manner.

Poor Ray, he was right, but he didn't know the half of it. He might be senator if he had. Not only did the state fail to allocate the $890 thousand Shamie referred to, which therefore had to be returned to the federal treasury; the Massachusetts W.I.C. program understated its clientele to the "feds" last year by 13 percent, which accordingly resulted in a self-inflicted $1 million reduction in federal support for the program. Furthermore, the state W.I.C. office has somehow lost $400 thousand in "administrative costs," money it can neither find nor account for having spent. The result of these problems: infants being served by the program have been cut from 24 quarts of milk per month to 20.

How did this little can of worms come to light: Did systems analysis in state government catch hold of a bureaucratic "glitch?" Nope. The fact is that one long-time nutrition advocate — a non-state employee — raised a repeated stink until an investigation ensued. Since then the state W.I.C. director has departed, but (as sources report) the can of worms continues.

One does not like to simply sit back and criticize. There will probably always be mismanagement in public as well as in private enterprise. What is disturbing about both the colossal mismanagement of deinstitutionalization and the obscure (though consequential) mismanagement of the W.I.C. program is that both come courtesy of the best, the brightest, and the most committed.

We aren't talking about old-time civil service hacks, we're talking about the blunders, the mismanagement, and the lack of follow-through of the loud generation under 50 — the reformers who lobbied for fundamental change in human services. Throughout the nation they succeeded in replacing private, religious, and locally-controlled public charity with public human services overseen by mega-agencies spending mega-dollars.

One may begin to ask: to what end? Are the mentally ill better off shivering in doorways, begging for food and treatment than they were untreated but clothed, housed, and fed in state hospitals? If the Massachusetts W.I.C. program in the ninth year of the Dukakis Administration can't get a few gallons of milk to a few poor women in the state, can government anywhere be entrusted to do so?

Philip Johnston, the state's Secretary of Human Services, dropped by the office last week to outline some of Gov. Dukakis' plans to remedy the plight of the homeless mentally ill (a plight the first Dukakis Administration did so much to create). Johnston is probably the best, brightest, most committed, and most competent human services secretary we have had or will soon have again. His ideas, which involve the mixed development of the prime real estate that used to house the large state hospitals, have some merit, and will be gone into another time.

The point I wish to make here, however, is that Johnston is a fellow on whom enormous pressure resides. In no way is Johnston the bureaucrat responsible for the horror shows enumerated above . . . yet. He hasn't held office long enough. But if in the next couple of years he can't begin to make sense out of the $3 billion agency he heads, then the question may be asked: Can anyone?

thrown at me. I was a carpetbagger in Norwood, too."

When Selectman Frank England asked Wood to describe the difference between a Town Manager and an Executive Secretary, Wood stated,"There is a lot more interaction with selectmen and coordination of activities back and forth with the Executive Secretary. You are more the boss than in Norwood. The secretary is in the middle."

England added, "you are the spokesman, not the director."

Laugelle noted that as long as the secretary was handling the daily operation of the town without incident or problem, selectmen do not interefere with his work.

"As I view the role, I would have to feel what the board wants," Wood said. "After a period of time, I should know what's important to you and what's not. Communication is important, even if there was a town manager."

The former Norwood Assistant Town Manager described the budgetary duties he performed there, which included assisting several departments with the formulation of their fiscal year budgets. There were some budgets over which he had full control.

In answer to a question posed by Selectman Laugelle, who admitted that "Cohasset is nothing but a stepping stone in this business," Wood said he would not want to include a contract provision stipulating a six-month job termination notice. He said a three-month notice by either party that the contract would be ending is enough time. He told selectmen that, unlike the previous executive secretary, he would give them more than two weeks notice that he was leaving the position.

Wood also candidly admitted the $25 to $28,000 annual salary "is not that competitive." He said making the position more attractive would help the board lure more candidates to the job. He said he would take the job only if the higher salary range was offered to him.

In answer to a question posed by Diane Sullivan of Jerusalem Road, Wood said, "I left Norwood because I wanted to pursue a higher education and I was at a dead end with my job. The town manager and I discussed my future together. I want certain things for myself and we came to an understanding."

Wood added that he intends to remain in public administration.

Garden Club members win top awards

By Jane Lane

It goes beyond dedication and imagination to transform the concrete interior of the bland Bayside Expo Center into the exquisite New England Flower Show.

And at times, some members of the Cohasset Garden Club felt they had assumed too great a task. But in the end, laden with blue ribbons and prestigious awards,every member agrees it was an experience of a lifetime, an event worth every aching back and broken fingernail.

For the first time in the club's history, the 60 members were awarded a medley of the top awards of the show. It is beyond an honor, it is an incredible feat, considering the amateur garden enthusiasts competed against professional commercial growers in one of the competitions.

Setting up an exhibit for the New England Flower Show encompasses more time, energy and intuitiveness than anyone would fathom. Even the honored award winners, taking a deep breath after their victories, admit they'll take another three years off before entering similar competition.

Lydia Bishop and Betsey Hoopes explain the journey which culminated with the recent awards. It began last spring, when the club decided to enter the 1985 competition.

The pair were selected-volunteered to design the exhibit which would be staged in association with three other amateur clubs in the state. The theme of the flower show was to be centered around water, and the four clubs decided to work on a secondary theme of nursery rhymes.

"We knew what we wanted to do. She sells sea shells 'fit perfectly into the theme," Betsey explains. Lydia and her partner set right to work, designing and staging what would eventually be a garden set along with rocky coast of the Atlantic Ocean.

This is the beach side of the Cohasset Garden Club's award-winning exhibit at the New England Flower Show.

For the strictly amateur gardener who delights in amazement that a rose blooms each spring, the work in such an exhibit may seem overburdening. But not to Lydia and Betsey, who formed a close friendship during their many months of diligence.

And as for deciding what flowers go where and with what, Lydia says, "it is a talent one is born with. Someone may be a musician or an artist. Betsey and I have the knack of creating gardens and knowing which flowers will look the best in a particular setting."

The garden was designed, on paper, by July. The next step was to choose a plantsman who would "force" these often delicate summer flowers into bloom a full three or four months ahead of nature's schedule. A New Bedford man was selected and Betsy began the task of choosing which materials the club members would work with.

The forcer felt the job was "a challenge," which Betsy noted was a definite understatement. The first time they went down to view the budding flowers in the fall, they were downcast. "They were scrawny little things," Betsy remembered. "I thought we were doomed."

Some of the blossoms, such as bayberry, rosa rugosa (wild roses) and daylilies, had never been used in the winter show before. It was an experiment which succeeded triumphantly, according to the judges who took particular note of that fact.

"We designed what we wanted to see," according to Betsey. "We wanted this exhibit to say undoubtedly that this is the seashore. We did not necessarily want to use unusual flowers, but we needed to give the feeling of a summer day. We needed summer flowers."

Although their job was far from finished, members of the club's horticultural committee, Nan Talbot and Barbara Bliss, checked on the forcer's progress every two weeks. Ginny Knowles served as consultant between the forcer and the club, and also

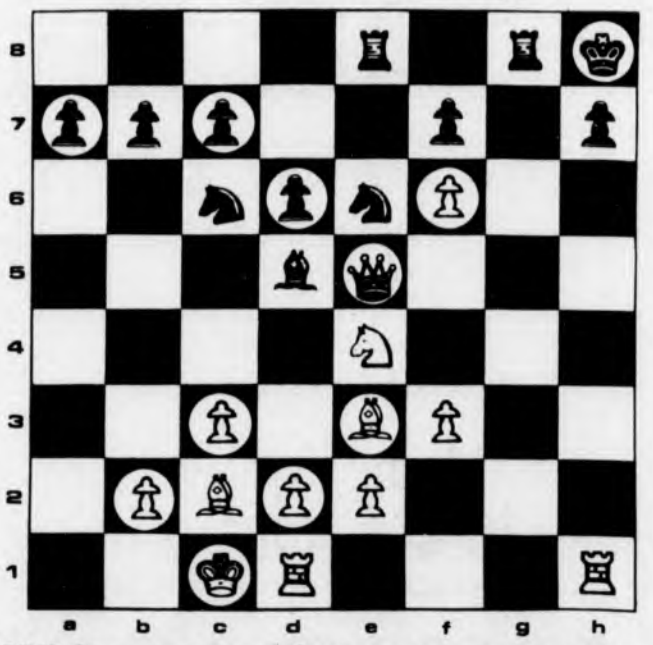
Chess release—3/20/85

By Chris Bernstein

Here's the low down on last week's "Bishop Blindness." There appears as though it had two solutions. The solution that I had given was an accurate five move mate, but seemed less likely than one submitted by Mr. R. Nekorchuk of Pembroke.

The key moves remain the same, 1.)... Nxc2CH 2.)Kf1 Bh3! At this point I prescribed, 3.)Be3 NxBCH 4.)Kel Nc2CH 5.)Kel Rg1 mate, less likely, but applicable. You see, as it was pointed out to me, 3.)Be3 is not whites best defense, for it allows 3.)... BxB 4.) any Rg1 mate. Finally, the low down is, 3.)d4 4.)Be3 BxB 5.) any Rg1 mate.

Obviously I got up on the wrong side of the board some time last week. At any rate, anyone that found 2.)... Bh3 should be credited with curing the "Bishop Blindness," for then it was over for white in no more than three moves. Thanks again to Mr. Nekorchuk for the wake up call.



This weeks quiz is rather lengthy, I would recommend the position be set up on a full size board for shuffling purposes.

Incidentally, there is also a mate in nine moves if white plays like last week. See if you can find 9.)Bf5 mate.

worked hard and long on the actual setting up of the exhibit.

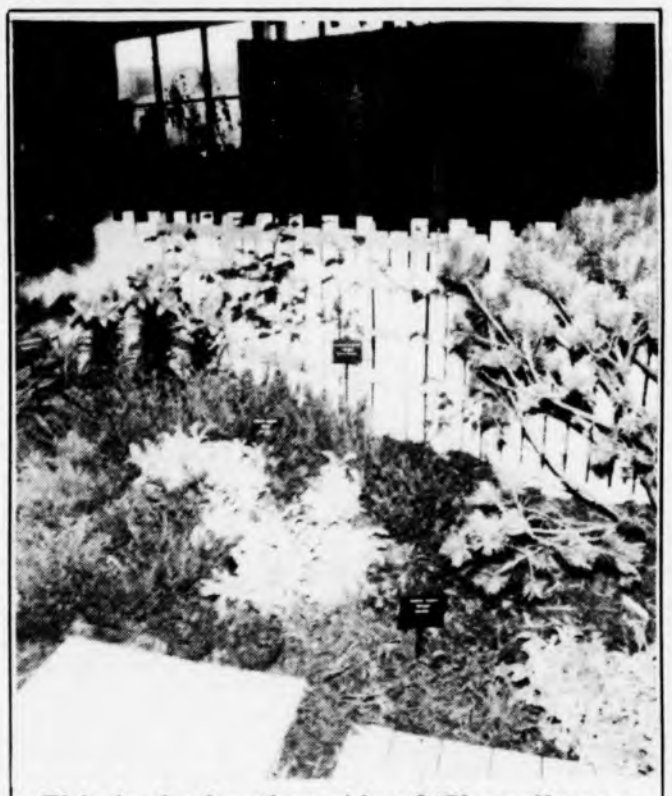
The prop committee, headed by Barbara Power, gathered together all the elements which formed the seaside scene. Two cabana lounge chairs atop a deck overlooked the sand and the gardens. As Betsey explains, everything in the garden was built to five-eighths scale - a miniature version of the seashore.

Patsy Rabtejnek and Patsy Dean traveled to New Bedford to deliver the fragile flowers to the Boston location. That in itself conjures up comical images. They rented a U-Haul truck and packed up all the flowers, wrapped securely to protect them against the foul March winds. There was even an eight-foot pine tree which had to be unloaded by crane at the exhibition hall.

In her own words, this is how Betsey described the final display for the show's judges. "It is an early summer day on a south-facing sundeck near the sea - tucked in the lee of the house and protected from boisterous ocean breezes. A peaceful retreat when favorite flower treasures flourish and the scent of wild roses and pines is everywhere."

"Theoretically," Lydia adds, "an observer would be standing in the ocean looking at this garden."

Just as challenging as the actual design and transportation of the garden blossoms, was the setting up of the 400 square foot exhibit. As Betsey says, "when we got to the Bayside center, all there was was a huge bare hall and a giant pile of mulch dumped in one corner."



"We got our shovels and went to work," Lydia adds. "Sometimes we began at 8 in the morning and didn't get home until 11 at night. Some days I'd come home and say how wonderful it was going, and the next day, I would be worried that it wasn't going well at all."

The Friday morning before the show opened was the day of judgment. It was then that Lydia realized their accomplishment was exactly what they had hoped to achieve. "I never thought of medals," she honestly admits.

"I did," Betsey quickly adds. "I always knew we'd win."

Lydia says the self-doubts surrounded her throughout that week of preparation. "I just didn't know if this flower should be here, or if I should trim this. And we'd always be forgetting things to bring, like screwdrivers or tape."

The judges were unanimous in their approval of the seaside exhibit. The garden club won the Trustee's Trophy, "for a practical, low-maintenance garden, seen from within, for outdoor living, with inviting, but simple design and distinctive plant materials to inspire the average gardener."

This is the heather side of 'She sells sea shells down by the seashore.' This exhibit was awarded top honors at the recent flower show in Boston.

The Cohasset club members were also awarded the American Horticultural Society's Certificate for "the bond between horticulture and the environment and inspires the viewer to beautify home and community through skillful design and appropriate plant material."

The Massachusetts Horticultural Society's Rosette Blue Ribbon was also bestowed on the Cohasset club, with a grade of "straight A." In cooperation with the three other Women's Exhibit Committee clubs, they received six additional awards.

Lydia states, "It was wonderful fun because you worked with people you got to know better. You learn a lot about horticulture, and the seat-of-the-pants kind of things that you learn about yourself in these situations. It was beautiful -something I'll never forget."

Her partner agrees as Lydia adds, "I will never look at the flower show in the same way. It was everything we had hoped it would be."

PATCHES by Lois Martin

Wanting to be Irish for a day

Today, because this is being written March 17, I am delightedly ordained to be Irish. That is true, as well, of the millions of other Yankees or Italians or Africans or Germans in America.

Today Erin embraces us all. And not a one of us honorary Irish to my knowledge is resisting it. We have in fact not only gone along with full celebration of Ireland's lore and lovers, we have joined them. Further we have taken for ourselves on St. Patrick's Day, full liberties as if we were at the most one generation away from County Cork.

It amazes me, this realization of our coast to coast revelry in the heritage of that small country. If I were America's enemy, I might deem this a reasonable moment for invasion because few would notice and fewer would interrupt the more important event for St. Patrick.

I realize I live in a town and near a city where being Irish is being more than equal to the task, whatever it is. Further I've known that combining an Irish heritage with a degree from Boston College is viewed as being equivalent in our area to being the finest gem in the grandest setting.

That imperial perception of Irish heritage has never been other than inviting. We, who come from nationalities which don't have days or parades or pubs named after them, glean elevation, being allowed to be or to play Irish for a day. No one calls us 'imposter' if we invest in buttons with Irish slogans or sing "Did you ever go across the sea to Ireland..." We are expected to wear a bit of green. Our nationalism, our homeland, our source of family pride on St. Patrick's Day, is Ireland, notwithstanding the fact that most of us will never get there. The reality that a person's last name is Steinburg of Renaldi is neither cause nor justification for being apart from the gusto of St. Patrick's Day.

I am not certain of my heritage. My mother and others may gasp to hear that. I know forebearers names and they have lived in New England, particularly Maine since "before water".

Yet I still haven't been in my first Yankee parade, if that's the one I should be waiting for. For that matter I haven't seen a full festival for Africa's descendants. Twenty or so years ago when blacks rallied for freedoms hard won, those throngs weren't viewed as parades.

German Day, or French Day or a China one we haven't had. The closest competitor in these parts to the Irish sweepstakes is the Italian celebration. They do it well but I have never seen the response to Columbus Day like the one to this one.

Perhaps we sneak in, welcomed, to this land's festival because it's fun. That's too simple, but a beginning. Equally plausible is that there's no way out of it here. Wherever we are or whoever we are on St. Patrick's Day, we are pulled along into the day's parade with gladsome expansive well-being by the Irish, who are the only people in the world today who know everything is all right. ...because you're Irish, every one is.

That's irresistible. One of the things the Irish do well is to be certain. And in fact they leave little doubt in their own behavior, response to life. Irish people do not equivocate. They make clear their feelings, all of them, from crying to laughter. And as a people, a country, an individual you and I know they've had cause for crying now and then. Further we know they've done darn well to rebuild their souls to laughter.

And what nationality celebrates better, fondles its own characteristics, builds their strengths and weaknesses alike into national monuments as irrepressible, as irresistible as the Irish?

A few years ago in preamble to St. Patrick's Day the Mariner sponsored a contest. Finish this sentence, we said and win the first prize of all the makings for a corned beef dinner..."You can tell I'm Irish because...".

Never has it occurred to us to hold a contest, ..."You can tell I'm Swedish, Italian, Greek because...".

There has got to be reason for that, more than the high population percentage here of Irish. We apparently want to be Irish for a day. It can't be the corned beef dinner that's the big draw.

Heck, no it's the blustery, bombastic, bawdy blarney. We are in essence invited to their party once a year, wouldn't miss it, even if we can't take it as long as they can.

I haven't met an Irishman or woman yet who came into life through the back door. No, they'll be barging in right up front.

And it has made a warm experience for the rest of America, at least once a year. Happy St. Patrick's Day to those who are celebrating for a fortnight. (That'll guarantee me an audience of at least several thousand.)

She has served as a church school teacher and member of the Christian Education Committee, and brings not only that experience but also her training and skill as a public school and nursery school teacher.

Marsha will begin her work immediately, coordinating the remaining months of the current church school year as she works with the Christian Educa- Committee to plan for next year. A special coffee hour - reception, featuring the traditional Hot Cross buns, will introduce Marsha to parents and parishioners.

Sunday, March 24 - Our choir, Ellen Fryling, and two instrumentalists will present section of "Rejoice!" during the service this Sunday. "Rejoice!" was written in 1964 by Herbert G. Draesel, who used the form and traditional words of the Mass, but set them to lively contemporary music. In the words of the composer, "Rejoice!" was composed to be an effective vehicle for worshipping God in the perplexing, but exciting world of the 20th century." Instrumentalists are Gary Anderson, bass, and John Campbell, guitar. The same composer's "I Walk the King's Highway," will be sung by Louise Flint during the Offertory.

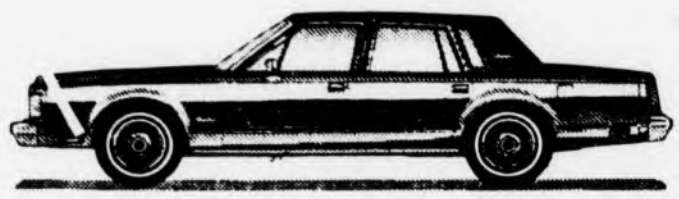
SAAB HAS MORE CARGO SPACE THAN BMW, AUDI, AND VOLVO. COMBINED.

If you add the maximum cargo space of the Audi 5000, the Volvo GLT Turbo and the BMW 733i, you get a total of 53.3 cubic feet.

Yet one Saab 3-door gives you 56.5 cubic feet of maximum cargo space.

As you can imagine, the Saab is a lot more useful than any of the others when you pack up the summer house, provision your boat or make an impulsive buy at a tag sale.



Only the Saab gives you this flexibility because only the Saab has a rear seat that folds down.

Others may claim that as an unfair advantage. But when you test drive a Saab, you'll agree it simply makes good sense. SAAB The most individual car ever built.

Movement and dance workshops at CHS

A Day of Dance was held March 6 at the high school in which students were introduced to the Movement Consort.

The program was sponsored by the high school physical education department and the PSO, and was funded by the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities through the Institute for the Arts, the PSO, and the schools.

The day began with a lecture/demonstration for all students in grades 10 - 12. Steven Malkus, one of the company's three co-directors, explained the why's and how's of dance to the students while Ross Clay and Georgiana Holmes, co-directors, and Boston Conservatory dance students demonstrated on stage.

The Movement Consort is a modern dance group that incorporates mime, and "just about everything else," according to Malkus, except ballet and tap.

Clay, who studied mime extensively in Paris, often uses masks in his dances and performed an excerpt from one based on an Indian dance called "Shaman's Rattle." Holmes has danced professionally with many dance ensembles, most recently Pilobolus, and teaches at the Conservatory.

Malkus received his master's degree in arts from the University of Arizona where he also taught dance to athletes; he is presently teaching at Milton Academy. All three choreograph for their company.

Malkus explained that dance is more than movement, that it is a way of communicating ideas and expressing feelings. It begins with a motivation to say something.

The dancers very ably demonstrated the various forms of dance vocabulary as Malkus spoke. The characteristic types of movement - ballet, modern and jazz, which can be put together to communicate different ideas - with rhythm, or the beat of dance, force, speed, range of movement, design and energy. The dancers showed how the mood or feeling behind an idea can alter what's being presented, such as playfulness, hostility, anger, confrontation, or the classic theme of romance.

Subject matter for dancers can also come from athletics, everyday gestures, even abstract movement - movement for movement's sake - or stillness. Dancers can further characterize dance by partnering and retrograde, repeating movement in reverse.

Although the dancers on stage made it all look easy, Malkus reminded the students they they are trained to. Dancing is hard work and takes a strong commitment. Malkus said it takes five years to learn to be a dancer, and many more to train to become one.

In addition to Clay's mask dance, the Conservatory students performed an exerpt from a piece choreographed for them by Holmes.

The students asked many questions at the conclusion of the demonstration, and showed their interest in dance by attending the two open workshops scheduled later that day in record numbers - 60 and 90! Malkus and Clay led the students in 90 minutes of lively dance exercises. Art classes met in the upper gym and did quick line sketches during the dance workshops.

For those students who wanted to work further with the dancers, Malkus and Clay will be teaching master dance classes after school over the next three weeks. They will prepare the group of interested students to perform a small piece with the Movement Consort at a concluding performane March 27.

Marilyn Watson, Physical Education Department chairman and coordinator for the Dance Program, hopes to develop a more intensive resident program for next year based on the experiences from this event.

Cub Scout Troop 38 news

Despite the flu, chicken pox, and the February vacation, the Cohasset Cub Scouts managed to hold some very interesting and enjoyable meetings.

Den 1- The cub scouts spent two meetings creating their own electronic games. The real fun was creating their individual question and answer cards- and testing their games on each other.

Another meeting was spent making place card cookies to be used at the Blue and Gold banquet.

Receiving awards this month are: Danny Baird, Billy Jordan, and Mike Equi. Danny and Billy received their Bear Badges. All three boys will each receive one gold arrow and one silver arrow.

Den2- A trip to Montillio's Bakery in Quincy was a special treat for the boys this month. They were so grateful for the free cookies at the end of the tour!

For Valentine's Day, the boys made a special chocolate dessert to take home and share with their families.

Our centerpieces for the Blue and Gold banquet are the product of their hard work at our final meeting of the month. It's a surprise!

Earning badges this month are Eric Drysdale and Marc Mercurio. Eric has also earned one gold arrow and one silver arrow. Congratulations!

Den 3- In preparation for the Blue and Gold banquet, the cubs made Jack Knife invitations in which a blade opens out to invite their families to this gala event. They also created a centerpiece for their dinner table using Kleenex box, shells and flowers.

Another meeting the boys travelled to the Herzog household to see Mr. Herzog's lobster pots and hear about lobstering in Cohasset Harbor.

Jay Nothnagle, Scott Herzog, and Jason Porter will each receive their Wolf badges. Jay and Scott Theriault will each get one gold arrow, and Scott will receive three silver arrows. Keep up the good work!

Den 4- Blue and Gold banquet preparations really busied the cubs this past month. The cubs eagerly worked on their family invitations which were created by stencilling the Cub Scout insignia in blue ink on gold paper and then mirror printing the writing on the actual invitation.

As a centerpiece for their banquet table the cubs have created a blue and gold paper palm tree.

A Valentine's Day celebration was also enjoyed, with the bys decorating and devouring heart-shaped cookies. In the spririt of true Cub Scouts, the boys ended their meeting by delivering three sample cookies to den member Gernt Lubitz who was home sick with chicken pox.

A tour of the Cohasset Police and Fire Departments was an informative meeting. The boys found out what it was like to be handcuffed and "detained" in a jail cell. They rang the bells on the fire trucks and were given Tot Finder window stickers to take home. Ice cream followed at Bergson's.

Gerald Lubitz and Bobby Gentile have each earned their Wolf badge. Bobby will also receive one gold arrow. Congratulations!

Den5- Getting ready for the Blue and Gold banquet kept Den 5 busy this past month. The cubs created Packet Invitations out of Blue and Gold construction paper.Contained in the packet was the written invitation for each family.

A wooden "Plus Sign" base painted blue and gold and decorated with candles and flowers will adorn the Den 5 banquet table as its centerpiece.

Webelos- The Webelos have been very busy learning to use different tools with Mr. Merle Brown with which to construct their portable picnic table. Careful, proficient use of each tool is stressed.

We are seeing some very interesting shapes emerge as the boys cut and sand their Pine Wood Derby cars. Looks like it will be a close race.

On Sunday, March 3, the Annual Blue and Gold Banquet took place at the Unitarian Parish House. Cub Scouts devoured everything from chicken to pizza and lasagna with assorted salads, breads, and a dessert of chocolate cake.

To all Cohasset Cub Scouts: a reminder that the Annual Pine Wood Derby takes place on Wednesday, March 27 at the Deer Hill School at 7 p.m.

Summer theater production of 'Barnum'

The Young People's Summer Theatre of Scituate recently announced its 1985 production will be the Cy Coleman musical "Barnum."

The musical was first presented on Broadway from 1980 to 1982, running 854 performances. The show received three Tony Awards for Best Actor (Jim Dale in the title role), Scenic Design and Costuming, and gathered six additional nominations.

"Barnum" is billed as a "musical suggested by the life of P.T. Barnum." Most people are familier with his partnership in the Barnum & Bailey Circus, but in actuality he led an amazing life before he teamed up with James A. Bailey.

Don Capen, Administrator of YPST, said " 'Barnum' is ideal for the organization."

The show includes several showstoppers in its upbeat score, including "Come Follow the Band" and "Join the Circus!" along with some melodic ballads,the most famous being "Colors of My Life."

It also includes many roles in addition to the title character that are an integ al part of the play.

Capen also says the show will require "a cast of thousands — almost. We'll need actors, singers, dancers, tumblers, jugglers, clowns, aerialists, acrobats, gymnasts, unicyclists, short people, tall people, fat and thin people." If anyone has a speciality — we'll take it," he said.

The show is presented in a "Circus style setting," with a Ringmaster as host.

Cy Coleman, composer of the score, also wrote "Sweet Charity," "Little Me" and "On the Twentieth Century," all of which have been produced by YPST.

Capen considers "Barnum" perfect for what is accepted as a year of transitions within the group. "This will be our ninth season," Capen adds. "We're losing a lot of our 'senior' members. By doing "Barnum," we'll be able to utilize some of our younger talent and refine their techniques for future summers. At the same time, "Barnum" fits into the category of somewhat unknown, definitely challenging, and upbeat — all elements we like to include in our presentations."

In addition, YPST will also award scholarship funds in June to a graduating senior, as well as more scholarships in August to YPST members. To date, the group has awarded close to $5,000. Also planned is the annual Dance Marathon which helps raise funds, and other recreational activities. There is also talk of producing a second musical with kids younger than the normal membership age.

Auditions are planned for early June, and it is expected the show will be presented in Scituate High School during the first weekend in August. The group is open to all ages between 13 and 22 years-old and area residents. More information can be obtained by writing to YPST at P.O. Box 41, Scituate.

Wedding Bells Are Ringing

17th century wedding links the present with the past

By Audrey Louison

When Mike Antoine and Carolyn Bacon decided to get married, they wanted their wedding to be different. When Judy Hardy became program director for Hingham's 350th Committee, the group organizing the town's 350th birthday celebration, she knew she wanted to create a meaningful link with the past.

Now the twain have met and on May 4, 1985, Carolyn and Mike will be married in a public ceremony recreating a 17th century colonial wedding.

Carolyn Bacon is, through her father Roger, a direct descendent of John and Priscilla Alden and also of an early Hingham's settler, Daniel Lincoln.

Her grandmother, whose diamond engagement ring now shimmers on Carolyn's right hand, attended Old Ship Church (where the wedding will take place) until her death last year.

Carolyn says that having her wedding serve as a tribute to Hingham's history is particularly meaningful for her and her family.

But in more practical terms, this wedding is taking a more exhaustive planning effort than most. The Bacons and the Antoines, along with a few recruited close friends, have organized a "planning committee" with each member given an area of responsibility. Every week or so, the group gets together to report on progress.

What is it that could possibly require such a dramatic effort? Well, before even the most routine wedding day plans could be made, the group had to do its homework to learn the social customs and mores of 17th century New England.

Fortunately, Carolyn's mother, Janice Bacon, is a bit of a history buff, so she spearheaded the research project that took her, Mike's sister Mary, and friends Laurie McKenzie and Laurie Peterson to Plimoth Plantation.

Every year, the model Pilgrim village stages a mock wedding re-creation and the researchers there very graciously shared their resources and advice with the Hingham group on everything from period attire to food and decor.

What they discovered in Plymouth has dispelled for the group some of what they call the "myth" generally believed about the inhabitants of colonial Massachusetts: that they were a group of somber-faced killjoys dressed in black.

"Not true," says Mary Antoine, and the families hope that through Carolyn's and Mike's wedding, that they can change the way people think of the early settlers.

"Contrary to what most people seem to think," says Janice Bacon, "folks back then wore very colorful and intricately-patterned clothing. Carolyn and her mother have chosen earthy, pastel colors for Carolyn's wedding dress, which will be a close replica of the sort of bulky, full-skirted, many-layered dress popular in those days.

Carolyn declines, however, to wear a "hip roll," which was a layer of bulky material worn underneath a dress to enhance a woman's hips and thus make her waist look relatively small. Carolyn calls it the "inverted tulip" look and, adamantly refuses to have anything to do with it, even for the sake of historical accuracy.

A total of 19 close relatives and friends will be dressed in colonial garb on the day of the wedding. Mrs. Bacon has the role of master seamstress, ably assisted by Carolyn.

Together they will painstakingly create patterns copied from prototypes given them at Plimoth Plantation. Being able to do the sewing will surely save on expenses but Mrs. Bacon can't help but let loose a sigh when she looks at the stray pieces of material piled on her now-hidden dining room table.

Wedding Bells Are Ringing

Trend indicates return to elegance

By Donna Desiata

What's new in weddings for 1985?

The trend in wedding flowers is a return to elegance.

Couples are more sophisticated, the fashions are frillier, flowers are more varied and details are more important than ever.

Never before have brides been so intent on creating a total image.

Fresh Flowers

While traditional all-white bridal bouquets will continue to be popular, more and more brides are asking for color and imported varieties.

This year's most wanted blossoms are roses, gerberas, freesias, white and pink rubrum lillies and alstroemerias.

As for bouquet styles, variations on the traditional loose cascades and colonials seem to be most popular with lots of lace backing, reflecting from Lady Diana's wedding.

More and more brides are opting for wearing crowns of fresh baby's breath rather than veils, or in adjunct to.

Brides should choose flowers which color coordinate their attire or theme and importantly, that are in season. Out of season flowers can usually be imported, but at a higher expense.

Fresh flowers traditionally symbolized fertility at a ceremony, but over the centuries have taken on special meanings, such as these commonly requested wedding flowers:

The white bridal rose signifies unity, red is love, and the yellow rose signifies friendship.

Carnations symbolize distinction, while stephanotis means happiness.

The orchid reveals beauty, and the gardenia is an expression of joy.

The lily signifies pride, and the iris represents wisdom.

Chrysanthemums symbolize friendship, and the daisy proves innocence.

The forget-me-not means true love and as most often requested in five out of six bridal bouquets, and the ivy reflects affection and wedded love.

Wearing of the Flowers

Etiquette says wearing of the flowers is best on the left hand side.

Bridal nosegays and bouquets should follow the lines of the gown or dress, and be held in a spot the bride feels most comfortable, preferably in the left hand.

Corsages should be pinned on the left shoulder, left side of a waisted belt, or worn on the left wrist.

The same rule applies for boutonnieres.

Arm, presentation bouquets, or roses should rest in the natural curve of the arm, all facing the same direction.

Expert Hints for Fresh Flowers

Keep in a cool spot, avoid direct sunlight.

Sprinkle cool water on them to freshen-up at the last minute.

Make sure your florist doesn't design your wedding flowers more than 24 hours ahead, so they are fresh and fragrant.

Check to see who delivers and sets up your wedding flowers - a delivery person or the designers themselves.

Silks

Silk weddings are vastly on the rise. They are a great, sentimental gift idea for the bridal party, relatives and friends that can later be redesigned for a reminiscent keepsake if so desired.

Silk flowers are full of texture and can be scented with any floral fragrance or perfume, either now or later. They look like real flowers and last forever.

They can be color-coordinated to you and your attendants perfectly, whereas fresh flowers may have to be dyed or painted.

Seasonal availability is no problem, making it easier to establish a budget any time of the year.

How about a matching silk "throw bouquet" so the catcher will have lasting memories of your wedding forever?

Let your florist suggest all the possibilities for a beautiful, romantic, fragrant and colorful wedding - fresh or silk.

Wedding Bells Are Ringing

Creating your ceremony special & unique

By Kathleen Kroll

Creating a ceremony as unique and special as your relationship takes only a little time and lots of loving attention.

If writing the ceremony from beginning to end appeals to you, there are books at various libraries with guidelines and sample services for you to follow.

The law requires little except two willing participants and a licensed officiant. So, if a bare-bones ceremony or one guaranteed to make family and friends glaze over is all you require, then there is no need to examine the words and meaning of the text used.

But if you would like a more memorable ceremony, there are ways you can achieve an intimate service whether you are being married by clergy or the local Justice of the Peace.

All you really need is a library card, a book or two of poetry and a couple of favorite love songs.

Sit down with a bottle of wine and an open mind and enjoy yourself. Get to know each other a little better as you discover what you'd really like to impart during the formalizing of your vows. No other union, no other marriage will be quite like yours. Take the time to make your wedding one-of-a-kind.

The era of "flower child" weddings has come and gone, leaving as its legacy a society more receptive to personalized ceremonies.

Some couples still opt for writing the entire text, but for most the added research and tension looms overwhelming. "We wanted to write our own ceremony," said one recent bride, "but it was just too much work and too much energy to put out when there was so much else to do."

As a happy compromise, most couples individualize their ceremonies with poems and readings that have special meaning to them alone. Poets E.E. Cummings, Elizabeth Barrett Browning and T.S. Eliot are often chosen.

"On Love" and "On Marriage" are two popular selections by poet Kahlil Gibran, but any reading in good taste can be used. Passages from the Bible, Shakespeare - even Nietsche - have been quoted extensively.

Songs thoughtfully selected and played during the processional and recessional can effectively set a mood and send a message of new beginnings and joy.

Two songs on the top of the list are "We've Only Just Begun" (The Carpenters), and "The Wedding Song" (Paul Stookey).

Other appropriate choices are: "Amazing Grace," "Sunrise, Sunset," "All You Need Is Love," "Turn Around," "Love Story Theme," and "Turn, Turn, Turn" (Adapted from Ecclesiastes, set to music by Pete Seeger). Even songs like "Bridge Over Troubled Waters" and "Both Sides Now" are poignant when the sentiment reflects the couple's feelings about one another.

Other areas of the traditional ceremony should be scrutinized before you accept the status quo as reflective of your own values. Is the bride really a possession to be "given away" from one man to another? Many who are offended by this sexist symbolism choose to have both parents escort the bride and omit the "handing over" aspect altogether. Or, both bride and groom can be "given away" by their respective parents.

There are many variations on every theme. It takes only a bit of thought and foresight to tailor traditions to your own needs.

"To love, honor and obey," "till death do us part," "as long as we both shall live."

If you find any or all of these phrases objectionable, you are not alone. Authorities cite these as the three most altered or omitted phrases in the traditional ceremony script. Check with your officiant ahead of time to ascertain that the wording of his or her standard ceremony is to your liking. If you prefer "husband and wife" to "man and wife," insist on it. If you'd rather vow, "as long as we both shall love," say so. You are not making trouble, you are making memories!

Little things, like the bride lifting her own veil at the end of the ceremony, signify a more equal union between husband and wife, and personalize the service further.

Even the attire chosen for the occasion can speak volumes. One couple made a dazzling sight on the alter of St. Thecla's Church in Pembroke when both bride and groom wore white. "He's proud that they are both still virgins," said the bride's mother. "Why shouldn't he wear white?"

The bottom line is this: the ceremony should make a statement to yourselves, family and friends about who you are and what your dreams are. It should bind you together with more than words and documents. It should bind you together with thoughtfulness and caring and shared goals. It should be a sharing between you and your guests. It should be yours alone.

Selecting special songs or writing a poem can take some time but it adds a whole new dimension to the vows too often taken for granted.

What better way to build a life together than to write the words that will make that possible.

And only you can do it, with meaning and feeling and love.

Wedding Bells Are Ringing

Religious ceremonies

By Judy Gilman

Every bride dreams of marching down the aisle of a large and imposing church as friends and relatives filling the pews beam on the happy scene.

But what happens if you're not a regular member of a church? Or because of a doctrinal position within your church (such as remarriage within the Roman Catholic Church) those facilities are closed to you? Do you have to make do with a non-religious ceremony?

The Rev. Earl Alger of Hingham believes very strongly that you do not, that there is a definite place for a spiritually based wedding among those who do not have a "regular" church.

And the longtime pastor of the Hingham Congregational Church feels so strongly about this that he is leaving his parish the end of June to start a business that will specialize in designing, marketing and conducting liturgies for couples celebrating "significant moments" in their lives together - not just marriages, but vow renewals, as well.

Please don't consider his company, Lovelight, on a par with the well-known wedding chapels in Las Vegas, because it will be far from that. But Alger sees a desire among couples to add a spiritual tone and feeling to a ceremony that might not otherwise be possible.

In his years at the Hingham Congregational Church, he has had his share of couples who wanted to be married in his church because they admired the architecture, or they heard he performed pleasing ceremonies, or they were being shut out of their own church's sacrament because of doctrinal positions.

While Alger doesn't argue with the last, saying that all organizations and groups have their rules, he does feel it important to start a life together with a spiritual tone. And, at the same time, he is very strongly in favor of vow renewal, celebrating anniversaries with what he calls "holy hilarity" to remind the couple of their commitment to each other. Alger admits he's a romantic at heart and feels strongly that many relationships wither away because the romance and specialness is lost. Vow renewals of the sort he envisions are a way to recapture that specialness and remind the couple why they embarked on their road together in the first place.

Like many other aspects of the activities surrounding the wedding, Alger counsels planning early on what sort of ceremony is wanted and appropriate (unlike many brides' instinctive move to hire the caterer or the reception area first and then have everything else fall into place). And he asks the couple to accept some practical counseling before the ceremony, not as formal as that required by some churches but rather some useful and usable advice to follow once the wedding gown has been packed away and the honeymoon is over.

Though Alger is leaving his parish ministry at the end of June, he believes strongly in ministry, in his beliefs and has chosen married folk as his new ministry. He feels that if couples have a pleasant and accommodating experience in having a religiously-oriented wedding ceremony, they may, at some point in the future, "relate to a local faith community," as he expressed it in a recent sermon to his congregation explaining his decision to leave. For the Harvard Divinity School graduate, this is yet another ministry he sees opening up, another call that needs to be answered. Lovelight can be reached at 749-0322.

Wedding Bells Are Ringing

A link from the present to...

One of the people Mrs. Bacon will be outfitting will be the family's minister, Earl Alger of Hingham Congregational Church. Reverend Alger will not be dressed as a colonial minister, however, because a 17th century marriage came under the jurisdiction of the civil authorities, and the ceremony was conducted by the local magistrate. Reverend Alger has agreed to dress the part, if not play it.

Here is where the Bacon-Antoine wedding will diverge somewhat from pure authenticity. The service, which will be written by Mrs. Bacon and Judy Hardy, will derive from both the actual civil marriage ceremony and prayers taken from the Anglican book of Common Prayer.

"We are going to take some liberties with history because the circumstances are indeed different," says Hardy, "but we will recapture a mood and make it a happy occasion."

Carolyn hastens to add that there will be another significant difference between her wedding and that of her colonial counterpart. A 17th century marriage was often arranged by the couple's parents with little regard for whether the bride and groom were in love. Carolyn and Mike want to assure people that they have chosen each other and they are in love. They will also exchange wedding rings, a ritual not practiced in the Bay Colony.

The festivities will commence at 1:30 p.m. at the Old Ship Church, built in 1681 as a meetinghouse. It is the oldest standing meetinghouse in New England and it is where a marriage ceremony would have taken place were this the 17th century. Just as then, the public is invited to witness this wedding. The bride and groom will arrive by horse and buggy. Carolyn will gather her bouquet as friends hand her sprigs of various herbs while she walks into the church. The bride and groom will walk in together; the bride was not, in those days, "given away" by her father. Herbs, deeply symbolic, were carried instead of cultivated flowers. Lavender, for instance, signified devotion, and rosemary, fidelity.

The inside of the meetinghouse was and will be likewise decorated with herbs and not flowers. Carolyn hopes to arrange for music played on a lute or recorder before and after the ceremony. After the wedding, well-wishers will throw wheat, not rice, as was the custom.

Another myth about early America is that the staid colonials ate only the blandest of foods. In fact, the wedding party has discovered that because the 17th century was the setting for a booming spice trade with India and Asia, colonists ate a variety of exotically spiced food. Jeannie Hirsch, a long-time family friend and, by lucky coincidence, a professional chef, has investigated the eating habits of the first Hingham natives.

"There was a definitely established order of priority given to the different categories of food," explains Hirsch. "Bread and meat were certainly considered the most important, while fish and vegetables had the lowest status. Consequently, Hirsch will prepare a wedding feast that will feature spicy meat pies and a variety of fresh breads, but little in the way of fish and vegetables.

Hirsch is using recipes culled from Shakespearean plays, in addition to others she has found at the Plimoth Plantation library. "Shakespeare actually wrote recipes into his plays, and since then, chefs have translated the bard's measurements into ones understandable to the modern cook."

The settlers were not teetotalers, either. According to Hirsch, their primary beverage was beer, and they even had a weak version for children to drink. (Sorry, kids. This potion will not be available at this wedding.)

A third misconception about colonial life is that they had no fun and frowned upon mirth and frivolity. Again, the committee has found evidence to dispute that notion as well.

"After a wedding, there would be a public reception and everyone would play games like tug-of-war and egg carrying, for instance," says Mary Antoine. There was always plenty of dancing, but it was line dancing and girls would dance with girls and boys with boys. "One never danced with the opposite sex," says Mary.

Mary's research has unearthed other 17th century wedding customs, but her stories soon become more concerned with the wedding night. Maidens, says Mary, would join the newlyweds in the bridal chamber and perhaps play tricks like sewing the bride into the sheets. Or, they might sit on the end of the bed and throw the bride's discarded stocking over their shoulder.

If the stocking landed on the groom's head, it was believed that the maiden would soon marry. If a boy threw the stocking, though, and it landed in the sack-posset, a bridal drink similar to egg-nog, that was the signal that all should leave and let the couple be alone.

There will be a public reception outside Old Ship after Carolyn and Mike are married. Plans are not yet solidified, but according to Judy Hardy, there will most likely be games and music and dancing, with some traditional wedding bread and punch served. A private reception for family and friends will be held later that evening.

"This is really a family affair," says Janice Bacon, summing up the feeling of the group. "We are all doing this together and believe me, it takes some crazy people to get involved in a thing like this. It's really amazing."

Judy Hardy and the 350th Committee are equally anxious and excited. "This is a very happy example of how we can blend the past with the present in a meaningful way because it's not play-acting, but truly a joyous occasion."

Wedding Bells Are Ringing

Fashion & etiquette for 1985

By Jane Tamburri Spitz

From the moment a couple announces their engagement, they are eager to plan the perfect wedding. Concerns about fashion and etiquette affect decisions the bride- and groom-to-be will make in establishing their unique wedding style.

For couples entering into second marriages, these concerns are somewhat different and sometimes more numerous than those surrounding a first-time marriage.

Changing mores have made old etiquette books that list absolute do's and don'ts nearly obsolete. While the feelings of family members and making guests comfortable are always pertinent concerns, the couple must first decide what is important to them.

Planning the ceremony, making a guest list, chosing attendants - which often include children from a previous marriage - and sorting reception details determine the style of the wedding.

When it comes to what the bride will wear, there are many available options. However, the choice belongs to the bride.

"Many encore brides feel uncomfortable wearing white and find ivory or pastels in either floor or mid-calf lengths more tasteful," said Gloria Gilman of Gloria's Bridal Shop in Weymouth.

Generally, second-time brides are staying away from stark white, heavy lace and bead work. They're wearing formal dresses with pillbox, small brim picture hats or simple headdresses like wreaths of flowers, she explained.

Gilman claims that "the fad is whatever looks best on you." She emphasizes that encore brides know what they want by the time they begin shopping.

"Second-time brides tend to be a bit older - anywhere from late twenties or early thirties and up. They have independent minds and therefore wear what they feel most comfortable in," said Betsy Kidder, the advertising director of Priscilla of Boston.

Priscilla, like most manufacturers, offers a line designed especially for second-time brides. The Contemporary Romantic Collection consists of floor, afternoon and tea-length dresses that are simple and enchanting. Lace work, pearl trimming, pleating, and dotted or embroidered net create a distinctive bridal look. Many lacey dresses for the less-than-traditional wedding are accented by colored slips and are particularly suitable for other occasions as well.

"The second-time bride tends to be more practical in her choices. But we've found that once she wears her wedding dress it takes on a different meaning and sentimentality won't allow her to wear it again," said Kidder.

"More people are getting married again. Though older couples usually have smaller, less formal affairs, there is no protocol for a second wedding," according to Kathy Lindquist, owner of Everlasting Dreams Bridal and Groom Shop in Marshfield.

Booking your wedding with your Florist:

Make sure you book your wedding date with your florist far in advance. Many dates are booked months prior to the wedding. Most florists take only so many weddings on any given weekend. A small deposit, usually refundable, will hold that date until you are ready to sit down with your florist and make final arrangements. Final arrangements are usually made a month before your wedding day.

of being a bride, whether it's a first marriage or a subsequent one, is echoed by many wedding consultants.

"Though the majority of second-time brides are afraid of offending their guests, we encourage them to base their decisions on what they want. A lacey, romantic and traditional look is very popular. Even small veils or wreaths are used, but they are skipping the full-train," said Lea Ciardelli of Priscilla's at the South Shore Plaza.

For those couples where only one has been married previously or for whom the first wedding was less traditional, the desire to go all out may prevail. Compromises, such as an intimate ceremony followed by a large, gala reception, allows for lavish yet tasteful planning.

Fashions for the bride and groom have expanded and become more flexible over the past five or six years. Veils that are easily detached after the ceremony, nuances in the treatment of fabrics that provide a tint of color or a less formal taffeta, organza or American silk dress give the growing number of second-time brides the opportunity to be selective.

Black, double-breasted tuxedos accented by a dash of color, a red or pink bow tie and cummerbund, or a less traditional suit with a pastel shirt and complementary colored boutonniere allow the groom to choose clothing that reflects his personal taste.

While one couple perfers traditional formalwear, bridesmaids and a religious ceremony, another may choose a less formal contemporary look for a civil ceremony attended by a few close friends and relatives.

Ultimately, deciding what's right for a wedding, rests with the bride and groom.

The Vin Mitchell Quintet is a professional dance music ensemble. Vin is a graduate of the Master Of Music Program at the New England Conservatory of Music, and undergraduate of Berklee College and University of Mass music schools. As leader of the group he is featured on guitar, mandolin, and vocals. The entire ensemble consists of lead female vocals, keyboard, bass, and drums, and background vocals. Saxaphone, and/or trumpet are also available on request.

All members of the band are music school graduates. Appearance is always neat and in tuxedo dress. (Tuxedos may be omitted for more casual dates.) The band uses a repertoire of some 600 songs, learning new tunes weekly. All musical styles are represented; from the twenties through the eighties. The dance music is precise and very lively. Special requests for any occasion are always accepted. Background music is also available.

The quintet is hoping to extend and fill in many of the dates already on their calendar. We hope you might consider us for your wedding, anniversary, banquet, holiday party, political or any other function and or club date.

Wedding Bells Are Ringing

How to find the dance band you like

Entertainment for your wedding reception is among one of the most important elements necessary. Here is an outline of ideas that may aid you in finding a dance band to make your day successful.

1.) Try to contact at least two or three different bands, so you have some basis for comparison. (Unless, of course, you've already heard the perfect band.) Remember, you want to feel good about the group you've chosen.

2.) Look for a band that can play all styles; from Benny Goodman to Michael Jackson. Most older folks like to rock out to at least one dance a night, and there's always a good, young jitterbug or lindy dancing couple in every disco-rock contest. The band should be able to please all crowds.

3.) If there is going to be a predominance of one ethnic group, Irish, Italian, Polish, Jewish, you will want musicians who can play songs from these nationalities.

4.) When you first contact the band, ask for a songlist to see what they know.

5.) Find a band that will learn your special song. There are usually one or two that may have very special meaning to the bride and the groom.

6.) You will usually have to hear a function band at someone else's party. Most function bands only play lounge or club circuits occasionally. If this is the situation, then follow these suggestions; first, go to the hall in proper attire, i.e. suit and tie for the man, and dress for the woman; second, stand discretely in the rear doorway, since you are an uninvited guest.

7.) Book the band as far in advance as you can make your decision. Steady bands, like a function hall, are often contracted six months to a year before the date.

8.) Expect to put a deposit on the band, and sign a contract with the band leader or agent.

9.) A band should ask you to fill out a "format schedule" for your wedding. This is important, since not all weddings are traditional. The form should list your options for introductions, blessing, toast, dances, cake cutting, garter, bouquet, etc.

10.) Touch base with your band one to two weeks before the function date to make sure they understand what you want to happen on your day, and whether any changes from their format schedule have been made.

11.) Alternative type functions may not feature a dance band. Background jazz or classical music make a wedding very unique.

12.) Expect to travel, perhaps to Boston, or even the distant galaxy known as the North Shore, to hear a band. Most successful function groups are in demand all over the Boston area, and not just in one locale.

13.) If your band is part of a "package deal," ask to listen to them. You have a right to know what you're paying for.

14.) When your date finally arrives, dance, and enjoy your spouse, relatives and friends.

Wedding Flowers hints

Silk flowers bouquets can enhance any wedding. The choice of colors is so much greater in silk flowers & the price is competitive with fresh flowers.

Bouquets become a wonderful sentimental remembrance for the bride and her attendants. After the wedding, the nosegay piece can be placed in a basket and used as an arrangement in any room of the house. Brides sometimes give the bouquets to their attendants with a basket or brass bowl so that the bouquet is a gift to the bridesmaid and helps to reduce costs for the bride's family. Brides and their attendants often choose to make bouquets themselves, to add a very personal touch to a wedding. At Garden Craft of Assinippi, we give expert help with flower style and color choice for a pleasing overall effect.

When choosing colors we suggest that a range of hues be chosen, since if all flowers and ribbons match exactly, the flowers will blend into the dress. For example: for a pale pink dress, it would be much better to use light pink and rose and white flowers, or even add lavender flowers or violets for an old fashioned, romantic look.

We at Garden Craft have often been called the "Idea People". We have created straw bonnets and bouquets for a Great Gastsby look in Newport, and huge bowls for centerpieces for a Christmas wedding so that the tables appeared to be a Christmas packages.

Wedding Bells Are Ringing

Choosing that special gown just for you

By Gloria Gilman

Selecting your wedding gown is one of the most important personal choices you will make in your wedding planning. You don't want to look just pretty on your wedding day, but gorgeous and memorable in the eyes of your groom. Of course you want your attendants to look smashing too, to compliment the lovely picture. But not every style fits every shape, nor are all fabrics appropriate for various seasons.

If you begin your gown shopping with a few hints in mind, you'll be better prepared to buy the gown that will make you happy and your goom ecstatic.

Begin by looking though bridal magazines for fashion ideas on styles and fabrics. Try to narrow down your favorites to suit your figure and height. The fabric of your wedding gown, will depend on the season you have picked for your wedding.

Winter brides can choose from heavy fabrics such as satin or a brocade. Brocade is interwoven with a raised design which is beautiful for a candlelight ceremony. Moire is a silk taffeta which is also enhanced by lights and appears to glisten like water.

Spring and summer are the seasons for airy, open weave fabrics like eyelet, organza — which is sheer, crisp and almost transparent and voile, a soft cotton which could create a country-look or an informal mood. Early spring, late summer, and early fall are flexible months for fabric choices.

Make an appointment at a bridal shop that has a large selection and provides special attention for that very important day in your life. An appointment is usually recommended for individual attention, and we also suggest that a member of your family or a close friend accompany you at this time.

Go prepared by wearing suitable undergarments, including panty hose, strapless bra and comfortable pumps. These accessories, which can be purchased at the bridal shop, will enhance the finished product.

Enter the bridal shop with an open mind. Pictures are very helpful, so bring your favorites and show them to your salesperson. Don't be disappointed if the gown pictured isn't suitable for you. Some styles look better than others. For the petite girl, we suggest a V neck, high waist and a simple skirt. For the more mature figure, an open neck, flowing fabric, A-line, and a high waist looks best. The average to slim bride looks well in most designs.

Budget plays an important role when selecting your wedding gown. Be sure to mention your price range to your Bridal Consultant. If she's experienced, she will show you a large selection you can choose from without going overboard. Remember reembroidered laces such as Alencon, Schifflei Belgium, and Lyon, just to name a few are costly. Cotton based laces such as Chantilly, some Venise and Cluney are more affordable. Fabrics vary in quality but an inexpensive chiffon will still make you the beautiful bride you've always dreamed of being.

Once you have selected your bridal gown, it's time to browse around for your bridesmaid dresses. Take your maid of honor with you to try on different styles. Keep in mind the figures of your bridesmaids and the theme and tone you are trying to express. You do not have to march your bridal gown sleeve for sleeve, neckline for neckline, but keep in mind that an attendant's dress should compliment you and your gown.

Today's bride is favoring taffeta and chiffon for her bridesmaids. These are versatile fabrics which can be styled from Victorian and old-fashioned to sophisticated and elegant. This is not to say that satins, linens, voiles and other fabrics are not popular. Fabrics come in trends like everything else. Heavier fabrics are strictly for the fall/winter bride while crisp, transparent materials are appropriate for spring and summer.

When shopping for bridesmaids gowns, narrow down your choices to your favorites. You can even try on some styles to get the feel of what you'd like your girls to wear. When you've chosen the attendants gown, make sure you give your bridesmaids the opportunity to be open with you about affording the honor of buying and wearing it. If there is a question, a happy guest is better than an unhappy attendant. It can be quite expensive, especially if an attendant is married with a family. Avoid hard feelings by giving them the option. They will be honored that you considered them in the first place.

We've also tried to resolve the problem of fitting pregnant bridesmaids. If a maid is pregnant for the wedding our expert seamstresses work with us to try to determine how many sizes larger to order and also how we are going to alter the gown. Sometimes the gown cannot be altered to fit an eight-month pregnant attendant, and we are completely open and honest.

On the other side of the coin, Sandy has just given birth to a bouncing, baby girl. She's happy as a clam, but may not be back to that 25-inch waist. We foresee this situation so our recommendation would be to order her dress one or two sizes larger than her normal size.

These fashions were modeled by Joy Gilman Buckley.

Finally brides, don't forget your mother. We need as much time to order their gowns as we do for the bridesmaids, so take them shopping. There is so much to choose from today from the very informal but elegant and simple, to a more ornate look with beading. Coordinate the color to your bridal party but remember, select a color that is soft and flattering.

Let's not forget the mother of the groom. Be sure to keep her informed about what you've selected. Her gown should compliment your mother's.

Make an appointment with the bridal shop you have selected to have your in-town attendants fitted. Out-of-town bridesmaids should send their measurements to the bridal shop. Our shop requires bust, waist, and hips measurements and dress size, weight and height. If there is a girl with a similar figure in the party, we request that she try our sample gown on as a guideline to help us determine a more accurate size.

Remember to allow six months for ordering bridal gowns and 16 weeks for attendants dresses. Dressmakers are only human, and occasionally we receive a gown that is the wrong size or color lot. If you leave yourself and your bridal shop plenty of time, mistakes can be corrected.

Wedding Bells Are Ringing

When to wed? Is it a superstition?

God did not make woman from man's head, that she should rule over him; nor from his feet, that she should be his slave; but from his side, that she should be near his heart.

Talmud Proverb

By Jane Lane

Times have changed since Adam and Eve tied the knot. It was simply a case of borrowing a rib or two, and poof . . . instantaneous monogamous cohabitation.

Now brides and grooms have so many details to work out, so many customs to follow and omens to avoid.

More superstitions pertain to marriage than any of life's occasions. When to wed, what time, what day, what to wear and whether to marry, have all been chronicled in some form of tradition, custom or superstition.

We have all heard the rhyme in which the months of the year are described as favorable or disastrous for the pending nuptial. If married in January, "you'll be widowed before your prime ", in February, "life you'll tread in time together," and in March, "your home will lie on distant shore."

In fact, April remains the most popular month for weddings. Historians have it documented, noting that because Lent is a prohibited time, combined with the "unlucky" characteristics of a May wedding, April arrives at the most opportune time. If wed in June, "life will be one long honeymoon." Naturally, that month also fares quite well. December and January are next in line, coming right before the Lenten season.

Choosing the correct wedding date might also depend on where you are residing at the time. In Scotland, May 3 is especially unlucky, although doing anything on January 1 is positively free from disaster. In Ireland, the last day of the old year is blissfully lucky. And from a 1678 almanac,the following warnings were issued about pending proposals: "Marriage comes in on the 13th day of January , and at Septuagesima Sunday it is out again until Low Sunday, at which time it comes in again, and goes not out until Rogation Sunday; from whence it is unforbidden till Advent Sunday,but then it goes out,and comes not in again till the 13th January next following." Unfortunately, remaining married is not much simpler.

The following superstitions have been around about as long as the institution of marriage. It is most lucky for the bride to be married on her groom's birthday; a bridegroom's luckiest day is the day of the week on which he was born. Now, if you can hit both of these, apparently the possibility of divorce, bankruptcy, murder or famine is not in the cards.

A woman should not marry on the day of the week of her birth; to see a flight of birds as you go to church on your wedding day foretells many children; to meet a funeral is fair warning of a quick separation; if the sun emerges suddenly from behind a cloud and shines on the altar as the wedding is taking place, it is an omen for prosperity; "Happy the wooing that is not long a-doing"; bad news for the bride if she does not weep profusely on her wedding day; and on the other hand, great joy outlined on the face of the bride bodes great misfortune for the future; a groom should not view his bride on the day of the wedding before they meet at church; and she should never try on her wedding attire for him to view, or the marriage is doomed.

And one additional word of advice for all perspective brides, it's unlucky to have those towels or sheets embroidered with initials until the ring is on the finger.

As for the actual wedding day, it is unlucky for the bride to break anything on the morning of her wedding, a sure signal of unharmonious relations with the in-laws; if there is a cat in the house, the bride must feed it herself to ensure a day free from rain; and twins must never be married in the same church.

Blue and white only may be worn at the altar, one signifying truth and the other, purity. It is unlucky to have a wedding dress altered in any manner.

Each country and religion has its own particular traditions and customs surrounding marriage. Though many now seem outdated, such as the ominous omen for a woman to pass a pig on the way to her wedding, the institution will likely continue despite them. And more modern customs and superstitions will flourish as well..

Wedding Bells Are Ringing

Give attention to the music at the ceremony

Most couples planning a wedding put a great deal of thought into deciding what music will be featured at their wedding reception, but often give little consideration to the music heard at the ceremony.

The old standards — the familiar wedding marches by Mendelssohn, Wagner and Purcell — are usually taken for granted and played as a matter of unquestioned routine.

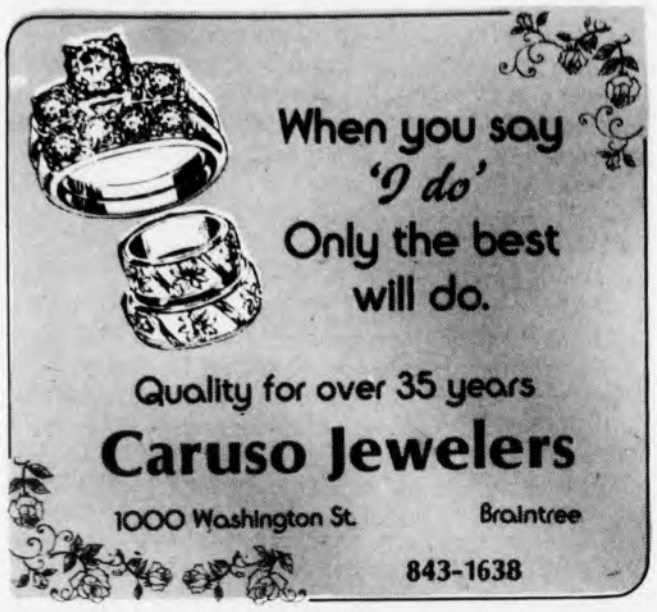
But Hingham's Judy Hardy is determined to inspire a rebellion against those "tired old pieces which should be put out to pasture." An experienced music arranger and now a wedding music consultant, Hardy wants couples to know that their choice of wedding music need be limited not by tradition, but only by desire, imagination and, of course, money.

"Since no bride would be caught wearing the same wedding dress as every other bride, why don't they mind having the same wedding music as everyone else?" asks Hardy with amazement. "A wedding is a very personal statement which doesn't begin with the reception; the wedding music can and should be just as tailored and personalized as the rest of the occasion."

"When couples and their families have put so much time and thought and resources into preparing a wedding, it's a shame if the memories don't include the music heard during the actual wedding." Hardy believes that the old wedding tunes have become almost generic and thus leave no impression on the families or the guests when heard yet again. "You wouldn't like to think that your guests won't be able to describe the ceremony after it's over, would you?"

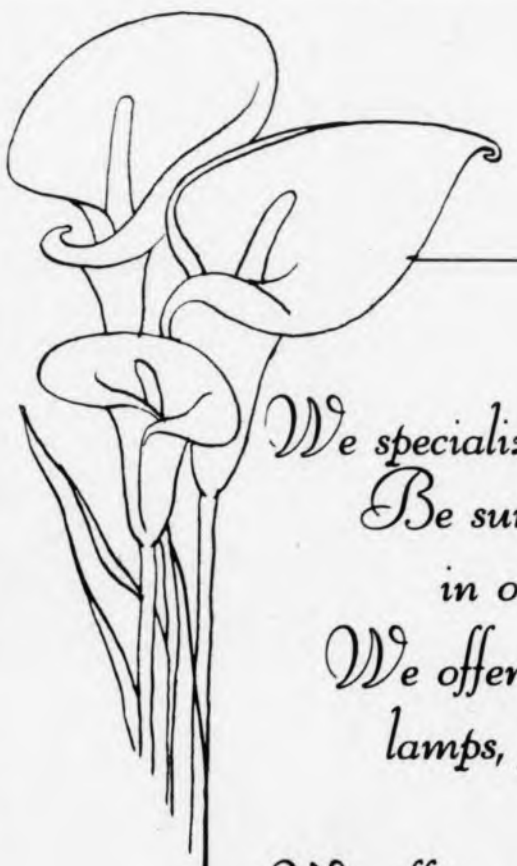
Hardy argues that appropriate songs and orchestration for the ceremony can be chosen to complement the wedding dress, the wedding colors, the couple's personality and the wedding's size, formality and time of day.

"These are all ingredients that need to be taken into consideration when planning wedding music. A small, quiet wedding, for instance, might be accompanied by a harp and flute or a string quartet rather than brassier instrumentation." Hardy says that she tends to avoid including the ubiquitous organ in her wedding arrangements unless the couple is particularly fond of the instrument. She generally finds the organ adds nothing interesting to the music. But she warns, too, that the more complicated the orchestration, the higher the cost for musicians and rehearsals.



Hardy meets with her clients in the casual atmosphere of her kitchen. She asks them about their wedding plans and their favorite composers. Together they listen to several tapes to get an idea of the type of orchestration they most enjoy and that best suits the wedding. "I can get a good idea of what they want by just watching them," says Hardy. "When their eyes light up, I know we're on to something and we go from there." She points out that in the not-too-distant past, it was the bride and her mother who would come over, but nowadays it is the bride and groom who share in making the decisions about their wedding.

"The sky's the limit," Hardy informs the betrotheds, but she stresses one unequivocal exception. She will not get involved in arranging pop music for a wedding. "I tell them that for the 20 minutes or an hour that they are getting married, the atmosphere should be totally detached from their regular world. The service is and the music should be."



But Hardy does not completely dismiss the possibility of using the old favorites either. Richard Wagner's "Lohemgrin," more commonly known as "Here Comes the Bride", is quite wonderful, says Hardy, when performed by a woman's choir singing its original German lyrics. And she says that properly arranged, Mendelssohn's "Recessional", acutally a piece from his "Midsummer's Night Dream" symphony, can achieve what she calls "dramatic superiority."

In addition to her consulting business, Judy Hardy's list of musical credits is extensive. Currently, she is chairman of the Hingham Arts Council, director of Arts and Culture for Hingham's cable TV and a teacher and music arranger at the South Shore Conservatory. Hardy has arranged theatrical and ballet scores and is the author of several music anthologies.

Wedding Bells Are Ringing

Invitations reflect the bride and groom

It officially sets the tone for the event. It is chosen, sent, received.

The almighty invitations. There are hours behind the choices and the options and varieties. The type, paper, ink can be confounding to those who believe they must follow a pat format.

That is probably one of the positive aspects of weddings today. There is great latitude for men and women to incorporate both tradition and originality in their weddings, starting with the invitation and finishing it off with the honeymoon spot.

Most of all, says Nancy Wilson, manager of the Mariner Print Shop, the invitations ought to reflect the bride and bridegroom while providing necessary information to the recipient.

Favorites for brides and bridegrooms in invitations are traditional in majority, the ivory paper with black ink in the delicate Venetian type.

But not for a moment should one believe that's all that's happening in invitations.Some couples write their own script, simply inserting different prose with the necessary and polite information. For one thing, said Wilson, people need to know what kind of a wedding and reception it will be, what dress will be appropriate.

It used to be that invitations went out two to three weeks before the event. Not now. More and more couples plan catered buffet or sit down dinners for dozens of people at the reception. People providing those services need a count well in advance so invitations are often mailed five to six weeks before the wedding.

It is also commonplace for respond cards to be included. That insures the RSVP that's needed. It's also an added expense. But low profile weddings are not for the usual bride and bridegroom. They often choose uptown accouterments, from invitations to flower arrangements.

The most common reminder Nancy Wilson and Joyce Hallisey (her co-worker) give customers is that they do not need to have an equal number of invitations and envelopes, because many invitees are married.

When they like a different color ink, brown and blue surface as favorites. The invitations are available in styles as contemporary as the couple choosing them, in bold types and modern design, choices, simply choices.

And the more options, as one would know, the more the cost. But, say, the couple wants 50 invitations and includes the personalized napkins and matches for table settings at the reception, an expected price of $150, she says, ought to do it.

These days, 125 guests at a wedding seem to be the choice. In the five years she's been with the print shop, she has done about three invitations that promise a church hall wedding reception. Most are held in clubs or restaurants, with full meals, bands and bars.

"People are more relaxed now, more comfortable, in choosing invitations," says Nancy Wilson. "Those who are intimidated assume there's a set format." There are guidelines but not dictums.

Most of all, the couple choosing is in charge of their choices. Neither tradition nor society should make those for them in personal taste and style. There is opportunity for individuality in invitations. And it can be naturally incorporated with the important etiquette intact.

In fact, there is nary a situation, no matter how trying, that is not possible to announce in a manner inoffensive.

Marriages can be announced after the fact. Celebration dates can be created at a time suitable to those for whom they are held.

And the choices are nearly infinite. In most cases they're fun, as flamboyant as one chooses to be or as formal or as fancy.

At the least, the invitation is the kick-off to a splendid event, the beginning of one of life's most important events.

Invitations

It is vitally important to allow enough time for the ordering, addressing and mailing of your invitations.

Ten weeks before your wedding you should order the invitations. They usually take four weeks to be processed. Give yourself two weeks for addressing, and mail them four weeks prior to the wedding.

Your invitations say a great deal about your wedding. Give yourself the necessary time to order exactly what you need.

Town Affairs Night sparks little interest

By Jane Lane

Town Affairs Night attracted a sparse gathering of interested citizens, and an even smaller crowd of candidates.

Sponsored by the Cohasset League of Women Voters, this annual event gives candidates for elected office their only opportunity to formally address the public in a question and answer forum. But just as attracting candidates for public office is becoming increasingly difficult, ensuring attendance at this function is as frustrating. Many of the candidates did not attend the League presentation because of job commitments or health reasons.

The candidates for elected office who did participate, were gracious, courteous and polite. No major discussions or disagreements aroused the audience Tuesday night at Town Hall.

Perhaps the only controversial subject to be broached that night was the continuing debate between the planning board and the Chamber of Commerce on the proposed zoning bylaw changes.

Former Chamber President Dan Leahy again lashed out at the proposed changes and urged residents not to approve the warrant articles until a more comprehensive study has been completed. Although he had been slated to discuss the Chamber's articles dealing with parking regulations, Leahy said the planning board articles were a more "explosive issue."

The primary issue, he said, is growth and our desire to maintain the beauty of the town. Growth, Leahy added, is the planned, controlled occurence which reflects the future needs of Cohasset with predictability. These bylaw proposals developed by the planning board reflect a dramatic change without the full awareness of its implications, according to the Chamber spokesman.

Haulers angered over increase

"You're going to see septage floating in the street."

That's how septage hauler Ross Rosano depicts the result of rate hikes imposed by the Town of Hull to treat Cohasset's septage.

What is now costing the haulers, including the Town of Cohasset, $22.50 will increase to $100 beginning April 15. The $100 fee will be charged a hauler depositing 2000 gallons of Cohasset septage. In other words, a resident who has his septic tank emptied at an average cost of $72, will now be charged about $150, according to local haulers.

For the Town of Cohasset, which disposes of an average four loads of 2000 gallons per week, it means a hike from $100 to $600 weekly.

"Ridiculous," is how hauler Don Livingston describes the sudden increase. The bottom line, he said, is that residents will not be able to have their septic tanks pumped and the result will be overflow and more problems for some previously-troublesome tanks.

The owner of The Rooter Man continued, "I think you're going to see septage floating in the street. We'll have to charge our customers $150 for cleaning the system, and that leaves us only $50 for transporting it to Hull. I think people are going to say forget it, and not bother to pump their systems. Then we're going to have a public health problem in this town."

Rosano added that despite the cries of protest sounded from customers and the haulers, Hull is holding the trump card. As the only area treatment facility, they can increase rates virtually at their pleasure. In fact, both Rosano and Livingston have sent letters to their customers, explaining that the impending rate increase is being forced upon them.

Cohasset sewer plant supervisor Manuel Salvador is fuming, but acknowledged that Hull can dictate any charge and "Cohasset is at their mercy."

No reason has been given to the Cohasset supervisor, despite attempts by Salvador to undercover them. A longtime advocate of the construction of a Cohasset sewer treatment plant, Salvador said Cohasset wouldn't be at a disadvantage had the plant been built here.

"I want to know why they are increasing the rates," he said Wednesday morning. "I've tried to talk to people over there and I haven't got any answers. I want to know where they're treating this septage, and why an increase is needed.

"We're at the mercy of Hull," he continued. "They can do anything they want to us and we have to pay it."

Ed Kendrick, Hull treatment facility supervisor said the sewer commission there recently completed a study of the disposal fees. Their conclusions, he said Wednesday, was that the residents of Hull were virtually subsidizing the treatment facility for the past three years without equal monetary participation from other towns, including Cohasset.

Kendrick insisted that Hull treats the septage in that facility, and it is filtered in that treatment plant. He said the sludge is then disposed in the Hull landfill.

Hizoner will be here, but Fido won't follow

The Cohasset Road Race might attract celebrities, such as Boston Mayor Raymond Flynn and Police Commissioner Mickey Roache, but they better not bring their pooch.

The race, which starts at 1 p.m. Sunday, is a favorite of local and not-so-local runners. It's has also traditionally been a preferred hangout for the canine crew.

Peter Logan, one of the Cohasset Rotarians responsible for organizing this event, is issuing a special plea to keep Fido in the house for the day. Nothing is more of a nuisance, or a danger for runners than free-roaming dogs. They tend to get tangled in the runner's feet, or they nip at the legs.

Dog Control Officer Richard Yokum will be at the scene and has been advised to put all interfering dogs into protective custody.

Although they won't be bringing along an official honorary dog, Mayor Flynn and his police commissioner have registered for the run. The official word from City Hall is that everything is go, although his honor may be tired from his trip this week to Washington D.C. (he traveled by train, he did not run down there).

The Boston Mayor is a marathon runner, having competed in many races including Boston and New York. This 10-K will be more like a morning sprint for the South Boston native.

Another sports celebrity, Will Cloney of the BAA, will be the official starter.

The race begins at 1 p.m. at Cohasset Common. It will wind down Elm Street, past the police and fire station, to Atlantic Avenue. From Atlantic Avenue it will travel to Jerusalem Road, down to Forest Avenue and along the length of that street. The race will conclude on North Main Street, up to Town Hall.

The Cohasset Rotary expects 750 runners will have registered by the start of the race. That is slightly higher than last year's record total.

The word Sunday is to have fun, come and watch if you don't run. But leave the pooch in the house.

Cohasset's week . . .

Hingham sewer support

The Hingham Sewer Commission has notified the federal government of its support of Cohasset's fight to fund an innovative wastewater treatment plan.

The commission's letter, which was received earlier month, was relayed to the federal Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), which is considering Cohasset's appeal for funding. The state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) has refused to fund the major portion of the Cohasset alternative waste water plan. The town is currently fighting that refusal by appealing to the federal agency.

According to the Hingham Commission, that town is "currently engaged in evaluating innovative alternatives to large diameter gravity sewers for a portio of the town in which conditions are such that alternatives may be extremely suitable.

". . . we think that at least the same kind of financial support which appears to be readily available for conventional sewers ought to be equally available for alternatives that are less costly and less disturbing to the environment."

Property tax bills/dog licenses

Town Clerk Frances Marks advises residents that property tax bills have been mailed this week. Along with the tax bill is the annual dog license form which should also be returned by the first of April.

In order to grant the dog license, the resident must present a veternarian's certification that the dog has been vaccinated against rabies. Licenses cost $3 for a male dog, $3 for a spayed female, and $6 for an unspayed female.

The state law exempts the following animals from vaccination verification: any dog under six months of age, and any dog the local Board of Health deems exempt because of an infirmity or other physical condition in which innoculation is inadvisable.

New Cohasset Eagle Scout

Troop 28 Scoutmaster Merle Brown notified selectmen last week that John Pape of Troop 28 will be awarded the rank of Eagle Scout.

A ceremony in which the award will be made, will be held April 27 at 7 p.m. in the First Parish Church. Selectmen were invited to the ceremony.

Answers to commuter questions

Monday night, Senator Bill Golden met with selectmen to announce his plans to have office hours for discussion of any questions relative to resurrecting the South Shore commuter rail service and the ballot questions.

Monthly office hours would coincide with the selectmen's meetings in Town Hall, upstairs, third floor, room 416B, or phone 722-1646. Residents are encouraged to discuss the issue with Sen. Golden.

Golden says he plans to bring in state officials for an informative discussion of the details of transportation prior to the elections. He noted that on April 18, he will be in Washington, D.C., lobbying for more comprehensive funding toward the project.

Also, Sen. Golden wished to bring attention to his visit to the Norfolk Agricultural School. He said, "I was very impressed that residents of Cohasset can attend free of charge and I wish to make these opportunities known to students. He added that students can actually work in areas associated with studies such as landscape, agriculture, floral, etc.

New assessor

Thomas S. Duggan was appointed by selectmen to fill the vacancy to Board of Assessors. Duggan replaces Brian Wilkin who recently resigned.

Dan Leahy, president of the Chamber of Commerce, opposed any decision on the planned revision of the zoning by-laws. Leahy feels that more time is needed to go over the laws to understand how they interact with other laws, and to make any necessary changes. He says that he sees them going from simple to muddled. More time is needed, he said, to work with them, especially since they have not been updated since prior to 1955.

Leash Law Enforced

After repeated complaints by angry neighbors, selectmen ordered John Brown, of Beechwood St., to keep his two doberman pincher dogs permanently restrained to his father's property.

Even though residents have been complaining since July, 1984, John Brown has made no attempts to comply with the local leash laws. Officer Richard Yocum stated he had responded three times to complaints in July, August, and October. He said a restraining order was placed on the dogs in September, which was ignored.

A neighbor, Bill Foley, added "one of them had bitten a child and it's about time that the issue was resolved and resolution received."

Brown tried to justify his failure to comply with regulations by saying that he sees other dogs running loose in the neighborhood.

Selectmen then informed him of his right to complain against anyone else that refuses to comply with local regulations, stating that dog owners must restrain their pets at all times.

A decision was made that the dogs would have to be removed from town if allowed to run loose again.

Vo-Tech school budget approved

Selectmen approved the 1985-86 South Shore Regional Vocational Technical budget assessment to Cohasset of $16,636. David Chittim, who has been on the school board for nine months, said much of the equipment is outdated and roof repairs are desperately needed. He says the budget in many ways, represents a bare bones operation. But with the backed proposal, special state aid, grants and a five-year plan, a gradual update of repairs and equipment can be accomplished.

Tradition cancelled

The rising cost of postal service has forced the cancellation of a long-time tradition by Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R-Cohasset).

"Over the years it's been a pleasure to send 'You're In The News' clippings to the people in my district," Rep. Murray said.

"Whenever someone has been prominently mentioned in the weekly or daily newspapers, I've tried to make note of that achievement by sending the person a personal clipping.

"But the recently increased cost of stamps, plus the increasing cost of printing, has forced me to end this tradition," she said.

"Additionally, with the increasingly heavy workload here in the House, there is less and less time to devote to what I always considered a most pleasant task," she explained.

Rep. Murray's "You're In The News" cards will still be sent on major occasions, she said. But, she estimated, there would be a ninety to ninety-five percent reduction in mailings.

"It's a tradition I've enjoyed," she said. "And judging from the many, many notes and letters in response, I would say the people of the Third Plymouth enjoyed them too."

Real estate bills mailed

The second half fiscal 1985 real estate bills will be mailed during the week of March 25th. This payment is due in the collector's office on or before May 1, 1985. For any late payments interest is computed at 14 percent from April 1.

If, for any reason, you fail to receive a tax bill duplicate copies are available at the collector's office, 41 Highland Avenue, or call 383-0611. The Town Hall hours are: Monday through Thursday, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.; Thursday evening, 5:30 to 8 p.m.; Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Past policy on bringing delinquent tax accounts to tax title has changed. Proceedings on unpaid 1983 and 1984 real estate taxes through the services of a municipal collection agency will begin by the end of March.

NEW 1985 EXCISE TAX LAWS

Chapter 33 of the Acts of 1984 has changed the Excise Tax laws as follows:

1. The excise tax imposed shall in no event be LESS than $5 and must be paid or abated within 30 days to avoid demand and interest penalties.
2. No abatement shall reduce any excise tax to LESS than $5, and no amount so abated shall be refunded if LESS than $5 (as it is understandable that it costs far more than $5 to process a refund.)
3. You are entitled to an abatement if you have sold or traded-in a vehicle. Call the Assessors' Office at 383-1640 for application forms.

Funeral for Seanna O'Leary

"Life's the greatest gift of all"

Sobs filled the church Tuesday morning, as hundreds of mourners bid farewell to a young friend. Funeral services for Seanna O'Leary were held in St. Anthony's Church, the second funeral Mass in two weeks for the victims of a March 12 car crash.

The thirteen year-old eighth grade student died in Children's Hospital in Boston Friday night, after clinging to life for 10 days.

The scene outside the Sparrell Funeral Home Monday afternoon and evening recalled the lines of mourners who had just recently attended the wake of Seanna's friend, Desiree Yess.

The Tuesday morning funeral took place on a day similar to the Saturday morning on which Desiree was buried. The sun shone clearly through bright, cloudless skies. Gusty winds whipped the coats and hats of people as they walked briskly into the church.

Upon their exit from the Mass, the cool breeze brought comfort to many faces flushed and streaked with tears.

Minutes earlier, at the request of Seanna's parents, her favorite song was played through the church's public address system. As the white-draped coffin was escorted down the long aisle, Seanna's song was amplified. Although it was released only days before the accident, it became Seanna's favorite, and was indicative of her brief life, according to Rev. Father John J. Keohane.

There comes a time when we heed a certain call
When the world must come together as one
There are people dying and it's time we understand
That life's the greatest gift of all
We can't go on pretending day by day
That someone will soon make a change
We are all part of God's great big family
And the truth, you know love is all we need
We are the world. We are the children.
We are the ones to make a brighter day so let's start giving
It's a choice we're making
We're saving our own lives
It's true we make a better day just you and me.

As the song filled the church, Seanna's family, friends, neighbors and classmates collapsed into heavy cries. What was previously a single tear slipping down a cheek, was now a burst of sorrow and despair.

Young girls, with heads lowered, embraced each other in solemn comfort. Parents held onto a shoulder of their son or daughter, a reminder that someone will be there.

In his sermon to the hundreds who had assembled in the church, Rev. Keohane talked about the faith that is needed to search one's way through this sorrowful time. To Seanna's parents, Paul and Nancy, he noted "to lose child, nothing is more sorrowful, a sorrow that also pierced the mother of Jesus Christ." He prayed for understanding, although it will never take away the sadness of losing Seanna.

Our joy, he reminded us, is the knowledge that she is "with love itself, in the presence of God who loves her."

The Reverend added, "but sadness isn't cancelled out. There is joy in life. With the sadness of this great loss, Paul and Nancy, there is comfort knowing that your lovely daughter is in the presence of the Lord."

Rev. Keohane also noted that everyone, including those who could not attend the Tuesday services, must continue to display compassion to those in need, specifically the O'Leary, Yess, Stone and Shepperd families.

He then explained that Seanna's mother had specifically requested a song to conclude her daughter's funeral celebration. Rev. Keohane mentioned how the entertainers who participated in the song helped to raise money for starving people in Ethiopia and throughout the world." That is symbolic, he added, of the attitude of many young people in Cohasset today. Saying "they don't seem to be the same as when I was young. Young people today, their hearts go out to those in need. That is what the song says, 'Send them your heart, so they know that someone cares.' "

He then concluded the homily. "Today, we say a prayerful farewell, that God will send comforting grace. We are all brokenhearted and we all call on him."

Seanna's burial was private.

Donations in her memory may be made to the Children's Hospital Medical Center, Intensive Care Unit, Division 86, 300 Longwood Ave., Boston, Mass. 02115.

DIANE SULLIVAN
FOR SELECTMAN
TWO YEAR TERM

Dear Fellow Resident:

I have found much personal satisfaction in serving our Town and I will continue to serve. But my reason for writing this letter is that I am seeking election to the Cohasset Board of Selectmen in the April 13 Town elections, and I need your support.

You have expressed your concerns to me about Town government operations. Accordingly, you have asked me what I can offer to the Town, as your Selectman. I have not been idle since 1983 when I first asked for your support. Through my membership on the Citizens' Sewer Advisory Board and the Drainage Advisory Committee, we have frequently worked in an advisory capacity with the Planning Board, Sewer Commissioners, Board of Selectmen, Board of Health, and the Conservation Commission.

As Supervisor of Finance for a national corporation which was privately owned, I was involved in almost every aspect of the business. Together with my staff, I was responsible for the preparation of legal documents necessary to finance the company's endeavors both commercially and privately. I was custodian of all legal documents. I had last minute approval of all checks leaving the firm. I had to computerize much of the massive records. I provided the information to set up the receivables from all franchisees and payables as necessary. I served as a "right hand" to the Chairman of the Board. I dealt with attorneys and business people all over the country. My work was confidential. It was necessary that I use good judgment, tact, and diplomacy. I also had a managerial position with another international corporation employing 28,000 and together with my staff was responsible for pensions and insured benefits for all employees. I have experience in all aspects of the hiring-employment process.

I feel I already offer voters a demonstrated interest in our Town government. In addition to serving in an advisory capacity to various boards and committees, I have made a point of being an informed citizen, through my attendance at the meetings and hearings of the many government units which regularly meet on our behalf.

I offer voters my ability to quickly summarize an issue and to provide clear and decisive leadership. As a Selectman, I will follow the will of the people as demonstrated by their Town meeting vote.

I feel it is the duty of every citizen to serve his or her community; I feel I can most effectively serve the Town in the operation and administration of its government.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,
Diane Sullivan

From an editorial in the Cohasset Mariner dated January 5, 1984 entitled "Movers and Shakers:"

". . . In some circles they are called the "movers and the shakers" or the people who can move mountains.

So we have compiled a list of interesting people to watch for in 1984.

They are: . . .Diane Sullivan . . . "

From an editorial in the Cohasset Mariner dated April 6, 1983:

". . . The race for Selectman between Diane Sullivan and John DeBassio has been somewhat inspiring. What's a pity is that one of these two candidates has to lose this week. In our view this contest has produced two "winners," and we hope that the winner who shall receive the lesser number of votes will consider another candidacy in the future. We praise them for running a campaign based on issues rather than personalities."

"No job was too difficult for her to handle, and she took pride in the results. I recommend her highly for any endeavor which she may undertake to pursue. I cannot praise her enough."

English department argues against cuts

It's a never-ending story of priorities. When there's not enough money, something is saved in lieu of a non-necessity.

Monday night, the school committee, which for the past few months has been wrestling over budget numbers and school needs, heard an impassioned plea from an affected English department.

In all liklihood, there will be a reduction in the junior-senior high school reading lab next year and the elimination of a staff member. Amidst the harsh realities of budgetary constraints were heard voices that pleaded for educational progress, against continuation of the status quo.

There is little the school committee can do at this point. The budget of $4,248,275 has been voted by the committee, and recommended by the town's advisory committee. And even that number does not include negotiated contract settlements, which will likely take a special Town Meeting to approve.

Supt. Eugene Crowell is standing in the middle, sympathetic to the plight of his staff, yet understanding of the fiscal restraints which harness the elected school administrators.

With this proposed 1985-1986 budget, there will be no expansion of the gifted and talented student program as was previously proposed. There will be no elementary adjustment counselor. There will likely be four to five staff positions eliminated at the junior-senior high school, because of the declining enrollment and limited budget, Crowell explained Monday night.

"The budget of progress I presented months ago to the school committee is out. We are now trying to maintain what we have in the schools," he added.

English Department Chairman Bill Kite acknowledged that their presentation to the committee this week was a subjective response to the staff reduction proposal. He questioned how such a wealthy community which values solid education, could passively condone the educational decline of "the only REAL estate we have, the students of Cohasset.

"Is education a priority in this town?" he asked. "If the elected officials in this town can't make it a priority, are the citizens willing to make it a priority?"

Another department teacher said he has witnessed a gradual "lack of caring about everything" in Cohasset. It isn't the fault of the school committee, he noted, which battles each year for an allotment of town funds. Rather, the responsibility rests upon the advisory committee and the assessors, and ultimately the parents of all Cohasset students.

"Cohasset High School is doing well in the media. But on the inside we are held together by the humanity of the staff, the students and their parents," he added. Explaining how English teachers deal with the students on a personal, individual level, where they communicate their deepest feelings in classroom writing, he emphasized the need for this individualism to continue.

School Committee Chairman Joseph Nedrow explained that the committee is sympathetic to that argument. But the one inflexibity is that there is limited money available, and the advisory committee must attempt to divide those funds in various directions.

Arguments are also heard, he noted, that the Cohasset schools don't deserve any type of budget increase because of declining enrollment.

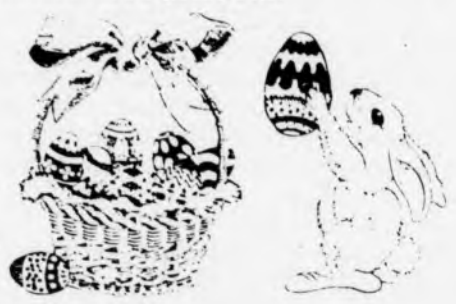
He requested that the staff members volunteer to sit with the committee to devise an annual school budget policy. "What is the town willing to pay for education- a commit ment. How many dollars do they want to spend?" Nedrow asked.

Several high school English teachers complained about the proposed reduction of the reading lab. They cited statistics in which reading levels of some students are below average, yet they are currently unable to be scheduled into a remedial reading class. With further reduction, more students who could benefit by the lab will not have the opportunity.

PSO President Robin Surhbier testified that her son's reading improved dramatically after he spent time in the reading lab classes.

Because of the reading lab staff reduction, other English instructors must use the lab for reading purposes. But several of the teachers, including Ron Emmons, agreed that increased workload for the teachers will mean more reading, but probably less writing. "Catch 2 1/2 " is how he phrased the process.

School committee members, including Richard Conley, urged the teachers, who so eloquently talked of their concerns, to voice this argument in a public forum. "People have to be motivated," he explained. "The town doesn't listen to us anymore. They think we're crying wolf. But we're not. Maybe they'll listen to you."



School budget voted

The school committee voted this week to approve the proposed $4,248,275 budget for next year. That represents a four and one-half percent increase over last year's approved total.

The advisory committee voted last week to recommend that budget.

Although member Richard Conley was reluctant to vote the total, because teacher negotiations are incomplete and program cuts for next year have not been specified, he agreed to go along with the majority of the board.

Member Martha Gjesteby, for the second consecutive year, disapproved of the budget total and refused to endorse it. Saying she had no argument with any of the proposals within the budget, Gjesteby said she was not pleased with the manner in which the budget had been presented, and had several unanswered questions.

New tackle shop

Mark Trask is the new owner of Trask Tackle Shop, located on Route 3A at the Cohasset/Scituate border.

A new store, featuring numerous brands of fishing equipment and accessories, opened last week in Cohasset.

Trask Tackle Shop is located at 827 Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A), next to Highway Motors on the Scituate/Cohasset line. Owned by Mark Trask of Cohasset, the shop will provide a wide assortment of live bait, fishing gear and accessories.

Trask decided to open a tackle store in the area because of the need expressed by local fishermen. "There's no bait and tackle shop in this area," he said this week,"and being a longtime fisherman, I knew there was a great demand here."

Currently, the shop is opened Wednesday through Sundays. Weekend hours will be expanded as the warmer fishing weather approaches, he said. Store hours now are 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday; 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. Friday and Saturday, and Sunday from noon to 5 p.m.

Trask said he intends to cater to the needs of the local fishermen. He plans to run daily specials on items in demand during particular seasons. During the summer, there will be an increase in the variety of salt water fishing gear. As cod and flounder move into our shore, additional equipment to suit those needs will be stocked.

The store currently features many brands of fresh and salt water fishing equipment. Rods and reels manufactured by Daiwa, Zebco, Penn, Silstar, Cunnan, Shimano, Shakespeare, and Berkeley can be found at Trask Tackle Shop.

Lures by Acme, Arbogast, Atom, Roosertail, Cotton Cordell, Rapala, Kastmaster, Mooselookm Daredevil, Johnson, Rebel, Lakemore, Manns and Heedon are also stocked at the Route 3A store.

As the needs of local fishing enthusiasts increase, so will the inventory, according to owner Trask. Shop hours will also be increased as the fishing season approaches.

The shop is also attended by Trask's father Harry and his brother Peter.

The English Connection

Saturday, April 13, at 2 p.m., the South Shore Genealogical Society and the Plymouth County Genealogists will hold a special joint meeting at the First Trinitarian Congregational Church on Country Way in Scituate center.

H. Morse Payne will present an illustrated lecture on the newly-discovered relationships between the Lothrop, Litchfield, Payne and Allen families of Kent County and London, England.

These four families were among the early settlers in Scituate, Barnstable and Yarmouth. The Litchfield family is one of the largest in Scituate, and Mr. Payne's discoveries include new clues to the English ancestry of the Litchfields.

H. Morse Payne lives in Lincoln and is an architect with the Architects Collaborate in Cambridge. He is past president of the Middlesex Chapter of the Massachusetts Society of Genealogists and on the Board of Directors of the Lincoln Historial Society. He has been doing Payne (Paine) family research in England and Europe and is preparing a genealogy on that family for publication.

The meeting is open to the public and is limited to 150 persons. A donation of $2· ill be collected at the door, and refreshments will be served after the lecture.

Commuter forum

On Wednesday evening, April 17, at 7:30 p.m. a South Shore transportation forum on the restoration of commuter rail service on the Greenbush Line will take place at Barnes Auditorium in Hingham.

State Sen. William Golden has asked South Shore towns to place three referendum questions on their town's election ballots. The purpose of this forum is to enable individual voters to make an informed decision on these questions.

The forum will supply the opportunity where state and local officials provide information, including background data on the status of plans to restore the Greenbush Line. Interested individuals and organizations can publicly present their views on this important issue. In addition the panel of state and local experts will provide answers to commuter rail questions.

Golden's three questions to be placed on local ballots ask if the voter supports the return of commuter, would they use the service, and would they be willing to appropriate funds, if necessary.

Golden emphasizes that there is no single solution to our transportation problems on the South Shore, but commuter rail must be examined closely if we are ever to expect efficient, user friendly service on the South Shore. Sen. Golden stated that the return of commuter rail will have a significant impact on the quality of life in our community. It is important that the general public be involved in formulating this public policy issue.

Local fire department supports the March of Dimes

The donations will go to help combat our nation's number one child health problem, birth defects.

Misquote chief

Police Chief Joseph Kealey was quoted in a Mariner article last week as saying, "although some studies have indicated that darkening an area actually may prevent crime, I believe in more lighting. I think that is a much more effective deterrent to crime."

Chief Kealey did not talk about such studies, and added that as an experienced police officer, it is common knowledge that lighting an area prevents crime.

A Quincy woman was killed in this two-car crash which occurred Sunday, March 24, on Route 3A. According to Cohasset police, Alice E. Huddy, 71, of 1000 Southern Artery, died at South Shore Hospital Tuesday, as a result of injuries from the accident. Her husband, Laurence C. Huddy, was the driver of the vehicle which collided with a van driven by Mark Principe, 25, of Lexington. Principe, who also sustained injuries, has been charged with driving to endanger and motor vehicle homicide. The accident occurred in front of The Donut Tree at 11:58 a.m. (Bill Quigley photo)

The Law and You

by Richard Price, Attorney-at-Law

RESTITUTION

When a contract is dissolved by the court, restitution puts the parties in nearly the same position they were in before the contract was signed. It occurs when the party who has been injured by breach is able to retrieve the value of the performance he has rendered under the contract. Here are some examples of situations in which rescission was allowed to the injured parties, that is, circumstances which rendered the contract void; where there is a failure to fulfill a condition or a mistake is made in the formation of a contract; a material breach occurs; performance becomes impossible. In these instances, an innocent party was excused from performance when the condition of mistake or impossibility occured.

Though the concept of right and wrong may appear quite simple, it is, in fact, very complex when legal interpretations and negotiations must be entered into. One must often be extremely careful even of seemingly simple wording in a contract. It is for this reason that it is wise to engage the services of an attorney. LAW OFFICES OF RICHARD PRICE, 760 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Rt. 3A, Cohasset, 383-9882. I am available daily by appt.

BAGGAGE LIABILITY

As mentioned two weeks ago as part of deregulation, the Civil Aeronautics Board went out of existence at the end of last year. The Department of Transportation, however, will continue to enforce passenger protection rules. Among them is the one concerning baggage liability. Checked luggage must be insured against loss or damage for at least $1,250. This does not mean that a passenger will necessarily get the full amount if a bag is mishandled. He may still be asked to show receipts to prove the value of missing or damaged items. Airlines can choose to pay only depreciated value rather than full replacement costs. Still, until very recently, $1,250 is almost twice as much as passengers could count on.

To all our readers who may have recently become engaged, we congratulate you and urge you to plan early for your honeymoon. In this way, you are assured of your travel arrangments and accommodations well in advance of your departure. It is better to plan well in advance rather than waiting till it is perhaps too late finding that you are unable to get accommodations or flight connections to your destination. around town

☐ Spring is just around the corner and so is another Junior League Showhouse. Marie Johnston (Johnston Ints., Inc.) will once again be amongst the cast of exuberant decorators who will transform the Endicott-Johnson Estate into a Showplace. This year Marie will exhibit her creative talents and flair in the twin's nursery. Soft blues and old English charm will help soothe the overwhelming task of two! In addition, don't forget to visit Marie's shop on Charles Street — both will prove a delighful experience.

☐ The Social Service League hosted a grand meeting last week, which was attended by a record number of 78 people. The meeting featured Anna Doherty, an attorney that spoke about legal matters, and Suzanne Ganley of Gardner and Preston Morse, a Boston-based financial firm. The topic was all about what a woman should do to help herself if her spouse leaves, either through death or other means. All who went came from the meeting well informed and far wiser than when they went in!

☐ Congratulations to James P. Kuhn, Jr., on his appointment to the position of Senior Vice President, Corporate Affairs of Metrocorp. In this position, Mr. Kuhn will assist the chairman in developing policy and strategy at the corporate level. Mr. Kuhn is also publisher of Boston Magazine and d strategy at the corporate level. Mr. Kuhn is also Publisher of Bohas been with the corporation in various capacities for more than 17 years.

☐ No, your eyes are not deceiving you: the man that you see walking around "The Log and Line" is the same Dr. Roger Pompeo that was reported about last week, when he underwent surgery on his back . . . obviously his surgery was a grand success! Though he isn't back at work yet (or wasn't when this was being written), his office is still functioning under Dr. Greenburg's services. He'll be there in record time, judging by his remarkable progress thus far! Sure is a good advertisement for the benefits of back surgery!

☐ Congratulations to James M. Driscoll, who achieved the honor of making the Headmaster's List at Derby Academy (A- or better average); Nicholas P. Manganro, John D. Manning, Anthony W. Morgan, Kristine A. Pozatek and Stephen M. Pozatek all made second honors (must have at least a B average in all subjects.

'Would you guys get in line?' Sometimes being a photographer is a difficult job, especially for J.D. Bacigalupo. He's trying to line up a shot of Ned, 5, and Greg, 3. (Carol McCann)

☐ Happy birthday to Dan Campbell.

☐ Don't forget the roadrace this Sunday. Put your pooch in the house, he's not allowed, then head to the Common to cheer your favorite runner home. This popular event is so much fun to watch, wouldn't it be great to see a local win . . . sure have been a lot running the course the last couple of weeks! Good luck to all.

☐ The basketball teams put our town up in lights in the Sports Dept., the Cohasset High School Drama Club did its part in letting everyone know that we are the best in presenting plays, and the Cohasset Garden Club certainly left its mark at the New England Flower Show by receiving so many top awards. Both as a group and as individuals, they were awarded many an honor . . . in the Horticultural Division, Lucille McLoughlin won a blue for her topiary of a dauchound; Jeam Simmons won a red and an honorable mention, Cindy Reid won an honorable mention, and Lucia Wood won a red, two yellow and an honorable mention. Under flower arranging category Tish Grinnell won two blues, and Barbara Powers won a red.

☐ Congratulations are certainly in order for John Rattenbury. John son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Rattenbury of Briarwood Lane was just informed that he won a four year ROTC scholarship to Rensaleer, where he had already been notified that he had earned an early decision . . . all of his hard work and dedication to his studies have certainly paid off, good work, John.

☐ That's the news from here for the week . . . keep it coming.

To place fifth in state competition is "more than just pretty good," according to Cohasset High School Drama Club director Ron Emmons.

When asked to describe how well the cast of "Voices" performed during last week's presentation in the state high school drama festival, Emmons was exuberant. "It was a positive festival. Our cast's attitude was just great. Placing fifth was no embarrassment. We started out with 60 schools in competition and only fifteen made the finals," he said.

The cast, comprised of 15 CHS students, were honored with the Ensemble Acting award, a first in the history of the Drama Club. "Even in 1979 when we won the overall competition, I wasn't as pleased as last week. That award meant these kids were not discernible as individual standouts. The level of everyone's acting was so good, they were all honored," Emmons explained.

Jen Hynes was awarded a separate acting honor, a superlative achievement, according to her director.

Sponsored by the Boston Globe, the judges included a program manager of the Boston University Theatre Institute, a professor of theatre at Bridgewater College, and a drama instructor at Choate Rosemary Hall in Connecticut.

"We did what we intended to accomplish," Emmons added. "We learned an awful lot from watching the other students perform last weekend, and we even got an idea for next year's show.

"Although this was supposed to be our rebuilding year, we did a lot more than expected. They were better than just pretty good," he concluded.

The honored students include: Jillian Ayer, Erin Browne, Jenna Emmons, Jacqui Fahey, Andrew Glasfeld, Kim Harrington, Glen Hochkeppel, Jen Hynes, Laura Kuhn, John Kuntz, Philip Mahoney, Jim Martin, Shawn McCarthy, Michelle Meagher, and Lise Pierotti.

Special 'Good grief' program

A special program for teachers, community leaders and parents will be held Thursday afternoon at Cohasset High School.

For the first time in the school's history, a program will be held for teachers , administrators and parents to help the young people of Cohasset to deal with the recent death of two classmates.

A special release day has been scheduled for Thursday, March 28 at 1 p.m. in the junior-senior high school auditorium. The "Good Grief program" is a program designed to help schools and community groups become a base of support for children when a friend dies.

Designed and sponsored by the Judge Baker Guidance Center of Boston, the program has been utilized in other area school systems.

School will be dismissed for all students, K-12, Thursday, March 28 at: junior senior high school, 12:20 p.m.; Deer Hill School, 12:40 p.m.; and Joseph Osgood School, 12:50 p.m. Regular release day bus transportation will be provided. All activities scheduled for Thursday afternoon will be postponed.

The "Good Grief program" will begin at 1 p.m. in the high school auditorium and will feature Dr. Sandra Fox, director of the Judge Baker Center. The program will offer consultation to teachers, administrators, group leaders, parents and others about ways to respond to the needs of young people which arise when a child dies.

Supt. Eugene Crowell praised the efforts of the high school staff these past two weeks, saying it was their support and comfort to the students that helped them cope with the tragedies.

He specifically applauded the work of Mrs. Yess, who, despite her own loss, has attended school this week and has helped many of the students cope with the deaths of their classmates.

At the beginning of this week's school committee meeting, there was a moment of silence for the two students, Desiree Yess and Seanna O'Leary, who were killed in the car crash two weeks ago. Chairman Joseph Nedrow asked that special thoughts be given to the families of the survivors and the ordeal they are currently experiencing.

Positive reaction

More sad news touched our lives this week, as the second young victim of the Beechwood Street car crash died.

Again, Cohasset High School was plunged into despair and once again, mourners filed outside the funeral home to bid farewell to someone too young to die.

It is the individual faith of the all the families involved, that will pull them through and allow their lives to continue.

It has likely been said in confidence, but it should be said publicly. Our hearts and prayers are with the survivors and their families. Know that we are all thinking of you, not in judgment of you, but in complete compassion. You are not alone, the community of Cohasset will stand by you.

Out of this tragedy, something positive must enter. It would only make sense from this seemingly sense-less incident.

Perhaps such a thing occurs to stir us from our daily sleep. We should listen and learn from it.

The school committee, in the face of despondence and despair, voted this week to publicly record their support of proposed mandatory Safety Belt legislation. They have also written to Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, requesting she relay Cohasset's legislative endorsement to the State House.

This is a positive step taken by the committee, a step which can only serve to save lives of future Cohasset students.

Let's stand with each other in our days of grief, but let's step aside and see what these deaths may teach us. If our relationship with the two girls was less than personal, then at least there is an obligation to learn.

At the very least, think of the girls when you enter a car and buckle the seat belts. Our lesson has been taught the hard way.

Search for Executive Secretary

Although selectmen were scheduled to interview the final candidate for Executive Secretary Monday night, he withdrew his application that day.

Selectmen received a call from Jeffrey Francis Hinsdale, N.H., informing them that he had reconsidered his application and wished to withdraw.

Last week, selectmen interviewed Michael Wood, a former assistant to the Norwood Town Manager.

Selectmen decided Monday night to contact another candidate who was previously interviewed. They were scheduled to ask Christine McCay, an assistant to the Arlington Town Manager, if she would be interested in a second interview for the Cohasset position.

If she accepts the invitation, selectmen will likely make the appointment the following week.

A comforting quote from Rev. Coffin

To the Editor:

I am old enough to know better than to rely upon my memory. Unfortunately, it failed me as I tried to quote William Sloane Coffin's words in the sermon you published last week. With the tragic death of the second young person in the automobile accident of March 12, Dr. Coffin's words seem all the more important. Following are two paragraphs he wrote after the death of his son Alex in an automobile accident:

"When a person dies there are many things that can be said, and there is at least one thing that should never be said. The night after Alex died I was sitting in the living room of my sister's house . . . when the front door opened and in came a nice-looking middle-aged woman, carrying about 18 quiches. When she saw me she shook her head, saying, 'I just don't understand the will of God.' Instantly I was up and in hot pursuit, swarming all over her. 'I'll say you don't, lady,' I said. (I knew the anger would do me good, and the instruction to her was long overdue.) I continued, 'Do you think it was the will of God that Alex never fixed that lousy windshield wiper of his, that he was probably driving too fast in such a storm? Do you think it is God's will that there are no streetlights along that stretch of road, and no guard rail separating the road from Boston Harbor?'

Letters

For some reason, nothing so infuriates me as the incapacity of seemingly intelligent people to get it through their heads that God doesn't go around this world with his finger on triggers, his fist around knives, his hands on steering wheels. God is dead set against all unnatural deaths . . . The one thing that should never be said when someone dies is, 'It is the will of God.' Never do we know enough to say that. My own consolation lies in knowing that it was not the will of God that Alex die; that when the waves closed over the sinking car, God's heart was the first of all our hearts to break."

On behalf of the congregation I serve, our deepest sympathy is extended to the O'Leary and Yess families, and to all who are affected by these tragic deaths.

Board responds to chambers stand

To the Editor:

The violent reaction expressed in the letter over the name of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce to the proposed zoning by-law changes came as somewhat of a surprise to the planning board. The board's relations with those business people, both downtown and on the highway, with whom it has been associated have, we thought, been pretty good. In no case has the board tried to prevent development. In every case it has advocated the town's interest and tried to help people whether businessmen, developers, or private individuals, to accomplish their ends within the scope of the zoning by-law. Beside a number of changes and enlargements, plans along Rte. 3A have been approved for a new Bergson's and Autohaus to the east of Cushing Plaza, and industrial plant across from Jonathan Livingston Square, a bank next to Crocker Lane, as well as Alco Oil's office building just to the west. All of these promise to upgrade the appearance of Justice Cushing Way and all were accomplished without fuss. This doesn't seem "elitist" to the board.

From 1981 through 1984, 154 home building permits were issued (21 in 1981, 28 in 1982, 43 in 1983, 51 in 1984). Of these permits, 48 were in clusters, a concept introduced and promoted by the planning board — probably nothing "elitist" there.

Fact: The proposed lot size increases are 50 percent in District "A," 75 percent in District "B," and 100 percent in District "C." Because most of the privately owned land is in "B," those increases would average out closer to 75 percent (vs. the 100 percent that the letter states) and because we already have over 2000 homes and hundreds of lots already grandfathered (and therefore their integrity inviolate), the net effect will be closer to 50 percent, if that much.

The letter's predictions of inflation and its dire consequences raise a question as to the business and economic acumen of its authors.

Land costs have gone up here like everywhere else. It is building costs that make houses so costly; houses cost 4 - 5 times the price of the land. Increasing lot size increases lot value only fractionally. The fact that a lot can be built upon determines its value. Doubling the required lot size increases the value of approximately 20 - 25 percent, not 100 percent. The developers may be disappointed, but the buyer gets more for his money. (Would that have to do with the anguish expressed in the letter?)

The planning board invited all town departments and all townspeople to make recommendations. The chamber was represented by two representatives from enterprises, both of which had previously approached the board in an effort to aleviate parking requirements. They submitted three sets of parking

Chief's wife takes issue with March 14 editorial

The following statements made are my opinion and feelings, that I have given much thought to, regarding what I consider a biased editorial in the March 14th 1985 issue of the Mariner. Some may consider my opinions biased also, because you see, I am the wife of the Fire Chief.

I take issue with the statements that he is crippled with a massive flaw where his personnel are concerned, has no respect, and is a fiery tyrant. The reporter writing this editorial is out of line. You do not know my husband. He is none of these things the way you described. My husband is more capable of commanding men, but that you see is the problem, he does not have men to command - he has boys.

I believe it was a selectman who once said to my husband at a board meeting, "the 'boys' didn't mean any harm, they were just having a little fun." The Fire Department is a dangerous, serious and hazardous business, and you don't have 'just a little fun.' Give my husband men, without daily interference, and you'll see a superb Fire Department.

I have been married to the man for almost 27 years, and all told we have been together for approximately 30 years. If anyone knows Martin Dooley, I do, and I have at no time during all these years ever seen my husband the way the reporter described him in the editorial.

I would not call my husband a 'fiery tyrant' because he raised his voice and swore at 'the lads' for verbally saying things against me, his wife. I call him a man - a man standing up to protect his wife from verbal abuse. If this makes him a 'fiery tyrant' then I guess he's guilty. But while I thanked him for it, the board members chastised him for it, instead of reprimanding 'the lads' for verbally and wrongfully attacking me, and for not showing proper respect towards the Chief of the department in the process.

Then you mention mutual respect. Well, let me set the record straight. The respect was always one-sided and it came from the Chief, not the rank and file. When respect is always given and none ever returned, it makes me wonder if they even know the meaning of the word. Also, why is it that there were too many times, a lack of respect, and never has there been a 'thank you' on the part of the members of the board?

To my knowledge, and I have much knowledge, the Chief is not guilty of any dirty under-handed tricks, but that's not true of the other side. And what about my husband's civil rights??? There were many things allowed to happen and be condoned by his superiors on the board that hinged on possible violations of his civil rights. There are those of you who are well aware of what I am saying. Well, it's your conscience you must live with, Tell me, do you sleep at night?

As Chief of the Cohasset Fire Department, he attempted to do the job he was hired for. That is, to protect the lives and property of the people of Cohasset to do the best of his ability. All he is guilty of, is trying to get the lads to do the jobs they were hired for. To work and earn their salary that is being paid by you, the taxpayers. He was not made aware that he had been entered into a popularity contest. He thought he was hired to direct the Fire Department. He didn't know that he was actually hired as a referee on a debating team. He did his best to drag the Cohasset Fire Department kicking and screaming into the second half of the 20th century. It is apparent now that they do not want nor do they desire to move forward into any portion of the 20th century. This is sad, because the only people that lose are the citizens of the town. We will move on to bigger and better things. Will you? The citizens are losing a first class "man and firefighter", but I am again gaining a fulltime husband. I will no longer have to share three-quarters of him with you. You have no idea how good that feels.

It's true that my husband is strict, and is a traditionalist. But not if it inteferes with progress. Cohasset is not ready for this progress, therefore, Chief Martin Dooley, at least for this town, is ahead his time.

It is my hope that when the members of the board read this they do not decide to reprimand him for things that I have said. It is my belief that this could have happened in the past. It is also my hope that when the board hires the next chief, that they will at least be honest enough to tell him what they really want, and not mislead the actual needs and qualifications that they are looking for. Because they were certainly not honest with my husband. We both thought when we came here that you wanted an innovative and progressive leader - you did not.

Please, express this to the next chief. You will owe him that much. And please, (lads and board members) give him the proper respect his badge deserves. This is not true of what has been done up to this point in time.

My husband, as Chief of the Cohasset Fire Department, can hold his head high, walk tall and be proud of the time he was chief here. It is you people who will have to live these past few years and continue to face some changes. And with great difficulty, I'm afraid, that will still have to take place as some things are already in place and can not be changed. Too much is known, too much is out and too much has been swept under the carpet. If it is to stay under the carpet, then I believe that now is the time for my husband to stop being used as the 'buck' that has been passed back and forth between the 'lads' and the board for over two years. Enough is enough. Let the remainder of time left for us, regardless of how long, be peaceful.

We will remember these past years, but eventually they will all become just a bad dream, that with time will fade into a mere memory. I doubt that you will so lucky. No, we feel no bitterness. Why should ? My husband did his job as the professional, firefighter and man he is, and I'm extremely proud of him and of being his wife.

Mrs. Martin (Joyce) Dooley

recommendations (the same as those being submitted to town meeting by citizens' petition) and nothing more. So much for the letter's "in depth recommendations." These were carefully considered by the subcommittee and the full planning board. It was concluded that parking by-laws as a whole are complex, generally inflexible, often a cause of more trouble than they solve, and therefore needful of special study. The board has adopted a recommendation of the subcommittee allowing flexibility in the parking requirements (Article 39). All of this was done in open meeting and is a part of the public record. It was not really truly done in a "virtual vacuum;" at least one chamber member was frequently an observer.

The letter recommends a "master plan." A master plan has to do with geography and physical layout like the zoning and flood plain maps that are part of our zoning by-laws; it is not a substitute. The body of the by-laws is an entity.

The zoning by-law rests with the will of the townspeople; its "plan" is the consensus of their feeling toward Cohasset and what they wish it to be. It is with that in mind that the by-law changes are being offered.

Cohasset is well named; it is a "rocky place." It's unusual amount of ledge with intermittent marsh and its relatively limited amount of readily drainable land are what makes it so attractive and at the same time vulnerable to overbuilding. The evidence is already apparent in some parts of town. This is why the Metcalf & Eddy and Ward Engineering surveys as well as the board of health, sewer commissioners and drainage study committee have recommended substantially increased lot sizes. That's what the bulk of the proposed by-law changes are all about.

The planning board has no desire to curtail the growth of homes nor of the businesses without which Cohasset would be an artificial and uninteresting place. It does urge control of unrestrained growth.

Cohasset Planning Board

Kindergarten orientation

Parents of next fall's kindergarten (class of '98) were welcomed to the Cohasset school system Thursday morning by Superintendent Eugene Creswell and Osgood School Principal John Creamer. During the orientation meeting kindergarten teachers Christine Collins and Marie Price described the kindergarten experience and outlined a typical day of learning, playing and sharing. They also discussed the screening process which will take place the week of March 25 through March 29.

School Physician Robert Sceery, M.D. and Educational Consultant Lawrence Lieberman addressed the physical and emotional needs and changes in the four- to five-year-old, and gave parents advice on handling separation, diet and sleep requirements, to insure a happy beginning to the school adventure.

Refreshments were provided by Parent School Organization board members Joanne Chittick and Kyle Lubitz who were on hand to greet fathers and mothers and answer questions on the role of the PSO in providing a communications link between home and school.

Parents who were unable to attend the orientation should call Mr. Creamer at 383-6117 to arrange an appointment for their child's screening.

Candidates Corner

Deborah G. Eaton

Deborah G. Eaton has announced her candidacy for the five year term on the Recreation Commission.

Ms. Eaton and her husband, Bryan Bruce, moved to Cohasset from Boston four years ago and reside at 39 Norfolk Rd. with their two daughters, Jessica, 6 and Sara 3.

Ms. Eaton is a 1973 graduate of California State University at San Diego and has completed graduate courses at Boston University's Graduate School of Management. She has been employed for the past eight years by Quincy Community Action Organization, Inc., a private, non-profit human services agency. In her position as Associate Director, she is responsible for the overall supervision of all agency programs which include a Head Start pre-school program, a volunteer program for retired seniors, an energy conservation program and several others which provide services to low-income individuals.

Ms. Eaton feels that the program's and activities offered by the Recreation Department are an asset to the community and are enjoyed by many residents. She would like to see some of these programs expanded, if at all possible within budget constraints. Also, as a mother who is employed full-time outside the home, Ms. Eaton has a strong interest in seeing that programs and activities offered in Cohasset are designed with the needs of all parents, working as well as non-working, in mind.

Ms. Eaton believes that another area that bears looking into is recreational activities for young adolescents. As a fairly distinct group, these young people are at risk of developing a number of serious problems including alcoholism and drug abuse problems. Ms. Eaton feels that providing interesting and enjoyable activites for this age group should be a priority for the Recreation Department.

Diane Sullivan

The Committee to elect Diane Sullivan to the two-year term on our Board of Selectmen wishes to remind residents of the following remaining occasions where they can talk with Diane about issues:

American Cablesystems program, Thursday, March 27 at 7 p.m., Channel 3. Residents may call in live and ask questions of the candidates.

An evening coffee at the home of Mrs. Joseph Mecurio, 3 Cedar Acres Lane, Friday, March 29 at 7:30 p.m.

An evening wine and cheese party at the home of Mrs. Allen Thomas, 192 Fairoaks Lane, Monday, April 1 at 7:30 p.m. An evening wine and cheese party at the home of Mrs. Edward Guild, 365 Jerusalem Road, Tuesday, April 2 at 7:30 p.m.

Candidate Sullivan appeared at a well-attended wine and cheese party at the home of Mrs. Joe Hamilton. Co-hostess of the event was Mrs. John Kinchla. It was held at 244 Beechwood Street, March 24. Attendees engaged the candidate in a lively discussion on a wide range of issues.

Anyone wishing to attend any of the remaining events may call the hostesses listed above.

Also, anyone not able to attend any of the functions, may call the candidate direct at 383-1166 and talk with her about any issue of particular concern.

Criminal charges filed

Cohasset police have filed two criminal complaints against the 16 year-old driver involved in an accident on Beechwood Street March 12. Two passengers in that vehicle were killed.

Michelle Stone, 16, of South Main Street, has been charged by police with two counts of vehicular homicide. According to Officer Cliff Jones who is investigating the single-car crash, that is a mandatory charge filed against the driver involved in a fatality.

Stone will be brought before the juvenile session at Norfolk County Court in Quincy. The hearing is scheduled for May 1.

The cause of the accident, in which 13 year-old Desiree Yess, and 13 year-old Seanna O'Leary were killed, is still under investigation, according to Officer Jones.

WOMEN AT WORK

The future is ever brighter for women. Slowly, whether by legislation or social recognition, women are moving forward with increased opportunities. However, with each opportunity comes responsibility. Unfortunately, many women are neglectful or not aware of themselves. It appears that the numbers and ratio of female patients suffering from spinal injuries is increasing each year. The American Chiropractic Association estimates that there are five million cases each year in which accidents and strains result in impairment of the back and spine. Approximately half are due to injuries. Approximately 800,000 back impairements (excluding paralysis) are due to injuries at work. A chiropractor is extremely knowledgable about the prevention and treatment of these problems.

From injury on the job to discomfort from aggressive athletic activities to even problems from day-to-day living, you may well find the answer to your discomforts when you partake of a chiropractic exam. By utilizing chiropractic techniques, points of interference are eliminated thus allowing Mother Nature to transmit her natural healing instructions along the spinal column. South Shore Elder Services update

Margaret McSweeney, Hingham, was unanimously re-elected as chairman by the South Shore Elder Services' Advisory Council at its annual meeting this week in Quincy. The regional Advisory Council also elected Don Strong of Hingham and the Beechwood Community Life Center as vice chairman; and June Williams of Norwell, an educator, as secretary.

Edythe Donkin, president of the South Shore Elder Services' Executive Board lauded the 1984 work of the council, commending their productive efforts in assisting the Area Agency of Aging staff in the task of coordinating community resources to assist the elderly population in the 11-town South Shore region.

Sharron Nohr, area agency on aging program manager and AAA staffers Julie Kelley, SND, Henry Stowers, Lois Rumney; and Mary McKenna, outlined service planning and achievements. Highlighted were current intitiatives in transportation, housing, and grants development. Warren Dahlin, executive director, and all staff underscored the continuing goal of "coordination" and "pooling" of resources.

Nohr stressed the importance of linkages in the chain of service provison for older persons. "Agencies and care providers in social and heath care programs must link more effectively. We must cross town and turf borders cooperatively if shrinking service resources are to be best used. We in the public service arena must more creatively link with private sector resources in order to best meet the needs of older persons in all stratas of the community."

Lois Rumney of Weymouth, South Shore Elder Services' transportation developer, outlined the progress of the 11-town Transportation Coalition and the developing system to provide services for the frail elderly and handicapped needing wheelchair transport. Awards of wheelchair and radio-equipped vehicles were announced. The Department of Transportation organizational meeting for establishing the 11-town transportation brokerage was outlined.

Henry Stowers, South Shore Elder Services Housing program developer, updated the Advisory Council on the agency's work to develop alternatives for older citizens.

"Shared housing", congregate housing and optional sales/buy-back lease arrangements are among increasing options for South Shore elderly. The work with housing authorities, social service agencies, and the private sector has been most productive.

Mary McKenna of Braintree was introduced as the new Nurising Home Ombudsman program supervisor. "We currently are working in 28 of the South Shore's 38 long-term care facilities" McKenna advised. "Priorities for 1985 include recruitment of more volunteer staff persons and ongoing professional trainings."

Julie Kelly, SND, SSES' planner and grants monitor, outlined current community grants, noting the increases in number of grants awards being awarded to coordinate inter-agency and inter-town joint applications.

Young artist exhibit at So. Shore Art Center

Works by young artists of the Hull School System will be featured in the South Shore Art Center's annual young artist exhibit.

Selected art work from students in kindergarten through twelfth grade will hang in the Center's invitational gallery at 103 Ripley Rd. The exhibit opens Sunday, March 31 with a formal reception from 4 to 6 p.m. and continues through April 27.

Such an exhibit offers an opportunity to show what the students in the various South Shore school systems are doing in their art classes. Each year the Center features a different community and takes the art work and hangs it in a proper setting for the appreciation of others.

In its attempt to reach all segments of the population the South Shore Art Center is continuing to expand its opportunities for young artists through courses, workshops, an informal vacation drop in program and exhibits.

The opportunity for young artists to see their works hanging in an art gallery and to share their works with others gives them a good feeling about the effort they put into creating something artistic. Through this exhibit the Center is able to draw all ages into the gallery and gives them a chance to see what the Center's facility has to offer.

In past years the Young Artist exhibits have featured work from students in Marshfield, Scituate, Norwell, Hingham and Cohasset. The exhibit of work by Hull students wil be open to the public, Monday through Friday, noon to 4 p.m. and Saturdays, 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. For further information call the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548.

Handicapped social held

The Handicapped Ministry and Youth Group at United Church of Christ, 460 Main St., Norwell, recently welcomed 23 young people (ages 12 to 22) with special needs at Valentine's and St. Patrick's Day festivities.

There were games galore, music and dancing, refreshments and time to share with new and old friends. Guests were day students from Hanover, Hingham, Hull, Scituate, Cohasset and Norwell. The interaction between the handicapped youths and members of the church Youth Group was best expressed by Rev. David Norling when he said it was hard to tell who was ministering to whom. A good time was had by all.

Cohasset residents perform in Boston musical

Julia Wood Jordan and Abigail White of Cohasset are featured players in the 93rd Vincent Show, an original musical for the benefit of the Vincent Memorial Hospital, the gynecological unit of the Massachusetts General Hospital. The show premieres in Boston next Thursday.

Entitled "Play the Game," the theme is games acted out in song, dance and comedy. The lottery, croquet Nineties style, beauty contests, 1950's television panel shows, and cabbage patch are among the games skillfully and delightfully parodied by the multi-talented troupe.

Julia solos in a Dungeons and Dragons number. Abby sings in a barbershop quartet portraying a con game and also appears on "The Boardwalk Strut." Julia and Abby appear together in a tennis skit, the croquet song, and kick line, and the famous Vincent Drill. The hallmark of Vincent Shows, the Vincent Drill consists of sixteen women performing precise and intricate patterns in military style.

The president of the Cohasset Dramatic Club, Julia Jordan recently played Cora in "Mornings at Seven." Other recent credits include "A Man For All Seasons," "Strange Bedfellows," and "Scenes From American Life." In 1983, Julia directed the dramatic club's smash hit "A Christmas Carol." On the west coast, Ms. Jordan directed "Camino Real," and was associated with Universal Studios and Warner Brothers Workshop.

During many past summers, Abby White taught swimming to Cohasset youngsters and produced several children's musicals.

Performances of "Play the Game" are scheduled for 8 p.m. on Thursday, April 6, Friday, April 7, and Saturday, April 8. A 2 p.m. matinee will be held on Saturday, April 8.

All performances are at New England Life Hall, 501 Boylston Street (corner of Clarendon and Boylston Streets), Boston. Ticket prices range from $7.50 to $15.

Tickets can be purchased at the time of performance or in advance at the Vincent Box Office at New England Life Hall. Proceeds will be donated to the Vincent Memorial Hospital.

Flowers in the Snow

Flowers appeared at the Scituate-Cohasset Newcomers Club meeting Monday morning at the Scituate Library thanks to the artistry of the floral arranging of Marie Simons of Simons Greenhouse, Rte. 123, Scituate.

The club was "beautifully" entertained by Ms. Simons with a contemporary design she explained and designed, incorporating bamboo, tulips, freesia, iris and feather leaf.

The contemporary design and other personal designs along with the traditional arrangements are available in their full service florist shop. Most of the wire services, FTD, etc., are now featuring this innovation in floral displays.

Along with spring comes one of the most important and rewarding aspects of the Scituate-Cohasset Newcomers Club with the final plans and preparations for the yearly fund-raiser which enables the club once again to present a high school senior from each town their Scholarship Award.

Last year two students were presented $750 each, Carolyn Koopman of Cohasset, and George Meegan of Scituate.

Scituate Town Library received $250.

In the past seasons, a very popular fashion show has proven to be the most beneficial to the Scholarship Fund. The club is planning a spring fashion show and luncheon, "Fashions-By-The Sea" at Hugo's Lighthouse Restaurant, Cohasset, Wednesday, April 24.

Tickets are available at Quincy Cooperative Bank, Rte. 3A, Cohasset (Stop & Shop Center), Mr. John's Beauty Salon, Scituate Harbor.

Other special music will feature Heather Davenport, clarinet, and Owen Fryling and Al Sencabaugh, vocal soloists. We will also view the Church School classes' "Walk Through Holy Week." In the Fellowship Hour, we will enjoy fresh hot cross buns, and welcome our church's new Christian Education Director, Marsha Silvia. Be sure not to miss this special Sunday!

Church School — Teachers: There will be a brief meeting with all teachers this Sunday at 9:30 a.m. in the Ladies Parlor. Bring your concerns and suggestions. Children: All of you are urged to attend this Sunday to participate in the "Walk Through Palm Sunday" and receive a palm. We're even having hot cross buns. Don't forget props if you were asked to bring something. Second and third graders, don't forget to wash your feet! See you then — we need you all! Marsha Silva, 383-0500.

Holy Week Events: In addition to Palm Sunday (see above) you are invited to participate in the following services during Holy Week:

Maundy Thursday: April 4, 8 p.m., As we remember together "the night when he was betrayed," we will sing some of your favorites among the old hymns of the church (ranging from "In the Garden" to "Amazing Grace"), hear three anthems (including one that has never been heard before), and receive the sacrament of Communion.

Good Friday: The sanctuary will be open for your meditations and prayers throughout the day. Our church bell will be tolled at 3 p.m., the hour traditionally observed as the time of Jesus' death.

Easter: Invite your friends and neighbors to join us for the Easter Sunrise Service. It begins at 7:30 at Sandy Beach.

Easter Service: Next week's Good News will describe the Easter Service more fully. It will include special music and the sacrament of Communion. There will be no Church School classes on Easter Sunday.

Another Address: By mistake last week, we left out one address of a nursing home resident. Caroline Williams' address is Queen Anne's Nursing Home, 50 Recreation Road, Hingham, MA 02043.

Elevator Update: Just before Palm Sunday last year, I wrote in a Good News message that construction of the handicapped access ramp had begun as I began to write. Today I'm late getting started, and must report that construction of the elevator shaftway began nearly an hour ago! The final phase of the Elevator Project, now underway, will provide easier access for older and handicapped persons, including those in wheelchairs. It has been made possible by the generous gifts and pledges of most of you who read these words, and by your participation in such fundraisers as the Quilt Project. As the final phase begins, and "lift off" is only a few weeks away, it is time for the church to repeat its thanks to all who shared in the project. The youngest giver to the Elevator Project is not yet in Kindergarten; the oldest is only a few years short of a century. Together, you've accomplished a project worthy of the gratitude and congratulations of all who will benefit by easier access to our church's regular and special services.

Holy Week observances

The entire church family of the Second Congregational Church will gather to celebrate Palm Sunday on March 30 at 10 .m.

There will be two anthems with congregational participation, including Faure's familiar "Palm Branches"; other special music will feature Heather Davenport, clarinetist, and Owen Fryling and Al Sencabaugh, vocal soloists.

Following the service, we will view the Church School classes' 'Walk through Holy Week." In the fellowship hour, we will enjoy fresh hot cross buns, and welcome the church's new Christian Education Director, Marsha Silvia.

On Maundy Thursday, April 4, at 8 p.m., we will sing many of our favorite old hymns, hear three anthems, and receive the sacrament of Communion by candlelight.

The public is welcome to share in these and all services of the church.

On Easter Sunday, April 7, the community is invited to share in a brief but joyous service of worship at Sandy Beach. The service wil begin at 7:30 a.m. and will include hymns, prayers, and Scriptures, which celebrate Easter. The Sunrise Service is sponsored by the Second Congregational Church.

Rec. Commission new member

The Recreation Commission voted to use beach and dump stickers produced by Warren Industries over the originally proposed Graphic designs. At the meeting held Thursday night committee members stated that both stickers are exactly the same in every aspect except cost.

Graphic productions for the stickers cost $1255 and Warren Industries cost $883. The committee voted on using Warren Industries and asking selectmen if the money saved could be put towards posters stating where and when the stickers could be picked up.

The committee plans to spend between one hundred fifty and two hundred dollars on the posters.

In another matter, James Gallagher, current representative for Cohasset Cable television systems, requested that a member be appointed to the Cable Commission. Alna Ekberg was chosen to replace Gallagher as a representative of the Recreation Commission. She will be obligated to attend one meeting every two months.

Teresa Duggan and Peter Laguelle were considered to represent the Harbor study committee. The meeting will be held the first Thursday of every month.

In another issue, the committee members discussed the possibility of opening a YMCA in the Hull area. A letter was submitted to selectmen from Christopher McCabe, Hull's executive secretary. The selectmen turned the matter over to town recreation committee.

The YMCA would be set up in the Damon Elementary School which has been vacant since 1981. The location of the school near the Cohasset Hingham lines enables the property to be used as a regional recreation facility for the surrounding towns.

The board returned a letter asking Hull representatives what the proposed YMCA would include.

Recreation members feel Cohasset residents would be interested if the facility were specialized with a swimming pool and racquetball court.

The commission members are waiting for more information from Hull selectmen.

A final time and date was set for the 1985 Easter egg hunt. The hunt will be held at noon April 6 for children ages three to 12 years old. There will be a chocolate Easter egg hunt and prizes awarded. Sponsoring the hunt are the Rotary Club, American Legion, and the Cohasset Police Department.

James Gallagher brought up another issue regarding recreational activities. He feels that dirt bikes should be allowed to run through the railroad bed. "Considering the tracks are used for every other recreational use; cross country skiing, joggine, horseback riding, it's unfair to exclude motorcycling, if the operator has a registration and helmet.

The board feels there is definitely lack of suitable place in town to ride motorized bikes.

Septage haulers angered at Hull rate increase

Although there was going to be a contract signed with Cohasset for use of that landfill, the contract was never executed. That is the reason, Kendrick said, why Cohasset's disposal rate hike is slightly higher than other towns.

"Percentage-wise, everyone's increase was about the same. Cohasset was a bit higher because the previous $22.50 rate took into consideration the landfill use which was never utilized," Kendrick explained.

The rates, which become effective April 15, include a $100 charge for the disposal of 2000 gallons of septage. That amount equals one average residential septic system. There will be a $150 for the disposal of 2000 - 3000 gallons of Cohasset septage. Other towns, including Hull, Hingham and Norwell, received news of the rate hike, although theirs will not be as hefty as Cohasset's.

Kendrick said the sewer commissions have heard no complaints from haulers or residents. "We've heard a few 'wows', but that's been it," he added. "We deal primarily with the haulers, but we have sent letters to the local Boards of Health and to the media, so everyone would be aware of the increase."

Cohasset's plant supervisor predicts trouble with this new increase. "I think people are going to let their systems overflow to the leeching beds and we're going to have a lot of problems," Salvador said.

Livingston explained that many of the septic systems in Cohasset have been plagued with problems. Some of these system must be pumped three or four times a year. At $150, that means these people will be paying about $600 - $1000 a year for their septic tanks. Local restaurants, whose systems must be pumped once or twice a week, will be spending $500 to $700 weekly.

"Something is really wrong," he said. "How are we supposed to fight it? It will take someone who can stand up and talk for the haulers. Someone like Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray can go to Hull and get some answers. Hull is in a fairly strong position, and the issue is out of our hands."

The former M.D.C. facility in Hingham charged the haulers $10 for a 2000 gallon load. Local haulers could then charge customers about $60.

As Livingston explained, most local haulers can't afford $75,000 for more trucks, and they are therefore limited to the amount of septage they can haul. With limited resources, the haulers can not make a decent profit on each transport, without charging even more exorbitant rates.

Rosano agreed and added, "a lot of the people in Cohasset have systems that are not working as well as they should. They try to take care of them, but a lot are not going to be able to afford this increase. They can't afford to fix their systems, so how are they going to afford cleaning it three or four times a year now?

"The average person in Cohasset can't afford to have their systems fixed. Now they can't afford to have it cleaned. We're going to have some real problems."

Cohasset school news

Deer Hill poster winner

Congratulations to Michael Russell, a fourth grader at Deer Hill who won first prize in Eastern Edison's poster contest, "Energy Visions for Tomorrow's World." Michael's poster depicts a lightbulb in a jailsuit who says, "Don't let me escape." Courtney Schultz, who is on third grade at Osgood, received third prize for her entry, "Turn me off," a scene showing a TV and radio on a table and a radiator.

At the awards ceremony Friday in the Brockton Art Museum. President Hammer of Eastern Edison presented the 12 winners with ribbons and certificates; savings bonds went to the first and second prize winners. Their posters were chosen from 800 entries, from throughout the state.

Cohasset Elementary art teacher Jean O'Malley mounted 90 entries selected from second, third, and fourth grade students' posters, and was present to see two of her students honored. The top winners' posters will be entered in the state finals.

Reptiles on parade

An eleven-foot python will lead the "Reptiles on Parade" when Jeff Corwin of Norwell visits the Osgood School Friday, March 29. This traveling nature exhibit, sponsored by the PSO, also features a boa constrictor, and three types of turtles.

Candidates forum produces minimal interest

Planning Board Chairman Christine Bassett again disagreed with the Chamber's stance, explaining that the proposed changes are the result of studying the past five years of the town's growth. That the board is 'anti-growth' is absurd, she stated. The members simply are aware of the problems which have been accelerated by rapid development. She concluded by saying that Cohasset is not a business community, and business is here to serve the residents of Cohasset.

The following candidates for elected office attended the forum.

Incumbent selectman Rocco Laugelle is unopposed for a three-year seat on that board. "I have nothing to say, except that I have worked harder in the past two years than ever before in my six years on this board," he said. "I will continue to do the job as in the past, and hope the townspeople back me when they think they should."

James Gallagher and Diane Sullivan are running for a two-year term on the Board of Selectmen.

Gallagher outlined his five years of experience on the Recreation Commission, representing that group on the local cable advisory committee and the harbor study committee. A Cohasset resident for 25 years, Gallagher said he has experience in developing recreation budgets under Prop. 2 1/2 and is familiar with the workings of state government, having been interested in legislation involving recreation.

Although he wiped his brow in relief that no questions were asked, one woman eventually asked the candidate what he had done for the fishing industry in Cohasset. As one of the largest revenue-producing entities in town, fishing is important here, he said. As a recreation commission member, he has pushed for funds to have the harbor dredged and supports the need for a winch to be installed at the Government Island pier.

Selectman candidate Sullivan cited her background as a member of the sewer and drainage advisory committee, noting she has not been idle since her campaign for selectmen in 1983. She cited the numerous issues currently before the board, noting she has attended various meetings and hearing as a committee member and interested resident.

Sullivan said she will be visible and accessible in town, vowing that residents "will always know where I stand on an issue."

When asked how she felt about a proposed addition to the Town Hall, Sullivan noted that is a question to be answered by Town Meeting and she would abide by that vote. She said she supports the concept of the addition.

When asked why people should serve on citizens' advisory committees when their opinions are often rejected, Sullivan answered that may become an issue with the new Fire Chief search committee. She said selectmen have stated it is their perogative to include any candidate they feel qualified, but who is not a choice of the committee. That is their right, she stated.

The next candidate was Elizabeth Ripley who is running for a two-year term as Treasurer-Collector. Ripley cited her background and experience in the position, which she has filled since selectmen apointed her in October. Noting she has two years to gain the confidence of the town, Ripley said she intends to improve communications between her office and the public, and she is instituting a computer program designed to aid in the collection of $307,385 in back taxes.

Sewer Commission candidate Raimond Vanderweil introduced himself as a longtime mechanical engineer with extensive managerial and design experience. A proponent of the Ward Engineering plan, Vanderweil said he will continue to work for that plan while he is in office. Vanderweil is unopposed for a three-year term on the commission.

Incumbent school committee member Joseph Nedrow is also unopposed in his bid for re-election to a three-year seat on the board.

He explained the numerous "tough decisions" currently facing the committee which inherited a quality system and is striving to maintain it. Dwindling funds and declining enrollment are the major obstacles to be resolved, adding that the committee needs "the community support of what we are trying to maintain."

Barbara Bliss is running unopposed for another three-year term on the school committee. Since her involvement began with the Cohasset school system in 1968, she has witnessed the committee's loss of revenue and fiscal autonomy.

"The fact that I am unopposed concerns me greatly," she added. "Does this mean the community does not care about its schools?"

Decisions by the committee must depend on input from students, teachers and especially parents of students. Bliss added that she hoped to hear from every resident about their concerns regarding the school system.

Robert Beggan and Deborah Eaton are campaigning for a five-year position on the Recreation Commission. Beggan cited his extensive volunteer work with the recreation program the past seven years, and his commitment to continue those efforts. Eaton said she would like to see the department offer more programs and services for working parents, who comprise a large portion of the current population. She said should would also like to see more interesting and challenging programs initiated for the young adolescents.

Elizabeth Eaton, Agnes McCann and David Wadsworth are running for three, three-year terms on the Board of Trustees of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. Incumbents Eaton and McCann stressed the need to continue the progress being made to computerize services at the library. Candidate Wadsworth also emphasized the importance of bringing computerization to the library so that many more materials will be available to residents. He hopes to provide a link which will ensure the goal of the trustees to improve services and modernize the operation of the library.

The two candidates for the one other vacancy on that board, Michele Buckley and Mary Deveney, could not attend because of illness.

Planning Board member John O'Toole is seeking re-election of a five-year term on that board. Noting that like most others he is unopposed, O'Toole added, "people aren't exactly stampeding to this position." He said he has attempted to maintain the image of Cohasset through his efforts as a planning board member. When asked what he thought about a master plan for the town, O'Toole said previous plans had never been implemented, and the cost of such a project would be prohibitive now.

Water Commissioner Lot Bates was the final candidate to speak at the forum. He is running unopposed for a three-year term. Explaining the commission's management duties of the Water Department, he added that the commission is supporting a ban on all new construction in the town's watershed district. This move must be approved, he added, in order to save the town's ground water supply.

A brief discussion followed the candidates' presentation regarding the Government Structure Committee's recommendation to lower the Town Meeting quorum to 100, and an explanation was provided of the town's plans to initiate a construction moratorium in the watershed.

The following candidates are running for office but did not appear at the League Town Affairs Night: Michael Patrolia, three-year, Assessor; Michele Buckley and Mary Deveney, one, three-year term for the Trustees of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library; John Burns, Board of Health, three-year term; Cohasset Housing Authority, Marguerite Libby, a five-year term, and Kathleen Conte, one four-year term.

Color Analysis Workshop

The Cohasset Recreation Department will present small group (six people) Color Analysis Workshops presented by Kathy Chiasson, professionally trained color analysist. Each workshop will be about three hours long, include both group and individual analysis and presentations.

The fee for this specialized workshop will be $25 per person and both morning and evening time will be available.

Color plays a crucial part in overall appearance of a person. Complimentary colors affect your appearance in terms of making you look healthy, attractive, vital and generally fantastic, but the "right" colors and combinations of colors also project a positive image of authority, competence, openness and confidence. Conversely, wearing the "wrong" or uncomplimentary colors may have a very negative effect, making you appear drab and tired, reticent, even ill, and certainly destroying the overall image you wish to project.

Based on the color triad of your eyes, hair and skin, and using large fabric drapes and "testers," she will determine which colors and tones of those colors are right for you. You will emerge with your own distinct harmony of colors designated as winter, summer, spring or autumn palette, chosen because that group of colors does the most to enhance your individual appearance.

During the personal coloring consultation, further discussion and demonstration of "corporate dressing" and wardrobe coordination will take place for both men and women clients. Make-up advice and demonstration will be done for women, also.

During the group presentation, Kathy will talk about personal coloring in general, will explain characteristics of each of the four seasonal palettes, and will include tips on wardrobe planning, mix and match buying, proper accessories, and image dressing. She will also choose a person from the audience to receive a complimentary "coloring" during the presentation.

The color experience is an asset which will enable you to look fantastic all the time, and will increase your poise, confidence, and sense of well being. Besides that - it's fun!

For further details and registration for this unique workshop, please call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 383-6791.

Modeling Self-Awareness

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations for a Modeling and Self-Awareness program for girls, ages 10 - 18. The fee will be $17 per person.

Ages 10 - 13 will meet on Thursday afternoons, Town Hall Auditorium, from 3:30 to 5 p.m., ages 14 - 18 will meet on Wednesday afternoons, from 3 to 4:30 p.m. Classes will begin on Wednesday and Thursday, April 24 and 25.

Cohasset softball attracting more than flies

The boys of summer is a worn, tired and outdated phrase.

Just ask the girls who have practiced and toiled on the same playground lots. They have sweated every ounce as much, and have regaled in the competition.

Now, the secret is out. Softball, the sissy sport played only by fair young girls, is accepted as by the other gender.

So the boys of summer are now treading onto female-dominated territory. Equal opportunity for all.

But trouble starts when a boy wants to play centerfield for the girls' league, a league that includes no other male players.

This is a situation not unfamiliar to Cohasset High School sports. It is an occurrence that is deemed possible each year, yet is dreaded nonetheless. This week, three high school boys are concluding tryout sessions for the girls' softball team.

It's not a silly goal, as they view it. There are no big-time bets going, or plans to drop out with a snicker if they should make the squad.

This year, it's simply a case of three young boys attempting to play a game they really enjoy.

Athletic Director Clark Chatterton is sympathetic to their plight. And he foresees the day, perhaps this season, when Cohasset will have one or more males on the softball team.

"That's fine," he said last week. "But once you have one or more boys on your team, it's very likely the other teams won't play you and you have to forfeit the games."

Chatterton explained that according to Title Nine, equal opportunity must be provided for males and females in all sports programs. Since that controversial law was enacted, there have been girls playing on high school varsity football teams, hockey and basketball squads. It seems the boys have traditionally been serviced first in the physical education department. There has never been a big demand or need for males to try out for girls basketball or field hockey.

But softball for men has developed into a popular summertime activity and has gained wide acceptance. It is only natural that young male teens would like to start playing the game a bit earlier, in their high school years.

But, as Chatterton noted, when a team has one or more male members, it's difficult to find competition. The competing teams feel the males provide the challenging squad with an unequal advantage in strength, throwing, running and hitting.

For example, he recalled, in 1980, boys actually became a part of the high school's girls softball team. Although various methods of reducing the male advantage were developed, such as extending the length the male pitcher must stand from home plate, none were sanctioned by the league, or the state.

"The state Department of Education talked to all the superintendents in the league. And their conclusion was to treat the boys the same as the girls. The boys were allowed to be on a same sports team as the girls. The trouble was, two schools voted not to play us," Chatterton added.

Another school in the league last year experienced the same problem. Although Chatterton said it would be better to form a separate boys league, there is no money in our school budget, nor in the area towns, to support that proposal.

If the day arrives that more boys than girls make the squad, then the sport will follow a boys' rather than a girls' softball schedule, and will only play male-dominated league teams.

Liam Stanford never intended to cause any waves by trying out for the warm weather sport. Stated simply, "I like softball better than baseball," he said this week.

The 16 year-old sophomore said his talents lie more in the softball rather than the baseball field. That fact that his sister (possible teammate, centerfield Tara Stanford) taunts him about liking at least four girls on the team, does not sway him from his argument.

"Shawn Nagle and I tried out for the baseball team last year, and didn't make it. But last spring and summer, I played a lot of softball with my family, and really got to like it," he said. "I decided that I could do it well, and I thought I'd try out."

The varsity football and wrestling athlete is truthful about why he likes softball better than the traditional sport. "I'm not that good at baseball. I guess I like softball because I can hit better. . . the ball is bigger. And, I guess it's true that I would like to play on the same team as the girls," he confessed.

Liam said he knows most of the girls trying out for the team, and gets along with all of them.

In an effort to convince Coach Bill Fallon of his seriousness, Liam along with Shawn and Greg Igo have made a vow to Coach Bill Fallon. Should they make the team, they have promised not to play in games against an opponent who has challenged the match because of the male players. Rather than allowing Cohasset's forfeiture, the boys will bow out of the game.

Coach Fallon will be making his final team cuts this week. As it stands now, the boys are no shoo-in to make the team. Fallon truly believes that girls are as good or better athletes than boys, particularly in a sport such as softball.

"Boys are physically stronger, but whether they are better athletes is a question," he said last week. "No boys have made the softball team since I've been here, and several have tried out. Some of the boys have low-skill level, and poor hand-eye coordination."

As it looks now, the team will have seven return starters. There's not a lot of room to accomodate all team candidates.

Janet DiGirolomo will be the starting shortstop, a South Shore League All-Star last year along with catcher Carla Lucas.. Lisa Shumaker will be at first base, along with Jill Nedrow at second. Third base is a toss-up between Debbie Hartley and Maureen O'Leary. Anne O'Leary will be at left, Tara Stanford in center and and either Katie Anderson or Marge Murphy in rightfield.

South Shore housing crunch . . . created by government

Massachusetts has today what is probably the tightest housing market outside Manhattan in the country. Prices are rising faster than realtors can cut new advertisements. . .about 25 percent per year. Sellers are finding buyers glad to pay more than the asking price. For those who already own, who bought houses when prices and interest rates were low, this is the best of times.

But middle class folks who raised their children in homes bought a quarter of a century ago know that if they were starting out today there is no way they could afford to buy the same home. Their children despair of ever owning a home in the town they grew up in. Yet when those children look to the city of Boston they find they can barely afford to rent let alone buy.

But difficult as it now is for middle class kids starting out in life, things are much worse as you go down the social ladder. Working class families are being forced out of rapidly "gentrified" neighborhoods in Boston. The poor have to double up — two families sharing one apartment — in order to pay today's rents. The very poor, who used to find modest but adequate shelter in rooming houses, now find themselves out on the street.

What has gone wrong? What is to be done? At the core of the American dream has been hope for the middle class, and at the core of that hope has been home ownership. If the middle class gets forced back into working class neighborhoods, what is to be the attitude of minorities and others still at the threshold of the American dream? And what is to become of the South Shore? Are our heretofore well-off but never inaccessible towns to become enclaves for the moderately very rich?

The answer, it seems to me, can be found in the fact that other booming metropolitan areas are not experiencing an extreme housing shortage and its accompanying speculatively induced rapid inflation in housing prices. Greater Washington, Baltimore and Philadelphia are all experiencing boom times accompanied by boom times in both house and apartment construction. Only Boston has an economic boom accompanied only by a housing construction bust.

Why so little housing construction in Greater Boston as compared with most other prosperous metropolitan areas? Primarily (in my view) because government has made it unprofitable and therefore impossible to build middle income housing on a scale that would relieve our shortage — and therefore keep future housing costs down. What we really have is a housing shortage artificially manufactured by government — not at all unlike the artificial oil shortage that caused us so much grief between 1973 and 1983.

The government action that caused the shortage came in many forms and at all economic levels. Restrictive zoning — not to condemn it — has its role in creating the high prices of a tight market. At the other end of the economic spectrum, the do-gooders harassed and regulated the rooming house owner and the small city landlord until a great many went out of business.

Moreover, housing codes zealous to absurdity have raised the cost of building and maintaining housing. For example, the venerable three-flatter, where so many immigrant families started out, was killed in Boston in 1927 by a code revision some reformer thought was in the public interest. Today Massachusetts law prohibits the home owner from doing anything to his most cherished investment but papering and painting unless he has a "building permit." In historic districts, such as Cohasset's he can't even do that. Housing codes are so strict that all of us who own houses are consigned to living as outlaws by mere dint of ownership. Did you know a hairline crack in a pain of glass is a legal violation. Indeed. . .fellow outlaws. . .it is!

In the early 1970s property owners were visited with a new set of regulations including the state's lead paint law — supposedly designed to protect children from lead poisoning. Now, we all grew up in lead-painted houes without getting poisoned. For a child to be poisoned by lead paint requires two factors: peeling paint and habitual child neglect. If loose paint is removed or if the child is supervised, the child will not be poisoned. It takes both factors.

In 47 states, therefore, owners are required to paint all surfaces with two coats of unleaded paint. But in Massachusetts we are required to remove our lead paint up to four feet inside and out with a dry blade (not chemicals), thereby ruining all woodwork. Many banks won't grant a mortgage until the seller, at his own cost, has thus spoiled the house he desires to sell.

The particulars to government overregulation go on and on. The homeowner pays in nuisance, cost, and loss of personal freedom. But where government regulation has its greatest effect, where it really hurts, is on the developer. No developer today but a lunatic will touch middle-income housing in Massachusetts, and no developer — lunatics included — will touch rental housing. The result is that major Boston money — your savings and mine invested in Boston banks and other institutions — gets used to solve the housing crunch in Phoenix, Arizona — but never in Greater Boston. That, not the baby boom or anything else, is what has driven home values and rents through the stratosphere.

Supply ordinarily follows demand, and when it does not, as it does not for housing in Massachusetts, government is usually to blame. What is really needed is for government to stand down, to get out of the way and out of the market place. Let the homeowner reshingle his roof without taxing him or harassing him. More important, let the housing industry know that it is welcome in Massachusetts once again.

We have done exactly that with other industries over the last ten years with excellent results. We don't let the high tech industry do whatever it wants wherever it wants, nor should we. But we let them know they are welcome here, and we don't tell them what to do and how to do it. But the housing industry has, through misguided government action, been driven out-of-state.

That's what needs to change, or rich and poor we will continue to pay dearly for our error.

FROM THE KITCHEN

by JOAN PINKHAM

In the hands of a skillful cook, fresh or dried herbs add zest to otherwise mundane dishes. They can turn potluck into potpourri. Indeed, flavoring with herbs is an art anyone can learn and the easiest way is by experimenting and tasting. That's how Patti Hainer began to develop what started as a hobby into a burgeoning business. Now her herbal wreaths, dried herbs delightfully packaged for gifts and other novel arrangements can be found on sale at Jan Litchfield's Copper Corner Exhange. This little shop is tucked away in the village in Norwell and once you discover it, you'll want to browse among its offerings. Patti has developed this recipe from one of Julia Child's. Playing around with it, she suggests using parsley, chives or dill for an entirely different flavor in her

TARRAGON BUTTER

1 T dried tarragon, crushed
1 T lemon juice
1/2 c. butter, softened

Soak tarragon in lemon juice for 30 min. before gradually beating into softened butter. Pack into container to serve with crackers or bread. Also good on plain rice, potatoes, vegetables, barbecued meat, or fish.

* * *

An otherwise ghastly one-pot meal can be made into a tasty dish by the addition of an herb or two. And a simple, thrifty meatloaf can be implemented by a good side dish such as Ceil Dyer's

ZUCCHINI PARMESAN

1/4 c. cooking oil
8 medium zucchini, thinly sliced
2/3 c. coarsely chopped onion
2 T chopped parsley
1 large clove garlic, crushed or minced
1 T salt
1/4 tsp. each pepper, oregano, rosemary
4 c. peeled, chopped tomatoes
1/2 c. grated Parmesan cheese

Heat oil in large skillet. Add all ingredients except tomatoes and saute mixture over medium heat, stirring often about 20 min. Toss in tomatoes and continue to saute until tomatoes are thoroughly heated, about 5 min. Turn mixture into a serving dish. Sprinkle with Parmesan. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

* * *

To begin with, use only a tiny amount of herbs. Seasonings should complement the food, not overwhelm it. Until you become adept at recognizing the delicate herbal differences, you might want to focus on one at a time. Some of the herbs you'll want to have on hand are:

Basil--Italian tomato dishes, cheese souffles, vegetables.

Bay leaves--pates, soups, stews, pot roasts.

Chives--egg dishes, green and seafood salads, fish.

Dill--salads, cabbage, dips, breads.

Oregano--pizza, tomato sauces, chicken, mushrooms, eggplant.

Sage--stuffings, cheese dips and biscuits, beef stews.

Tarragon--Vinaigrette dressing, sauteed veal, poached salmon.

Thyme--cheese sauce, meatloaf, stews, stuffings, clam chowder.

You won't find any herbs in this hearty, old-fashioned dessert. It's a recipe served in Bob Ewart's family for several generations. Doris slipped in a copy of the recipe when she wrote to Bon Appetit, protesting cancellation of her favorite feature, "Cooks' Exchange." Now, in the March issue of the magazine, people in all parts of the country can share this old Yankee recipe which had its beginnings here on the South Shore.

DOUBLE BOILER BREAD PUDDING

Butter bottom of pan to be used as top of double boiler
1/2 c. firmly packed brown sugar--place over bottom of pan
4 slices buttered, cubed, crustless white bread
1/2 c. raisins
2 eggs
2 c. half and half cream
1 tsp. vanilla
Pinch of salt

Alternate layers of bread and raisins in pan. Beat eggs, cream, vanilla and salt. Pour over bread and raisins. Cover pan and place over boiling water in bottom of pan. Cook 1 1/2 hours until set. Remove and let cool for 10 min., loosening with knife, and inverting on serving plate. Serves four.

PATCHES by Lois MARTIN

Gone but not forgotten, that healing touch

She'd had this cold, nothing more than the need to apologize for sneezing, getting a 'bless you,' and blowing her nose a lot.

She'd joked about the affliction as being her ploy for attention. That was fine until late Friday when she was seized by chills that 'nine' on the electric blanket couldn't help, and a temperature that was zooming.

She called her doctor. It was late. He wasn't in. She was asked what the problem was and told the nurse she feared pneumonia and needed medicine or something.

Call back after 8:30 in the morning, the nurse said. No, she took no appointments for then because if she did the morning would be filled and people who needed to see the doctor wouldn't be able to if they didn't have the appointment.

Some of that logic escaped the sick person. But the matter was settled. No doctor. She'd wait, take her chances in the morning if she could get herself to get out of bed.

A friend, who surely would curse herself later, dropped by, hassled the afflicted out of her bathrobe into clothing for the emergency room.

Once there the truth became apparent. Many people were spending their Friday evening at the hospital. They sat in those plastic blue chairs, arms folded, crutches propped, babies teetering between outright howling and dozing. There were expressions of alarm, of pain, of resignation.

The afflicted one signed in. She was told she'd be sent to ambulatory because she could walk and because she could be taken care of sooner. Just follow the yellow line on the floor. They've trained whole herds that way, you know.

There were three people in ambulatory. The woman at the door, the nurse around the corner and a doctor, whose prime couldn't be expected to be in '85. Experience counts, she thought.

She sat as signaled by the woman at the door. In front of the woman was her new-fangled machine, a computer. It had the worker's full attention. She, by rote, quizzed the patient, who spilled out the required numbers and facts as questioned. The worker never moved her eyes form her machine. She was entranced by it, in tune with it, almost part of it in its raison d'etre of information gathering.

The fevered patient knew she was being critical, childlike if not childish. She didn't like dealing with a machine. She wanted a human being to look her in the eye if questions needed to be asked. She wanted to communicate, to see response, to feel it. The machines, she thought, should be delayed until they have incorporated eye contact. Human, she missed the human and she remembered the days when a receptionist could almost heal her with caring and concern before she even got into the doctor's office. She wanted to go to the human part. She knew it was in the building somewhere.

She was escorted to the cubicle examining room and issued her johnny. She was used to being cold by then. She put the johnny on backward, tying only the top tie. The doctor came in, examined her breathing, her ears, her throat. She asked him a question. He couldn't hear but she hadn't heard, smelled or tasted for a while either. The two hollered at one another as necessary.

She was forwarded to the x-ray, her johnny dribbling over her slacks. She didn't care.

In a separate waiting room, she joined the somnambulistic gathering until finally her name was called. She responded and was told she sounded 'bored.' She told the x-ray person that word didn't quite cut it. The x-rayist told the patient they were terribly busy. That needless explanation was met with muttering as the afflicted stretched to allow the requested photo of her body.

As is often the case with that person, her sense of humor, rather than failing, became brittle. She felt rotten, looked it, and her obstreperous urge was rising with her temperature.

Back for the reading she found a genial doctor who was willing to chat while waiting. A mother with one baby asleep on her shoulder, tugged another whose mitten dragged on the floor. They had brought a grandmother to the emergency care.

In leaving, the patient was jubilant, a survivor, an escapee of a place that was too crowded to provide the basic ingredient that is vital to recovery, peace and ease of contact that implies caring. It's nobody's fault that the rooms are filled with sick people, that the personnel feels stampeded, that the hospital emergency room exhibits the same behavior that overcrowding has caused on highways and in parking lots. A scramble for survival. No time to encounter eye to eye.

That is a shame. In any business we conduct in this world we know people have the right to expect us to do it personally, with natural professionalism that never excludes the human touch.

That is apparently not easy. But, boy, is it vital. It is also healing.

When houses are not for the living. . .

Nearly Native

By Darrell Berger

Cable television offers salvation in three forms: fundamentalist Christianity, rock music and real estate.

While the first two are well-established, the third comes to us through the electronic cracks in the cable guide, on strange networks specializing in "Lassie" reruns, hints on fly casting and extended weather reports.

I never plan on watching someone tell me how I can, even ought to, make millions with no money down, but they lure me in as I flip by.

A rotund, curly-headed fellow who looks like the Mets' Rusty Staub writes feverishly on a projector while attentive, average Americans take notes.

A young oriental chap also gives advice, while riding a convertible through Beverly Hills, giving the impression he's sold every house twice.

And finally I noticed a Tony Perkins type with a voice like he'd been sucking helium. His overt message was how to take advantage of tax loopholes, but the subliminal one was, "Hey, if a doofus like me can make bug bucks why not you?" Why, indeed.

All have toll-free numbers where you can purchase their special knowledge. If you work at it, maybe it delivers. Who knows, maybe if you give money to the electronic preachers you're closer to God, or if you vote for your favorites on MTV you're closer to Eddie Van Halen.

But it seems to me that the real estate evangelists, like the soul savers and rock promoters, are actually appealing to fear.

Televised Christianity is but a small slice of American religious life. MTV is but a glimmer of the music world. No matter how entertaining, at bottom they are merely advertisements for a cartel of the rich and ambitious to become more so.

While this might be part of the American way, it purveys erstaz solutions to people's real need for religious authenticity and the younger generation's search for values and a comprehensible culture.

The real estate videos pander to financial insecurity and fear of the future. When public utilities, bonds, even gold are risky, why not look to a commodity with a fixed supply? And if the tax system favors speculation in real estate, why not take advantage for a change?

Unfortunately, the TV real estate mavens seem no more in touch with reality than weeping evangelists or bizarrely attired pop stars. Any minister or social worker on the South Shore will place housing among the most intractible problems facing us.

How can people afford their homes, or stay in them when they retire? How can their children starting out stay nearby? Suppose you want to rent? Suppose you're being evicted next month, or a fancy condo or other multiple dwelling is being erected between you and the open space you cherish? Owning a home is part of the American dream. Just as realizing it becomes more distant for the majority here come the mountebanks promising not just one home, but dozens? It is as false as the claims of the phone-in salvationists, a boon for a few, a joke on the many.

There's an old shaggy dog story about a food broker who buys a carload of tuna for four cents a can. A great buy. He sells them to a wholesaler for twelve cents who sells them again for thirty and so on, until a restaurant owner serves them to his customers, who all promptly get sick. He complains to the last seller who says, "You don't understand. They aren't for eating, they're for buying and selling."

And so it is with the supposed real estate boom and the tax system which allows for get-rich quick scams. The houses aren't for living in, they're for buying and selling. And the rest of us get sick.

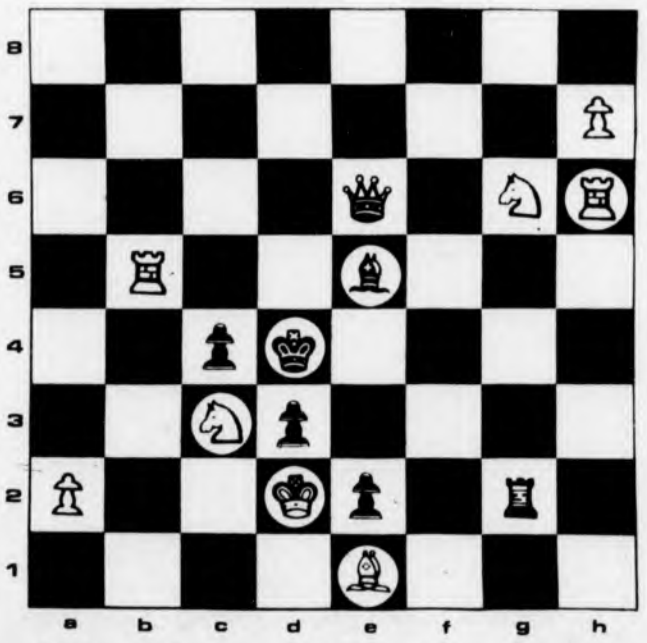
Some justice

Congratulations to those who mailed in the mate in four last week. The strange thing is, when I composed the problem, (Rooks Revenge), I used the discovered check Ng3 to give mate, yet seemed to overlook NG5++. At any rate, the rook surely took his revenge.



Today s quiz can go either way depending or whose move it is. This was done deliberately because of the ease of both solutions. To publish this quiz with only one solution for black or white would be half baked. So, good luck and don't spend too much time on the 'The Pantomime!'

Coming event: March 30-31, Fourth Boston College Open Tournament 5-ss, 50/2, Lyons Hall Cafeteria, Boston College Campus, Chestnut Hill. Entries: Edward Feldman, Walsh Hall 310, Boston College, Chestnut Hill, MA 02167 (617) 964-1416.

Mail comments and questions to: Mariner Newspapers, Att.: Chris Bernstein, P.O. Box 682, Marshfield, MA 02050.

Cohasset Worship . . .

First Parish

Easter Lilies- It has been our custom in the past to display Easter Lilies on the chancel table on Easter Sunday morning. If you would be interested in donating a plant for our Easter Service of Worship, please call the church office at 383-1100 as soon as possible.

Religious education news- Grades 4-6 practice, practice! We continue to have rehearsals on Wednesdays, and an additional practice will take place on Saturday afternoon, March 30 from 3 to 4:30 p.m. Lots of work is still needed, so don't miss rehearsals.

All preschoolers are invited to the first annual Easter egg hunt on April 7. This activity is being organized by the seventh graders and promises to be a treat! Watch future news for time and place.

Income tax service- sponsored by the AARP will be available free of charge for senior citizens of Cohasset at the Unitarian Parish House, Tuesdays and Thursdays. Please call Betty Van Slyck at 383-1561 or Mildred Harrington at 383-0216 for an appointment.

St. Stephen's Church

Palm Sunday- March 31, begins with the blessing of palms.

Passiontide Concert- Our marvelous choir has spent this winter preparing a special Passiontide Musical Offering which will be presented Palm Sunday afternoon at 4 p.m. Works to be performed include Bach's Cantata No. 4, "Christ Lay in the Bonds of Death," and Faure's "Requiem." These works will be performed with chamber orchestra and soloists. Other works include Ravel's "Pavane for a Dead Princess," for cello and harp, as well as the "Allegro" from Louis Vierne's "Second Oran Symphony".

Please mark your calendars now and invite your friends. This is something no one should miss.

Daily Prayer- during Holy Week will be held Monday through Friday, April 1-5. Morning prayer will be said in the chanpel at 6:15 p.m. The short will open our awareness to God's continual presence and set a positive tone for the whole day. All are welcome.

Maundy Thursday - The St. Stephen's choir will be with us for the Manudy Thursday service at 7 p.m. April 4. This service commemorates the institution of the Eucharist by Jesus at the Last Supper.

The Eucharist will be followed by a candlelight Agape meal. At the conclusion of the Agape meal, the stripping of the altar is observed in the church. As the hangings and ornaments are removed in preparation for Good Friday, psalm 22 is recited with the antiphon, "They divide my garments among them; they cast lots for my clothing."

Three hour Good Friday service- The service for Good Friday will begin at noon on April 5. On the hour, the Passion from Matthew, Luke and John will be read responsively. At approximately 2:30 p.m., communion will be given from the sacrament reserved from Maundy Thursday.

Easter Renewal- Easter services will be held at 8 a.m. and 10 a.m. Sunday, April 7. Easter is a great day for baptism in the church. We will renew our own baptismal covenant at both Easter services.

Quincy Crisis Center- The Outreach Committee thanks all contributors to the St. Stephen's Pantry. Between 70-90 persons were fed on Saturday, March 16, through our meal service provided to the Quincy Crisis Center. Your canned food offerings could not be donated to a more worthy cause. Our priority needs are: tuna, large cans; cream of mushroom soup; noodles; large juices; jello; and cooking oil. Remember, all other canned good are also welcome.

Holy Week observance

St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, 16 Highland Ave., will begin Holy Week, the week which leads up to Easter with the blessing and administration of palms on Palm Sunday, March 31, at both the 8 and 10 a.m. services. That afternoon at 4 p.m. a Passiontide musical offering will be performed by the choir of St. Stephen's which will include Bach's "Christ Lag in Todesbanden" and Faure's "Requiem."

Morning Prayer will be held each day of Holy Week at 6:15 a.m. Wednesday in Holy Week, April 3, will be marked by a Eucharist at 9:30 a.m. Maundy Thursday, the day on which the church commemorates the Last Supper, there will be a Eucharist at 7 p.m. with offerings of canned goods to be distributed to the hungry, followed by an Agape meal and concluded with a stripping of the altar in preparation for Good Friday. Good Friday will be observed by a three-hour service beginning at noon.

Easter Day, April 7, will be celebrated with a renewal of baptismal vows and Eucharist at 8 and 10 a.m.

All are invited to share this central and important time of the Christian year at St. Stephen's Church in Cohasset. For more information regarding Holy Week and Easter services, you may call the Rev. E. Clifford Cutler at 383-1083.

Juniors visit state house

Thirty-four Cohasset juniors will be visiting the state house in Boston over the next three months as the guests of Mary Jeanette Murray, the representative from the Third Plymouth District.

Both Representative Murray and her aide, Nancy O'Toole of Cohasset will take the Cohasset students on a guided tour of the house chamber and they will watch state government at work. The tour is also co-sponsored by Edward Sheehan, the chairman of the Cohasset High School Social Studies Department.

According to Rep. Murray, the tour is to "prepare social studies students to better understand how bills are initiated and made into laws." She also added that it is "to encourage these young people who will one day take over the reigns of government in the Commonwealth.

Students who will make the tour include: John Froio, Brian Leary, Bob Leonard, Dave Caffrey, Chad Blain, Beth Perry, Heather Davenport, Glen Hochkeppel, Mike Greiner, Peter Cooke, Ginny Nussdorfer, Jacqui Fahey, Kelly Freeman, Anne Taylor, Todd Trautwein, Bob Shulty, Mark Delaney, John Reilly, Geoff Christensen, Kevin Dunn, Jim Dormer, Bob Corkery, Cynthia Conklin, Mark Crough, Jamie Cameron, Dan Rossi, Charles Dole, Carolyn O'Brien, Cathy Gorman, Linda O'Loughlin, Melanie Walsh, Kristen Rauhauser, Sue McMahon and Terri Lloyd.

Mr. Sheehan praised the program, saying, "This is a valuable experience for these young people. Both Rep. Murray and Mrs. O'Toole are to be thanked for their concern for our future voters."

Plans for Common Country Fair

The Fourth Annual Cohasset Common Country Fair, featuring a wide range of Arts and Crafts, Antiques and Collectables will be held on the Cohasset Common Saturday, May 18, from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m.

Along with the displays and sales themselves, craft demonstrations by local artists are being planned. Cohasset community organizations will also have displays on their activities. Boy Scout Troop 28 will sponsor a camping and canoeing exhibit and the Explorer Post 28, a chartered search and rescue/high adventure unit will be on hand.

The fair is sponsored by the Friends of Troop 28 for the benefit of their Troop Activities and summer camp program.

SAAB HAS MORE CARGO SPACE THAN BMW, AUDI, AND VOLVO. COMBINED.

If you add the maximum cargo space of the Audi 5000, the Volvo GLT Turbo and the BMW 733i, you get a total of 53.3 cubic feet.

Yet one Saab 3-door gives you 56.5 cubic feet of maximum cargo space.

As you can imagine, the Saab is a lot more useful than any of the others when you pack up the summer house, provision your boat or make an impulsive buy at a tag sale.

Only the Saab gives you this flexibility because only the Saab has a rear seat that folds down.

Others may claim that as an unfair advantage. But when you test drive a Saab, you'll agree it simply makes good sense. SAAB The most intelligent car ever built.

Should boys be included on girls' team?

The pitching staff looks like it will be Kerry O'Brien and Karlan Isele.

As Fallon explained, Janet provides strong support in shortstop, and he has labeled Carla the best catcher in the league. Coming fresh from state tournament action with his girls basketball team, Fallon predicts similar success for this team.

The 20 game schedule will begin April 2 against Holbrook and concludes May 23, with or without the boys.

Fallon is cautious about the possibility of more boys trying out for and making the team this year and in the future. "Hanover had some boys on their team last year, and the league teams voted not to play against them."

Chatterton agrees with that philosophy. "I saw a game where a boy slammed the ball right over the centerfield fence. If that girl there had ever tried to catch it, she would have been killed," he said.

As for the Cohasset boys, they're trying hard just to make the team. "I'm really working at it," Liam said. "If I don't make it, I'll be bummed. It looks like it will be a strong team. I hope I'm good enough to make it."

Free computer course

A free course in Computer Numerical Control is being offered at South Shore Tech, 476 Webster Street, Hanover.

Students will become proficient in a technical career area which needs skilled CNC machine operators. A recent meeting of South Shore Industrial shop owners and supervisors hailed the program as a critically important step in supplying badly needed trained CNC machine operators. To back up their enthusiasm for the program, these businessmen have agreed to interview program graduates with a view toward hiring them.

Program Coordinator, Paul Babcock, announced that students will be trained in the South Shore Tech machine shop. The program will accomodate up to thirty trainees and run for twenty-eight weeks, Monday thru Friday from 3-7 p.m.

Program eligibility requirements and services available, as well as application may be received by contacting the program coordinator, Paul Babcock, at South Shore Technical High School, 878-8822.

Lots of changes face Town Meeting voters

By Jane Lane

What started out as a lengthy Town Meeting warrant, is becoming more brief every day. As Saturday approaches, it is likely much of the original warrant will be further reduced.

Currently, the entire Special Town Meeting, which included seven articles, has been postponed. Because the financial data is incomplete on some of these matters, the seven articles dealing with unpaid bills will be reviewed at a later date.

There are possibilities that more of the 61 articles will be withdrawn, likely upon the floor of Town Meeting.

After much discussion and dissension from other town officials, the Board of Assessors has decided to withdraw its request for a fulltime Town Appraiser. That $30,000 personnel expenditure would have provided fulltime direction for the town's revaluation next year. But because the time constraints would be so prohibitive between the hiring of an appraiser, and the January, 1986 revaluation date, the board decided it would be best to postpone the request.

The advisory committee had not supported the original request, stating that other alternatives should be explored to the make assessor's office more efficient.

The articles submitted by the planning board, requesting several changes to the current zoning

Town Moderator William Weeks is issuing a plea for all residents to attend this Saturday's Town Meeting. Contrary to original plans, the meeting will begin at 1 p.m. and will continue in order to conduct the warrant business through the afternoon.

The idea is for as much town business to be completed as possible that day. The meeting, which includes about 60 articles, will likely resume the following Monday.

The meeting needs a 200 voter quorum to begin. It will be held at the Cohasset High School auditorium at 1 p.m. Saturday, April 6.

Cohasset Common was transformed into a sea of human shapes as the ninth annual Road Race By the Sea begins. Almost 1000 runners participated in this favorite 10K race.

Chamber proposes master plan citizens' group

The zoning bylaw changes proposed by the planning board have met stiff opposition from local businessmen. Challenging those changes, the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce has created a proposal of its own.

The Chamber members are planning to introduce at Town Meeting a proclamation outlining their objections to the proposed zoning changes. In addition, they are calling upon selectmen to appoint a Master Plan Advisory group within a month.

That group, which would include about seven to nine members, would formulate the scope and specifications for the preparation of a master plan for the town. This citizens' advisory committee will formulate goals for the implementation of a master plan, and will have those objectives outlined for selectmen "no later than the next special or annual Town Meeting."

The resolution, to be presented this week on the floor of Town Meeting, follows on the heels of a presentation made to the Chamber last week. John Connery, a planning consultant from Winchester, attended a Chamber meeting and detailed the scope and results of what he termed, a "Growth Management Plan." Based on his discussions, the Chamber voted that night to support a policy of a master plan development.

Although the Chamber supports a conceptualized, predictable growth pattern for the town, the planning board remains unconvinced.

Planning Chairman Christine Bassett said Connery's cost estimates of between $15,000 and $16,000 are "idealistic," recalling that a master plan de-

Does town have executive secretary?

Selectmen have offered the position of Executive Secretary to the Cohasset Board of Selectmen to Michael Wood. Tuesday, the town officials called Wood, who is currently residing in Pennsylvania.

As of Wednesday morning, it looked less than optimistic that Wood would accept the position. He was scheduled to talk with selectmen later that day, at which time he would make a final decision.

The position has been vacant since Labor Day when Mark Lanza left the job. Although selectmen did have a candidate a few months ago, the final choice refused their offer at the last minute.

Since that time, the board has readvertised, and about 16 applicants submitted resumes for the position. From that total, five persons were interviewed. The final choice was originally between two men, but one withdrew his application. As of this week, selectmen added one more finalist and selected Wood from the pair.

Monday night selectmen intereviewed Christine McCay, an assistant to the Town Manager in

On Wednesday, April 10 and Thursday, April 11, there will be special absentee voting hours at the Town Clerk's office from 5:30 to 8:30 p.m. On Friday, April 13, the absentee ballots will be available from 8:30 a.m. to noon.

Town Accountant position

Monday night, Town Government Structure Committee member Ozzie Ingram voted that the Town Accountant's position remain in Civil Service, but that possibility is not very likely.

Selectmen said, "there is just no Civil Service exam available to give anyone if they wanted to take it. Mass. State auditors and accountants have put one together, but it has not been administered yet and they don't know when it will be.

Selectman Frank England said that one possibility would be to write up a contract that would guarantee applicants the position, otherwise, it would only be temporary and nobody would be interested.

The problem will be discussed with the Town Government Committee Tuesday night.

Planning changes

Chairman of the planning board, Christine Bassett, presented zoning bylaw changes to selectmen Monday night. The Chamber of Commerce and Advisory Committee were in conflict with several of the bylaws that were discussed.

Article 36 deals with the use of green strips for conservative and esthetic purposes, and there was argument over how much of an area should actually be used for that purpose.

Next, Chamber member Dan Leahy felt that with the combined restrictions of property use in Articles 36 and 39, the property rights of citizens will be threatened. Bassett stated that Article 39 will guard against the detrimental effects to the town of excess parking space. It will allow for the maximum use of what is actually needed and the demand will vary according to the occupant and the type of business.

These and other warrant articles will be challenged at the annual Town Meeting on Saturday, April 6.

Happy Easter!

Chief's contract

Selectmen announced Monday night that the police chief's contract which will cover a three-year period, beginning in March of 1986 has been approved.

Selectmen said that Police Chief Joseph Kealey agreed that the contract and salary were acceptable. Over a three-year period, the salary will average that of representative towns. This will represent a range over a three-year period as follows: $38,800.00 in 1986; $43,100.00 in 1987; and $47,500.00 in 1988.

Advisory board votes

The advisory committee voted Tuesday night to recommend the Town Accountant's position be exempted from Civil Service. Article 58, which was submitted by the Board of Selectmen, requests that the position be taken out of Civil Service. The job would then become contracted employment, similar to other town department heads.

The advisors do not agree that without the protection of Civil Service, the position will fall prey to local politics. They also feel that town officials should have some discretionary power over hiring and firing of its employees. Under the authority of Civil Service, an employee can not be fired unless he is determined incompetent to hold the position, or has done something illegal.

This article will not affect current Town Accountant William Signorelli.

Conway's offer

Real estate developer Jack Conway may be interested in an offer to purchase the Scituate Country Club land but the current owner and a prospective developer say they are committed to a signed purchase and sales agreement.

Current Country Club owner Donald Whittemore said a purchase and sales agreement with The Bonwood Company does not release him to accept another offer.

Whittemore said as of Tuesday he knew nothing of a written offer by the Conway company.

"I spoke to Jack in a restaurant about six to eight months ago. It's the only time I have seen him. I know nothing about this offer," he said.

Bonwood developer Ronald Bonvie said he has "an air tight purchase and sales agreement with a full deposit."

He has a preliminary plan approved by the planning board and intends to file definitive plans soon. "I have a positive feedback from the neighbors and I have no thought whatsoever of selling it."

"I do know that in this whole process several offers came along the way but they were not considered. They were relatively low," Bonvie said.

The Mansfield based company had obtained planning board approval for a different plan a year ago but neighbors filed a court appeal.

A new design, presented in late February, won unanimous approval and drew praise from former project opponents.

Once all town permits are approved, Bonwood retains full ownership of the property. In addition to a 36-unit condominium development, Bonwood plans to improve the clubhouse and golf course.

Richard Cahill, president of the Jack Conway Real Estate Co. said Conway feels the country club is a beautiful spot and it should be kept strictly as a country club.

Adults learn to deal with grief

By Charlotte Carney

There was a large group of interested, concerned people who gathered at the Cohasset High School to hear Dr. Sandra Fox of the Judge Baker Guidance Center of Boston, present her Good Grief program.

Good Grief was designed to aid teachers and parents in helping children cope with death and loss.

Because of the recent tragedies of the deaths of two Cohasset youths, Desiree Yess, and Seanna O'Leary, as well as that of three Duxbury teenagers, the overwhelming situation of dealing with such a tremendous loss prompted impassioned school officials to contact Dr. Fox.

The program, "the only one of its kind in the country," according to Dr. Fox, sensitizes the issues dealing with problems associated with loss and death.

Dr. Fox began by saying that "children as young as pre-schoolers should be made aware of the realities of death." She continued that the misconceptions children have about death and dying manifest themselves by "denying their anxieties" in older children and adults. "We must address children's fears and fantasies. We must say, 'tell me what you understand about death,' " she said, "and begin communication, and sharing of feelings, dealing honestly and candidly."

Most people have difficulty dealing with the complexities of such an arduous subject, especially children. "Children's grief behaviors differ from that of adults," Dr. Fox said. "It can be longer and more involved."

A wonderfully sensitive video puppet show made for the Good Grief program, which is also used at the Childrens' Museum in Boston, was presented. It depicted children trying to understand what death really is, and the related emotions that accompany death. The guilt; the "what if's," and the "if only's," and how significant these problems are when it comes to dealing with death. Children, as well as adults, become angry. It is difficult to make sense of death at any age. Sometimes it's more tolerable to look for blame. We seem to feel safer with a decisive reason, Dr. Fox noted.

A very real and potentially dangerous side effect in dealing with the grieving process, is suicide. Trying to join the person who died. We must make ourselves aware of the warning signs, and form good support systems. The question, "Why do bad things happen to good people?" often arouses unwarranted anxieties. Death is not descriminatory. The answer is not that simple.

"In order to deal with death and loss, we must first accept the reality of it and express our loss and pain," said Dr. Fox. "Grieving is a natural and healthy process, where we accept that our loved one no longer exists. We need to memorialize the death in some way," Dr. Fox said, "so that the grieving process can take its course."

Sometimes the victims in death are not the only ones that are gone. "Marriages are strained, and in many cases divorce occurs," Dr. Fox said. Relating our feelings and communication are essential at a time when getting in touch with our emotions are difficult. "Withdrawal and anger" complicate the already stressful situation further," Fox added.

Another serious matter is that of the survivors in an accident where a death, or serious injury, occurs. The anguish and despair are often incomprehensible. They may encounter self inflicted guilt, as well as resentment from peers. The "why wasn't it me" question, can be a life long anxiety trip. The process of recovery can only come through that "special support system" of loved ones and friends.

Fortunately, Michelle Stone of Cohasset experienced such a "support system," when classmates circulated a card to get signatures, expressing how much they wanted her back in school.

It is important to note that a real feeling of caring and emotion went into this meeting. Parents, teachers, concerned friends working together to find answers to help those in pain. A united effort of strength and compassion for all concerned.

Commuter rail fight

State Sen. William Golden will travel to Washington, DC April 18, to meet with federal lawmakers and officials in the Executive Branch to fight federal budget cuts which could eliminate funding for the return of commuter rail to the South Shore. Golden will be joining State Sen. Ned Kirby and State Reps. Mary Jeanette Murray, Frank Hynes, Emmet Hayes and Peter Forman as well as other members of the South Shore Legislative Caucus in lobbying Congress and the Reagan Administration to maintain present levels of funding for mass transportation.

Currently, commuter rail transportation is totally subsidized and does not require additional local subsidies from municipalities which it services. "For years," Golden stated, "the North Shore communities have been served by commuter rail without additional local assessments. It would be a cruel irony if federal funding was terminated at the time when the South Shore was finally able to secure restoration of rail service to our communities."

The Law and You

by Richard Price, Attorney-at-Law

GET THEE TO A LAWYER

The time to engage the services of an attorney depends on the particular situation. Using a lawyer for ordinary traffic violations is probably unnecessary unless your license is in jeopardy. However, you should definitely talk to a lawyer when charged with a crime or served with legal papers in a civil law suit. As a general rule, consider consulting a lawyer with regard to major life events. These may include serious accidents, death or changes in family status such as marriage, divorce or adoption. Substantial changes in one's financial status, the acquisition, sale or loss of valuable real or personal property, business transactions and criminal or civil lawsuits also dictate legal consultation. It is important, whenever possible, to visit the lawyer before the event.

Today the need for legal guidance has reached most everyone. From homeowner to renter to consumer to businessman, the complexities of today's living creates a more frequent demand for the prudent person to seek professional legal guidance. Should you have questions or seek merely to review your lifestyle and legal exposure the LAW OFFICES OF RICHARD PRICE, 760 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Rt. 3A, Cohasset, 383-9882 is available to discuss and advise you in such matters. I am available daily by appt.

Planners/Chamber clash on master plan

veloped for the town 20 years ago, cost double that amount.

She also doubted that a reasonable evaluation and recommendations could be formulated within the six month time frame suggested by the planning consultant.

"My reaction to his presentation is that a master plan is one possible tool the town can use in planning. I was just a little aghast at the time parameters of six months. I also think it is a little idealistic to think the community will come together at Town Meeting with a remarkable consensus to approve the plan's recommendations," she said this week.

Recalling the Allan Benjamin study of several years ago, Basset said no recommendations were ever adopted by the town. "A master plan is not a panacea, it is not a static entity, and is not a replacement for the formal review of the zoning bylaws which should be undertaken annually," Bassett added.

As Bassett explained, who along with the planning board members struggled long hours on the proposed zoning bylaw changes, the crucial issue to be considered at Town Meeting, "is that these changes can not wait."

She added, "these proposals are part of an ongoing planning process, before someone else makes the decisions for us. We can't sit back while some panacea for all our troubles is being developed." While a decision is being made whether to implement a master plan, she emphasized that planning can not "stop in the interim."

Connery, whose consultant firm has completed growth management plans for several South Shore towns, including Hingham and Braintree, said the $16,000 price tag would be escalate, depending on the amount of information and detail the town requested.

"A study which took us about six months to complete would cost about $15,000 or $16,000. But a one-year study would probably cost $6000 or $7000 more," Connery explained. He noted that a six-month study really demands "a lot of hustle and commitment" on the part of the town officials and private citizens involved in the plan.

It is a premise of all his consulting work, Connery stated, that an equal distribution of public and private representatives work together on the plan. "In order for the study to have any sort of credibility," he said, "it must be done together with the public sector. Their voice must be included. Such a study affects everyone's property, and we need effective public participation to gain some level of confidence."

Connery noted that the end result of his studies traditionally concludes with some sort of Town Meeting action, where everyone has the chance to vote on the implementation of the recommendations.

Essentially, the Connery growth management plans are divided into two parts. The first stage is the "contacts for planning," in which land use and marketing information is compiled. Current open space areas, redevelopment plans, traffic, employment, taxes, and town services are studied. Analysis of these services are reviewed and defined.

An acceptable alternative is then developed, quantitative facts based on these demographic studies. Although solid facts are an undeniable portion of the study's proposals, Connery said the sentiment of the townspeople is a factor that is considered heavily when formulating recommendations for future growth.

"We need reasons to back up all our arguments. And some of these arguments are going to be based on the specific regulatory, cultural or social factors of a specific community," he added.

Recalling some of the studies completed by his firm during the past four years Connery added, "there is a need in every community to accommodate growth while maintaining the quality and integrity of the town."

The local Chamber of Commerce is investigating the possibility of offering some amount of money to begin implementation of a master plan. The membership has stressed, however, that nothing will be accomplished without the full cooperation of private and public areas of the town.

The first step toward initiating the study, they decided this week, is for selectmen to appoint an advisory group to guide the proposed study. The committee would be comprised of private citizens representing the residential area; public interest groups, public officials, and representatives of the commercial community such as businessmen, realtors,developers or other persons with "substantial interest in the community."

The proclaimation, which was presented to selectmen and the advisory committee this week, stated "the proposed Bylaw changes if enacted would infringe on and in many cases deny the basic property rights of Cohasset citizens." Urging the defeat of the proposed changes, the Chamber noted "the Town of Cohasset is at a junction of planning for its future by 'choice or by chance' and has not previously adopted a comprehensive master plan which would coordinate the impacts of all of the existing and future Bylaws, regulations, directives, and initiatives of the various boards, commissions, committees, town departments, and individual citizen interests."

Charges filed by Scituate board

By Mike Berger

The health board has directed its agent to seek a criminal complaint against a Cohasset doctor for failure to report a communicable disease - hepatitis.

If found guilty, Dr. William Raskin, director of a medical clinic in Cushing Plaza, would be fined between $50 and $200.

To Health Agent Walter Welsh's knowledge, only one case of Type A hepitatis was diagnosed Feb. 27.

Walsh said Wednesday morning there is a remote chance, from a statistical point of view, the disease could be passed at this date. In addition, Walsh is concerned that other doctors may not be cooperating with disease reporting.

Last year Walsh sent letters to all area doctors, asking their cooperation in reporting communicable diseases to the Board of Health. Walsh confirmed one was sent to Dr. Raskin who, according to Walsh, told him he was unaware he had to tell the Board of Health. Dr. Raskin was unavailable for comment.

While taking this action, town officials from the town administrator to Walsh to Board of Health members praised Mill Wharf Restaurant owner Steve Warner as a responsible restaurateur business owner and human being.

The person diagnosed worked part-time at the Mill Wharf Restaurant. As soon as the employee told Warner, he immediately paid money to innoculate all of his employees as well as notifying the Board of Health.

Warner, said Walsh, owns the Ocean Manor Nursing Home and has a masters degree in Public Health. Town officials said Warner has cooperated in every way and has taken all precautionary efforts. They stress he is not responsible in any way.

Walsh said it is critical for all doctors to cooperate and report the communicable diseases to the community's Board of Health. Taking Dr. Raskin to court puts all doctors on notice the Scituate Board of Health is serious about this requirement.

Warner said the employee is "O.K." The employee has not worked at the restaurant from eight to ten weeks and is not due back for another four to six months.

Arrest made at 3A accident

A four-car collision Tuesday night resulted in the arrest of a Quincy man. Clayton Hewins, 31, of Lawrence Street in Quincy was arrested for driving under the influence, operating to endanger, speeding, and failure to keep right.

The accident, which occurred at the King Street intersection on Route 3A, involved three other cars. No one except Hewins, was injured. Police said his car flipped over onto its roof during the accident. Hewins was transported to South Shore Hospital and was later released.

According to Cohasset Police Officer Brian Noonan, Hewins was arraigned in Norfolk District Court Wednesday morning. He complained of pain and was transported from the courthouse to Quincy City Hospital.

The accident, which occurred at 9:20 p.m. Tuesday, also involved vehicles driven by Frank Meech, 27, of West Yarmouth, Sean Eagan, 26, of Captain Pierce Road in Scituate, and Nicholas Cotoulas, 64, of Nantasket Avenue in Hull.

Conservation hearing

The Conservation Committee met Tuesday evening to hear the request of Pauline and Robert Cowen of 88A Beach St. to construct a stone retaining wall to maintain, and stabilize an existing slope.

Paul Mirabito, of the Ross Engineering Co., represented the Cowen's in presenting the request.

The Conservation Committee headed by Merle Brown, directed their questions concerning the wall's construction to Mr. Mirabito.

Jeanne Gormley, of 44 Beach St. attended the meeting to express her concern that the "benchmarks" on the wall reflected the actual tide elevation.

SEYCHELLES BY THE SEASHORE

The Seychelles (pronounced say-shells) form an archipelago that spreads over 150,000 square miles. They are located four degrees south of the equator, in the middle of the Indian Ocean, 1,100 miles east of Mombasa, Kenya. This former British colony offers a haven of peace for travelers under a gloriously relentless sun. In the Seychelles, it is impossible to be far from the ocean. Almost every activity revolves around the sea. They range from fishing from a glass-bottom boat to sailing over the ocean in a para-sailor wind surfing. It may also include line fishing from the shore or sport fishing for barracuda, marlin and dog-toothed tuna. Colorful bursts of flowers, brilliant sunsets and nights of shooting stars are your reward.

Dear Fellow Cohasset Resident,

YOU MUST DECIDE...

At Town Meeting (April 6, 1985 at 1:00 p.m., and subsequent dates) you will be asked to decide on changes to our Zoning By Laws (Articles 32-42, 44-46). These collective changes will further restrict the freedom of Cohasset citizens:

- To expand their home.
- To add impervious surfaces (patios, decks, driveways, etc., etc., etc.)
- To install a fence.
- By rendering many lots unbuildable.
- By redefining many Cohasset homes as "NON-CONFORMING."

If passed, the results could be:

- Artificially increased assessed property tax values.
- Continued "BAND-AID" approach to our zoning issues.
- Restrictive property purchasing ability for our families.
- Further shrinkage of Cohasset's tax base.
- Increased tax abatement applications.
- Potential law suits.
- Elimination of diverse housing opportunity.
- Encouragement of property use which circumvents local zoning through State issued mandates.

We respectfully ask for your support to temporarily postpone these By-Law Amendments and promote the completion of a MASTER PLAN to chart responsible, predictable, quality growth and keep Cohasset the town we all love.

bylaw, have prompted much debate from the local The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce will be presenting a proclaimation to the Town Meeting, denouncing those proposed changes. A resolution will also be produced at the meeting, in which the Chamber will propose the initiation of a townwide master plan, and a citizens advisory committee to oversee the development of the plan.

The following is a condensed look at some of the articles that will be discussed at Town Meeting, beginning Saturday at 1 p.m. in the high school auditorium.

Article 19, seeks to amend the town bylaws so that the quorum necessary to begin Town Meeting will be reduced from 200 to 100. This is the recommendation, based on a study conducted by the Town Government Structure Committee. The reduced quorum regulation would bring us into line with towns of similar size. The lower quorum, the committee has suggested, will allow Town Meeting to begin more promptly and to continue without loss of a high quorum.

The advisory committee disagrees with this proposa. Chairman Jacqueline Dormitzer noted that with a 100-voter quorum, only 51 people are needed for a majority vote. An important issue which will effect the community for many years, should not be decided by 51 residents, she argued.

Another article which might ruffle a few feathers at Town Meeting is the proposal to fund a study to design improvemerts at Milliken Field and the upper high school field. Everyone agrees the recreational facilities, used primarily by the schools, are in deplorable condition. But the bottom line, once again, is cost.

The Capital Budget Committee, which prioritized a list of proposed capital project proposals, has put a low priority label on this one. The advisory committee concurs.

"This type of request might be compared to the town pool," Domritzer stated.. "The entire project from start to finish, might cost $200,000 to $300,000 when we have other, more urgent needs such as the Town Hall addition. We think one alternative may be to enlist private methods of raising the funds, rather than obligating the town, which has so many other unknown expenditures now."

Article 15 is a school-sponsored request for $25,000 to purchase and install a new lighting panel system for the high school auditorium. The advisory committee has recommended this article, noting the lighting system there is outdated and beyond repair. As of last week, Supt. Eugene Crowell reported the system was not functioning.

Article 20, which requests $25,024 for the Paul Pratt Library to enter into a regional library computer network, has received unanimous support by the town boards. The advisory committee had noted during its review that much of the project will be funded by a federal grant. Since the library has held the budget line for the past four years while feeling the brunt of Proposition 2 1/2, the committee felt it was time to enhance the facilities there.

Article 31 deals with the design and construction of a transfer station at the Cedar Street landfill. Area Disposal Study Committee Chairman Donald DeMichele said that this week, it looks like more towns will drop out of the SEMASS coop project, leaving space for Cohasset's participation. Although the state mandated anti-pollution devices at the SEMASS facility will cost each town an additional $5.20 extra per ton, DeMichele said it still the cheapest and most viable alternative.

"Even if the town decides not to go with SEMASS, we will have to explore all regional methods of waste disposal, and we will need a transfer station," he said. "Once we know for sure which alternative we were going to follow, then we'd know what kind of station to build there."

Other articles to be considered at the 1985 annual Town Meeting include Article 43, sponsored by the planning board, at the request of the Water Commissioners.

This article would enact a temporary construction moratorium in the town's Lily Pond-Aaron River Reservoir water supply area. The moratorium would be effective until 1987, at which time a more comprehensive and detailed watershed contour study will be completed and ready for further Town Meeting action.

Article 58 requests that the position of Town Accountant be removed from Civil Service. Selectmen have recommended the position be removed from the control and tenure of Civil Service. But current Town Accounant William Signorelli, who is resigning the end of this month, has repeatedly stated his opposition to this proposal. Having the accoutant within the guidelines of Civil Service, protects the office from "local politics" he said last month to selectmen.

Article 59 requests $3500 for the purchase of hardware for the Town Hall front doors. The building can not be locked because of the failure of the current hardware. Local police are constantly making stops during the night to check on the unsecured building.

According to figures calculated by the advisory committee, the total 1986 budget to be raised by taxation is $8,496,000. That amount covers Articles one through four. Article five, for raises and reclassification of town employees, will cost about $36,582 from taxation.

Article six, which also requests raises for certain town employees, will cost an additional $3363 from taxation. And the following article, the Reserve Fund, will cost $60,000 to be raised from taxes.

The surplus budget for FY 1986 is $515,974, which Dormitzer labeled "a healthy amount." However, if and when the seven special town meeting articles are passed, along with a possible $20,000 appropriation for a fire hydrant and water main on Newtonville Lane (Article 55), that surplus will be "too low to be considered healthy." A bright note, she added, is the continual pursuit of uncollected back taxes by the current Treasurer-Collector. That money, should it actually be collected, will be used to offset any reduction made by further expenditures.

☐Junior High School students in Mary Jeanette Murray's district are participating in the Legislative Awareness Program. The program includes committee hearings, learning the steps that legislation and legislators must take to have a filed bill become law. They attend House and Senate sessions plus tour our renowned Bulfinch designed State House. They meet and hear legislators speak to the issues.

☐ Cynthia Paine, a management major at the Braintree campus of Newbury Junior College, recently traveled to Europe on a college sponsored trip. Eighteen students, many of them travel and tourism management and hotel restaurant management majors, participated in the seven-day trip to Paris. The students stayed in the Hotel Berthier La Tour and made many tours of the city and its environs including Versailles Palace, Montmarte artist square, Sacre Coeur, and Chartre, a medieval cathedral town.

☐ Katie Horn called with a special message. She wanted to be sure that her sister Johanna had a special ninth birthday wish from her, so Happy Ninth Katie (it is on Good Friday this year.).

☐ Business news on Lisa Fichtner, daughter of Joanne and Herm Fichtner of Old Pasture Road. Lisa has just joined the Hill Holliday Connors Cosmopulos, of Boston, as a media planner with the responsibility for the Wang Laboratories account. Lisa used to work as a senior media planner for Rizzo, Simons and Cohn.

☐ It's too bad that "Uncle Sam" raising his rates has made it impossible to let Mary Jeanette Murray continue her nice policy of mailing "You're in the News" to the people in her district. It used to be that whenever anyone had been mentioned in newspapers, she would send the person a clipping of the same. Between heavy workloads and the additional cost of stamps, an era has ended. Glad I saved mine, perhaps someday it will be worth something (after Mary becomes president.....).

☐ Cohasset Common really bustled with activity all day Sunday, and it sure was wonderful. The men work so hard and for so long to make that road-race a success, and from all reports, it was well worth their efforts! Even the weather was perfect for runners, tho' we spectators were a bit chilly! Hats off to all of the runners, whew, how do they do it?

Togetherness is so nice. Especially for Ashley, 1½, who is getting real close with Mom, Laurie Pagliccia. (Rose Cundari)

☐ While we are on the subject of "Hats off," what about The Boston Globe's 1985 All-scholastic Boys Basketball team! It came as no surprise to anyone that watched any of the CHS basketball games, but imagine Tony Bogarty being "Player of the Year" for Division 3. A well-deserved honor, as he holds the league record for so many things he does so well, as well as holding CHS records. It's a cinch we'll be watching him long after he leaves Cohasset. Coach Minelli did an outstanding job too, and was so honored by being chosen Coach of the Year for Division 3. His 47-3 record for the last 50 games sure speaks for itself! Next week the girls team is to be announced by the Globe, watch for it. In the meantime, be sure to congratulate Tracy Fitzpatrick if you see her as she made the Girls Basketball team for the Boston Herald. Everyone gets a round of applause!!

☐ Speaking of the basketball teams and all of their super games to wind up with winning seasons, an effort is now underway to raise money to buy the teams' jackets. When the hockey team went to the states some years ago, they were awarded jackets for their efforts, given with money that was raised by the town. Today they are still being worn, even by the boys attending college...they are as good as new and are stillworn with pride. Let's all try to get the same for the basketball players, they surely deserve it. If you would like to make a contribution, send your check to The Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club, Box 615, Cohasset, MA

☐ Christopher Edward Kuztorides, son of Mr. Panos and Mrs. Judith Kuztorides of 80 Aaron Rd., has been accepted for the fall 1985 semester at New Hampshire College in Manchester, NH. Chris will matriculate in the college's four-year computer information systems program. He is an anticipated 1985 graduate of Cohasset High School.

☐ Don't make any other plans for this Saturday at 1 p.m., you should be at the high school auditorium, ready for the annual town meeting to begin...make your opinion and vote count, be there (on time, okay?).

☐ Jane Delima has news that is certainly wonderful...she competed last weekend in the State Gymnastics, in the Junior Age Group, in the Class II advanced group. Much to her delight, and after coming in second on the bars, and sixth on the beams, Jane won third place overall! Everyone is so proud of her!! In two weeks she heads for the regionals, so if you see her, congratulate her and wish her luck in her next competition! Jane is a freshman at CHS.

That is the news for this week...keep it coming to me!

Chiropractic for HEALTH

by Dr. Kevin M. Neill, Chiropractic Physician

A BUNDLE OF NERVES

Regardless of where in the body pain may be, a chiropractor spends most of his time checking the spine. He is literally getting to the "backbone" of the trouble since that is where many health problems originate. There may be a misalignment of one or more spinal bones, called vertebrae. The misalignment can cause irritation or pressure on the nerves that leave the spinal cord through the openings between the vertebrae. Every cell of the body, either directly or indirectly, receives nerve impulses from the spine. It is estimated that each large nerve cable leaving the spine carries some 300,000 tiny nerves. Is it any wonder, then, that one becomes a "bundle of nerves" when there is a misalignment of the spine.

Such misalignment results in possible "malfunction" of most any part or organ of the body. Misalignments result in interference with natural body processes. The goal of everyone is to achieve a total state of well-being. Through the natural, knifeless and drugless approach to chiropractic exams such a goal is readily attainable. For the professional attention to your needs, call the COHASSET CHIROPRACTIC OFFICE, 760 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Suite 12. Tel. 383-1211, 1214. Daily by appt. Unusual and difficult cases invited.

Editorial

Be there!

Okay, let's all take one collective heavy breath and blow on this editorial together. There. The dust has vanished and we can now read the following words.

GO TO TOWN MEETING!!!!

Yes, once again we have dragged out our obligatory editorial plea, begging residents to attend their Town Meeting. Why? Because year after year, more people have become less interested in their town government and won't take a precious few hours to vote on some crucial local issues.

It may be a long warrant facing our Town Meeting voters this Saturday. But that is misleading because some articles have been withdrawn, the special Town Meeting meeting articles have been postponed, and numerous articles are business "housekeeping" matters which will be voted without discussion.

No, Cohasset isn't alone in its trouble attracting a quorum. In fact, it is a problem in just about all municipalities.

But not everyone is apathetic to the functions of their town government. Just look at the nine-member voluntary advisory committee which has just spent about four months of twice-weekly meetings to organize this warrant business. Young and old(er) members of that committee share a commitment to their town. They don't want applause for their efforts, but they'd like some interest, some acknowledgement that people are aware of their work.

It has been a long haul for selectmen and all the committees, appointed and elected, who have worked to put this hefty warrant together.

Although none of the articles are hair-raising controversies, they do affect our lives. Let's not ignore their implications to our community.

Raise that voice you share in the function of your government. Participate this week at Town Meeting, and know that your individual concerns are important to us all.

There. Now that the tattered words of this editorial are complete, we will lay it to rest. . . until next week when it's cousin, the GO TO THE POLLS! editorial makes its predictable appearance.

Selling good government

By Claire McDonough

"I can't understand why the town has trouble meeting the quorum requirements for town meeting," I told the Dragon.

"I mean, for raw drama, unleashed passion, and primitive emotion, it's hard to beat a confrontation between the local citizens' alliance against higher taxes and the school committee."

"If they want suspense, uncontrolled longing and violence," the Dragon replied, "people can stay home and read your cookbook.

"The problem is that the town fathers are going about the whole thing all wrong. What they need is a completely new format for town meeting. One that will lure the most dedicated agoraphobes out and into the forum."

"Sounds great," I admitted. "Did you have anything particular in mind?"

"Of course," he replied smugly. "What the town should do is go for a completely restructured town meeting. Something that will meet the spring-time yearnings of its citizens."

He looked at me sternly. "What have you been longing for all winter? What event have you missed so much that when it snowed in March, you were so disappointed, you ran around the backyard screaming 'Liar!' at robins?"

"Those weren't robins," I told him icily. "They were pigeons with chapped breasts. Will you please get to the point?"

"The point is," he replied haughtily, "that at least half the voting-aged residents of the town have been experiencing withdrawal symptoms all winter.

"And you know what kind of a fix they need."

"You mean?" I asked.

He nodded. "A yard sale."

"You're weird," I told him. "You can't turn town meeting into a yard sale."

"That's where you're wrong," he countered. "Town meeting is really just a giant marketplace, anyway. All you'd have to do would be to move it outdoors.

"It could be held on the high school football field and each group that has submitted a money article could be assigned a table. It would be up to them to arrange an attractive display, pointing out the assets of their proposal as opposed to what their opponents want.

"Instead of sitting on uncomfortable seats listening to boring speeches for hours on end, the voters could stroll from one table to the other and question the salesmen. We could also have mimes and wandering minstrels, and maybe even some real clowns as opposed to the ones you usually get at town meeting."

"Your idea is not without merit," I agreed, "but do you realize that you've just completely eliminated the role of the advisory committee?"

"Not at all," he insisted. "They could station one member at each table to act as a sort of consumer's advocate.

"Say, for example, that the selectmen have you convinced that you should spend money for a new town hall. It would be up to the advisory committee member to point out how much potential life there still is in the old building, what we might gain or lose by putting it on the real estate market, and just what the true price tag would be.

"At each table there would be a box where the voters could insert a slip of paper saying how much, if anything, they would be willing to spend on that group's proposals.

At the end of the yard sale — I mean the town meeting — the moderator and the town clerk can total everything up and announce what's been bought and what's been rejected."

"What do we do with the unsold articles?" I asked.

"Easy. We try to palm them off on the next area town to have a town meeting."

"You seem to have thought of everything," I admitted.

"Right," he smiled. "And I intend to set up a table of my own and see if I can get rid of the 586 books you have on the back of our bed, one junk car and four cats."

The spring weather each year attracts kayakers along the Bound Brook rapids near the Border Street bridge. (Rose Cundari)

Last argument for zoning changes

Letters

To the Editor:

You can't put 12 quarts of water into a 10 quart bucket. Whether it's rainwater above ground or septage below, when the ground reaches capacity, it overflows and winds up on the neighboring land on the downhill side.

Who says? Cohasset's terrain is largely ledge and marsh and comparatively small amounts of readily drainable land. It is highly vulnerable to uncontrolled development. It is for this reason that the Metcalf and Eddy and Ward Engineering surveys recommended substantially increased lot sizes, and this is why the Board of Health, the Water Commissioners, the Sewer Commissioners, the Drainage Advisory Committee and the Planning Board urge the town to support those Zoning Bylaw changes that affect lot size, green areas, and limit impervious cover.

Water supply: Two thirds of our water supply is ground water, either from springs (like Mt. Blue) in the Aaron River/Bound Brook watershed or from wells. That water which was originally rainwater or recycled rain water (wastewater) has been purified by its passage through the ground. Overloading can hurt the process.

Drainage: The more impervious cover (houses, driveways, tennis courts, swimming pools), the less ground there is to absorb rainwater which then collects in the nearest low spot. That doesn't mean houses, etc., shouldn't be built. It does mean the land shouldn't be crowded out of doing its job. Open spaces absorb water and give it back to the atmosphere via grass, trees and other vegetation.

Septage: The ground we walk on does a lot of things, not the least of which is purifying the septage we put into it by a process of filtering and bacterial action. The water from the leaching field can become drinkable and the field can cleanse itself and last forever — if we don't overload it.

Growth: The rate of building in Cohasset has increased 2 1/2 times in the past four years. The pressure is on, as witness the recent burst of growth in the South Shore area, the transportation crunch, and what's happening in Hull.

No town board is advocating "No Growth." They are advocating growth under the Town's control. The Town must not allow its future to be jeopardized by short term gain.

Grandfather: The Planning Board is very much aware of the concerns of the individual homeowners. Single family lots are grandfathered by State statute and Cohasset Zoning Bylaws. In some instances a Special Permit (not a variance) may be required for extension and alteration on existing lots that no longer conform. In that case the only criteria is that actvity not be "detrimental to the neighborhood" or "dangerous to the public health." There are no serious constraints on single family houses. Even those developers with subdivisions in process are protected, not just by our Zoning Bylaw, but by State statute.

How Now? Parts of the Town are already experiencing the problems of overbuilding, such as excessive run-off and septage overflow, much of which can only be cured at considerable expense. It costs me more to correct a mistake than to do it right in the first place. We need to act Now. You can't even put 11 quarts into a 10 quart bucket.

Member of the Cohasset Planning Board

Historic walk down old Elm Street

The tree-lined Elm Street, once the path to Boston. (Carol McCann)

Elm Street once was common land
Sweeping from the meeting house,
Skirting Jacob's Meadow,
To the Cove.
Schooners came and fishermen,
Wives and children soon behind
Seeking homes, finding none
Near the Cove.
Squatting on the common land.
Building houses: mean at first,
Better then; homes they were,
By the Cove.
From a barn this house was built.
Moved some miles for one of them;
Hauled by teams from Main Street
To the Cove.
Timbers pegged were plastered smooth,
Windows added, curtains hung,
In Victorian style,
By the Cove.
Land was platted, seedlings set,
Elm Street it would come to be,
Link between the Village
And the Cove.
Fish filled wagons travelled it
Loads of mackeral: salted, split,
On the way to Boston
From the Cove.
Elms soared up and joined their arms
Shading dusty road below.
Whispering in the breeze
Of the Cove.
Warning that the time had come:
Mackeral fishing was no more;
Schooners slowly rotted
In the Cove.
Sleepy street, not far to walk;
Depot Court but half a mile,
seven-ten to Boston,
Leave the Cove.
Back by six: banker's hours.
Make the house look Pilgrimish,
Keep a sail boat ship shape
At the Cove.
Elms: those stately spreading elms
Sickened, one by one by two,
Showed their scarlet letter
To the Cove,
Mark of shame, they had not sinned;
Peace and quiet they had brought.
Chain saws roared, and echoed
From the Cove.
Searching sun found railroad tracks
Rusting; and a drag strip hot, broad and flat. A half mile
Near the Cove.
Elm Street lives; flowering trees
Line it, growing year by year.
Pink, white walls from Village
To the Cove.
Pause a moment, if you pass,
See the elms, smell the scent of Mackeral; salted, split,
At the Cove.

Murray's memos

By Mary Jeanette Murray

Report from the State House

The Joint Committee on Taxation last week heard testimony on many of the bills before it dealing with reducing, repealing or amending numerous provisions of our tax laws.

These proposals and variations have interest among Republicans and Democrats alike.

For example, one would repeal the Dukakis surtax. Massachusetts residents currently pay five percent, plus the 7.5 percent surtax, in taxes on what they earn, making the total tax on earned income 5.375 percent.

Another would reduce the unfair double tax on unearned income that weighs heavily on Massachusetts' senior citizens. Residents now pay 10 percent, plus the 7½ percent surtax, on unearned income like dividends and interest on stocks and bonds, bringing the total tax on unearned income to 10.75 percent. As the result of this tax, a national magazine labeled Massachusetts as the worst state in the country in which to retire.

Other bills include tax relief for the physically handicapped, establishing a limited deduction on home mortgage interest payments, increasing all personal deductions by $200 and increasing the no tax status as additional relief for our low income population.

Tax reform is needed now. These are some excellent proposals for doing just that. The best way to "reward" the taxpayers for the economic prosperity in Massachusetts is to return their dollars with a permanent reduction in the state tax base. Any talk of a one-time, 64 million tax rebate (amounting to about $44 for an average family of four) is purely a symbolic and political move, not suited to true tax reform.

FIRE WARNING

An unusually dry and windy month of March has caused fire danger conditions in Massachusetts according to the Department of Environment Management. Citizens are urged to be especially careful about discarding lit cigarettes or matches from a moving vehicle. Forest fire suppression activities are going on in Middlesex, Sandwich and Bristol Counties. Please be careful.

GYPSY MOTH SEASON COMING

Massachusetts environmental officials are predicting another major outbreak of gypsy moths in selected areas of the state this summer and have requested $400,000 in emergency aid from the Legislature. Areas predicted to be hard hit include Worcester County and Cape Cod. Spraying begins by mid-May before the insects start feeding in June. Money appropriated by the Legislature will be used to reimburse communities for about half of the cost of applying a bacterial agent to contain the spread of gypsy moths. Last year, 313,000 acres of forests were defoliated by the insect. This year they predict the number might be over 400,000 acres. For further information on how to control these insects on your property, contact the State's Pest Control Bureau.

New secretary?

Arlington. A graduate of Cornell University with the master's degree in city planning, McCay admitted she had little experience in financial budgeting or in supervisory management.

At their regular session later that night, selectmen considered opening the job advertisement once again. But the final argument was that the board had probably heard from every candidate who would be interested in the position at the particular salary level. The job will pay about $28,000 annually with benefits included.

Although Selectman Mary Jane McArthur had been impressed with McCay's educational background, selectmen Clifford Mitman, Frank England and Rocco Laugelle voted for Wood.

Wood is a former Norwood Assistant Town Manager who left that position to pursue his post graduate degree at Brown University. He had indicated during his interview with selectmen that he would only be interested in the position at the $28,000 salary level, not the $25,000 minimum.

When interviewed two weeks ago, Selectman Laugelle noted that the 30 year-old Wood is a "soft spoken guy." Adding that he might "have a strike against you, being an outsider," Wood replied, "it could be a strike against me, or it could work to my advantage. I can take what's thrown at me. I was a carpetbagger in Norwood too."

In explaining the difference between a Town Manager and an Executive Secretary, Wood answered, "As I view the role, I would have to feel what the board wants. After a period of time, I should know what's important to you and what's not. Communication is important, even if there is a Town Manager."

Candidates corner

Diane Sullivan

The Committee to elect Diane Sullivan to the two-year term on our Board of Selectmen offers the voters the following information:

Town Hall hours between now and the election on Saturday, April 13: Monday through Thursday, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., additionally on Thursday evenings, 5:30 to 8 p.m., and Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

In addition to the regular operating hours, a special evening for absentee balloting will be held on Wednesday, April 10 from 5:30 to 8 p.m.

Voters are reminded that even though Town Hall will be open until 1 p.m. on Friday, April 12 (the day before the election), absentee balloting will close at 12 p.m. that by, per state law.

Anyone requiring an application for an absentee ballot should call any of the following numbers, 383-1166, 383-6271, or 383-0939. A Notary Public will be available for anyone requesting this service by calling any of those numbers.

Voters are reminded that school vacation begins Friday, April 12, the day before the elections. Anyone planning on vacationing and wishes to vote, should plan on acquiring an absentee ballot during the previously mentioned hours at Town Hall.

Cohasset's spring sports preview

By Lisa Shumaker

Girls' softball

After coming off an extremely emotional basketball season, the girls are looking forward to settling into a somewhat slower-paced softball season. However, the team will still be "very competitive," according to Coach Bill Fallon.

The Skippers started practicing last week, playing in two scrimmages. Wednesday, the girls traveled to Whitman and took on an exceptionally tough team who beat them by a wide margin. However, on Friday, the team played Division II's Weymouth South. In this contest, Cohasset improved tremendously on defense and showed some sparks up at bat as well.

The starting lineup for the Skippers is still shaping up, but basically will remain this way: behind the plate will be Carla Lucas, while Kerri O'Brien and Karlin Isele will be alternating on the mound. The infield include at first, Lisa Shumaker, at second, Jill Nedrow, at third, Debbie Hartley, and at short stop, Janet DiGirolamo. Tara Stanford will lead the outfield in center with Anne O'Leary in left field, and Maureen O'Leary in right field.

The rest of the team includes Katie Anderson, Margie Murphy, Maria Cahill, and Toni Cann.

Cohasset opens their season on Tuesday when they will meet Holbrook. Holbrook has always been a challenge for the Skippers and this will undoubtedly prove to be a very good game. Thursday, the girls face Avon at the Little League Field. The Skippers have always been very successful against Avon and hope to keep their success going on Thursday.

Boys' Tennis

The boys have been practicing two solid weeks now, and their coach Toni Jillson is both impressed with her team and optimistic for this upcoming season. Jillson predicts the boys are going to have a great year and will hopefully "go all the way," as she puts it. The team's strength, according to Jillson, comes from their depth and strong desire to win.

Jillson cited her number one, two, and three players, Rich Reddick, Chris Neelon, and Chris Ryan, as looking outstanding and she feels these three boys will definitely be major forces in boys' tennis this year,

Jillson also was pleased with Co-Captain Curtis Erickson's playing so far, and believes that when her other Captain, John Colocousis, is back in action her team will be a dominant force in the South Shore League.

The rest of the team consists of Stephen Myers, Jason Marsac, Derik Lacks, Dan Farwell, Greg Wallingford, Fred Willshire, and Jamie Langmaid.

The boys begin their season on Tuesday, April 9, against Duxbury at 3:15 p.m. Duxbury has always been and will still be Cohasset's toughest competition, but Jillson confidently predicts, "we will be ready."

Girls' track

This year the girls' track team is made up of over 35 girls, only two of whom are seniors. They are captains Janet Bagley and Sarah Seavey. Coached by both Clare Brady and Ron Emmons, the Skippers field a very inexperienced and young squad. However, despite their youth they "have been working very hard and are very talented," according to Brady. Brady made no predictions as to how the girls will do this year, but is very optimistic for the season.

Co-Captain Janet Bagley returns as an experienced veteran in girls track and will be proved to be tough competition for all of her opponents. Brady also praised Caitlin Staunton's achievements thus far. Furthermore, Brady was pleased with the fresh talent of Janet deLima, Liz O'Leary, Jackie Lydon, and Nancy Riley.

The girls open their season on Tuesday in Abington. Brady almost guarantees a victory and feels more will follow if her team's enthusiasm remains.

Boys' baseball

The boys launched their pre-season two weeks ago and have been practicing six days a week ever since. Coach Joe Bouchard is very impressed with his team's dedication and believes this will be the key to Cohasset's improvement over last year. Bouchard mentioned that he has already seen the Skippers make great strides in batting and he feels their fielding is not far behind.

Leading the team this year will be Co-Captains Jamie Roy and Jay Contis. Both have been playing very well, according to Bouchard. Bouchard also spoke of Jeff Soltesz as being impressive with the bat.

The lineup for Cohasset consists of catcher Jamie Roy, pitcher David Stover, Sean Corkery, Bobby Corkery, and Mike Gentile. First baseman Jay Contis, second baseman Glen Bernstein, third baseman Todd Henry, shortstop Todd Fitzpatrick, leftfielders Greg Ferrara and Peter Corbett, centerfielder Bobby Schultz, rightfielder Philip Mahoney and reserves Peter Sandbloom and Jim Connolly.

The boys open their regular season in Holbrook on Tuesday. This should prove to be an exciting matchup for the Skippers.

Girls' tennis

The girls are showing great promise as they have been preparing for their season opener Thursday in Rockland. Coach Sue Dalrymple believes her team will have a very successful season, and hopes to make the state tournament.

Cohasset's strength originates from their experience, depth, and spirit. While other teams are powerful in only the first seven players, the Skippers are talented throughout the entire squad. Therefore, the team "doesn't have to rely on a few people, it is a team effort."

The enthusiasm of both senior Captains Lauren Hayes and Ingrid Anderson have played a big part in boosting the team's morale this year. Dalrymple also cited number two seeded Kerri Kirkendal as being very impressive on the court.

The remaining players on the team are: Kristen O'Brien, Megan Kelly, Jessica Hamilton, Linda O'Laughlin, Carolyn O'Brien, Jennifer Chapman, Kate Ryan, Karlin Anglin, Lisa Peachel, Chantalle Stone, Amy Hobbs, and Amy Mitman.

Dalrymple also mentioned that she will be assisted this year by Jane Tis who will be attending every game and practice. In conclusion, Dalrymple said, "I'm looking forward to a great season and a lot of support from the fans."

Latin honors

Staci Stobart won the Henry Bean Scholarship at Holy Cross College. Staci scored a five on the advanced placement test her junior year and has done 'A' work in Latin for six years in Cohasset.

Conversation with the PSO

"Hello? Good evening. I'm your PSO representative calling to ask for your support of the programs planned for next year."

"Oh. Yes. I'm familiar with the work the PSO has done. My daughter especially enjoyed working with Syma at Deer Hill and my son and his friends were surprised at how much fun they had learning about dance with the Movement Consortium. And how could I forget what a great year my youngest has had in kindergarten. The PSO had tremendous impact in convincing the school committee we needed four sections. She's done so well in a smaller class."

"That's great that your children are having a fantastic year. As you know, a lot of the programs we sponsor cost money. We're asking parents to show their support by making a pledge to fund next year's activities."

"Well, I'd be happy to pledge $$$, and please contact me to work on a committee next year."

Conversations such as this will be taking place all over Cohasset Wednesday, April 10, between 7 and 9:30 p.m. Help the PSO show how much Cohasset parents care about education.

Some spring cleaning

Neven Bunstein asked his teacher if they could celebrate the first day of spring by doing some "spring cleaning" on the playground! Over the winter quite an accumulation of leaves and litter had mounted up near the fence. His cleaning crew has done a fine job during recess time and can still be seen with bags and rakes in hand, making our school environment a prettier place!

Nostalgia: Remembering a fine Easter Sunday

Liz pushed through the back door carrying a big hat box and I breathed a deep sigh of relief.

She said to Mama, "I just finished working on them before lunch. I have to go back to work." Opening the box, she carefully lifted out two creations.

"Oh, they're beautiful!" Mama said. "Come here, Esther. Try yours on. You too, Dorothy."

Liz said, "Here, let me do it. They have to sit just right." She worked in the millinery shop across from city hall.

"I must be off," she said, taking a banana from the fruit dish while Mama poured a glass of milk. Mama shook her head as her oldest daughter ran out.

The pretty pink concoction was placed on Esther's short, dark hair and she scowled. Her hair was so slippery from our tar soap shampoos that the hat kept turning on her head. It was shaped like an inverted bucket on a wire frame and was covered with row upon row of velvet ribbon.

They both laughed when I tried to put mine on over the rag-entwined curls Mama had just done up. The wide brim was lined with pale blue pleated chiffon, to frame my small face, and topped with a blanket of forget-me-nots. I was entranced. This was a story-book hat, the only one like it in all the world. It didn't bother me at all when my other sisters laughed. Mama thought it was lovely, and so did I.

It was Easter Saturday and we were getting ready for the Holy Day. The furniture shone with polish, windows had been washed until they sparkled and fresh white curtains were hung. The lace curtains in the parlor had been washed and dried on the back piazza on the wooden curtain frames with all the metal pins, and they hung on the windows straight as a die.

The clothes in the closets had been aired and the walls washed down. Rugs had been taken up, hung over the clothesline, and Papa had whacked the dust out of them with a woven rattan beater.

Supper that night was simple, and though the Lenten Fast was over, we still couldn't have the chocolates that Uncle Fred had brought until tomorrow.

Now a newspaper was spread over the boards on the set tubs in the kitchen and Papa helped us get all the family shoes ready. Our new Mary Janes were given a thin coat of vaseline, then they were wiped off. Mama's black oxfords looked like new with Papa's efforts and everyone had new stockings or socks.

We all went to Easter Mass at a small wooden church on the corner. The white altar was ablaze with candlelight and the fragrance of masses of lilies wafted over the congregation.

I had to hold my chin up so I could look out from under the cloud of forget-me-nots and I stared unseeing at the flickering candles, feeling all eyes upon me, yet oblivious to all by the hat.

Mama had made our outfits...the coats of white serge with a black pin stripe were finished with black satin sailor collars and deep cuffs, which I kept adjusting throughout the Mass.

Esther nudged me and whispered crossly, "Stop wiggling and turning your head."

With that, Mama separated us and reprimanded me with threats of withholding my candied Easter egg when we went home for breakfast. That brought me down from the clouds abruptly and I kept still until church was over.

Breakfast was a big one with lots of colored eggs, but my delight was the white sugared one with the hole in one end that you could peek into. Inside was a miniature stage setting with colored cardboard characters. I imagined myself growing smaller the way Alice did, and coming on stage from the wings.

Brought out of my fantasies by what Mama was saying. I ran to the bedroom for our hats and coats.

"If you two want to, you may go and call on the neighbors and show them your outfits. Don't get dirty, and do not accept any money. You'll be sent right back with it if you do. Mind what I say now and off with you."

We were already out the door and heading for Mrs. Caniff's house. She made the best banana cream pies. They were at home and welcomed us in and praised Mama's handwork.

"Turn around and let us see the back," they said. And they said, "My, the forget-me-nots match her eyes." And, "Isn't pink lovely on Esther with her dark eyes?" We turned agreeably and once more I was all puffed up. We visited several neighbors and then headed home. Mama was putting the finishing touches on our Easter ham. She'd made a cross-hatch of cloves on the pineapple and cherry decorations.

"You won't have to change your clothes if you sit in the parlor quietly. You may read the Sunday funnies or play Parcheesi."

"Shall we go for a walk this afternoon?" I asked, still not sated with the attention my clothes had received.

Papa intervened, "I'll take you both for a walk while your sisters do the dishes. We'll let Mama have a nice long nap."

At last the hats were put away in the big hat box, coats and dresses hung in the closet. The day's excitement ebbed slowly away as I sat at the supper table dressed in my everyday pinafore.

Vanity had been put away in the hat box.

Sponsors receive enthusiastic support for planned area 'Donkey Project'

In a joint statement, Brenda Delaney of Scituate and Donna McGee of Cohasset said they are pleased with the response to The Donkey Project.

This program, which will raise funds to purchase pack animals for the transportation of food and farm equipment to the victims of famine in Ethiopian war zones, is a result of state-wide effort by Democratic Town and County Committees to alleviate the conditions in these areas.

The town committees in Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Scituate and Weymouth have joined together and adopted the theme, "The Spirit of Massachusetts Reaches out to Ethiopia."

They will sponsor a theater-dinner party at the Bell Buoy Restaurant and the Playhouse Theatre in Scituate Harbor April 21, with all proceeds to be donated to Grassroots International for the purchase of donkeys and camels.

McGee and Delaney said tickets are going fast at $10 each and there has been a tremendous response on the part of individuals and businesses to requests for donors ($25), sponsors ($50), and patrons ($100).

"People have been wonderful," Delaney and McGee agreed.

"They realize that mankind is made of one fabric, and a rend anywhere in the substance of humanity affects us all."

For information regarding tickets or sponsorship, call Karen Corcoran of Cohasset at 383-6767, Robin Brewer of Hingham at 749-8551, Anne Scully of Hull at 925-0888, Paula Buckley of Marshfield at 837-2177, Julie Devlin of Scituate at 545-2665, or Karen DeTellis of Weymouth at 337-0199.

Wife of the late Dr. Herbert Joseph Spinden, she leaves a brother, Edmund Collier of Duxbury; a sister, Elizabeth Tower of Cohasset; and several nephews and nieces.

A graveside service was held Monday in Central Cemetery. Rev. Edward Atkinson of the First Parish Church officiated.

Funeral arrangements were completed by Gaffey Funeral Home in Scituate.

The first women to cross the finish line was as always, Sarah Linsley, a Cohasset native.

Photos by Carol McCann

For the third time, Bob Hodge is the first to cross the finish line at Town Hall. His time was 29:55.

Almost as important as the runners, are the friends and family who anxiously wait at the end of the race.

John McStowe looks pretty classy as he watches for the last of the pack to come in.

Senator Golden to fight for federal funds

State Sen. William Golden will travel to Washington, DC April 18, to meet with federal lawmakers and officials in the Executive Branch to fight federal budget cuts which could eliminate funding for the return of commuter rail to the South Shore. Golden will be joining State Sen. Ned Kirby and State Reps. Mary Jeanette Murray, Frank Hynes, Emmet Hayes and Peter Forman as well as other members of the South Shore Legislative Caucus in lobbying Congress and the Reagan Administration to maintain present levels of funding for mass transportation.

Currently, commuter rail transportation is totally subsidized and does not require additional local subsidies from municipalities which it services. "For years," Golden stated, "the North Shore communities have been served by commuter rail without additional local assessments. It would be a cruel irony if federal funding was terminated at the time when the South Shore was finally able to secure restoration of rail service to our communities."

Referring to a National Conference of State Legislators Analysis of the President's 1986 Budget, Golden noted:

"Seventy percent of the funds provided for capital programs and all subsidies for operating costs would be eliminated. The budget proposal is wholly unacceptable and inconsistent with the South Shore's pressing need for a balanced, multi-modal transportation system. I urge all South Shore residents who are interested in mass transportation alternatives, including commuter rail, the MBTA redline, commuter boats and buses to contact their Federal Legislators as well as President Reagan and Secretary of Transportation Elizabeth Dole to express their opposition to these budget reductions."

Bob Julian stars in Scapino

Ellen Kelly, Director of the Cohasset Dramatic Club's current production, "Scapino," recently announced that Bob Julian of Cohasset will play the leading role.

An experienced comedic actor who has participated in many previous productions, Bob is perhaps best remembered for his performance last December as a "Cinderella" stepsister.

Cast in other major male roles in "Scapino" are Ed Lappin, David Barrett, and Don Massa of Cohasset; John Rice of Scituate; and Bill Devaney of Hull.

Director Kelly has selected Beth Colburn of Cohasset and Polly DiBona of Scituate for female leads.

Also included in the cast are Laura Doherty, Katje deHaas, Matthew Kune, and David Wadsworth of Cohasset; and Patrick Healey of Scituate.

"Scapino" performances are scheduled for April 25-28 at the Cohasset Town Hall. Advance tickets can be purchased at Fleming's Hardware in Cohasset.

Three-part art series

The last of a three-part series, Design for Living, at the South Shore Art Center, will be Tuesday, April 9 with a focus on Architecture at Art by Meg Hickey, head of the design department at the Massachusetts College of Art.

The program will begin at 7:30 p.m. at the center, 103 Ripley Road. Advanced registration is required for the lecture.

Hickey will explore how architecture relates to art. Using a dual slide presentation, she will compare mostly modern art with architecture. Emphasizing Paul Klee's abstract painting, she will compare techniques and forms of modern art with forms of architecture.

The speaker is a mechanical engineer, a registered architect, and a renovation consultant for the City of Cambridge.

For further information or to enroll, call the center at 383-9548.

New friends program

The "New Friends" of the Social Service League of Cohasset believe that people of all ages benefit from new friends and social experiences. The New Friends' program introduces lonely or handicapped or socially isolated people to new friends.

Our primary purpose is to offer friendship through regular one-on-one visits. Visiting time is an opportunity for conversation, listening, and sharing. Sometimes, we offer assistance with shopping or errands, share a meal at a restaurant, or take part in some other recreational activity, whatever feels mutually satisfying and appropriate to the visitor and the person being visited.

We welcome new friends. We are looking for people who would like to visit as well as for those who would like to be visited.

For further information, please contact the Social Service league at 383-0771.

Cohasset Chamber meeting

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce will meet Wednesday, April 10 at 6:15 p.m. sharp at Kimball's.

A brief business meeting will take place at that time. Following that portion of the meeting, Linda Forrag will speak to the Chamber members about dealing with business emergencies.

Vacation art center

The South Shore Art Center's ever-popular Child's Vacation Drop-In will be on tap again for the April school vacation, 16 through 19.

As in February, the drop-in program will be held at two locations, at the Center, 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset and in Hingham at the Community Center, 70 South St. The two locations afford the children easier access to the vacation drop-in workshop. This year's program is funded in part by the Harold Books Foundation and by the Hingham, Norwell, and Hull Arts Lottery Councils (pending approval). No pre-enrollment is required for the week-long workshop.

The vacation drop-in is so named as it allows children to leisurely drop in on a daily basis between 10:30 a.m. and noon to work on art projects. The youngsters, ages seven to 12, work with painting, drawing, collage, clay, mixed media, film as inspiration for creative projects and printmaking.

The staff of the Center's young artist department teach the program. Familar faces around the Center, Serena Brundige, Gil Coyle, Lisbeth Koopman-Wyman and Syma will be working with the children.

Students are encouraged to take advantage of such an opportunity to work in a creative environment on a daily basis. For further information on this workshop or any of the opportunities through the young artist department, call the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548.

Which end is which? Confusion abounds as a little doggie ascends from his bath in the duck pond at the Common.

Busy month for Cohasset Cub Scouts

Many Moms and Dads were "hounded" this month by their own Cub Scout, to help put the finishing touches on their Pinewood Derby cars. Various projects and activities however, busied the cubs at their den meetings.

Den 1- The cubs were eagerly working on posters to submit to the MDC on water conservation. The theme was "conserving water in the home." The boys had many interesting and varied ideas and their finished projects were beautiful! The contest ends the end of April. Good luck!

After an important safety discussion on the use of knives, the boys started soap carvings. As they found out, whittling with a knife is not an easy task. They'll finish this project next week.

Den 2- The boys enjoyed creating fossils using Plaster of Paris. The imprints were made using coins, shells, and other favorite trinkets. They also double as great paperweights.

Potato heads were another favorite project. The boys hollowed out potatoes, filled them with dirt, and then planted lentils inside. They also painted a colorful face on the side of the potato. The sprouted lentils give the potatohaeds a sort of "punk rock" hairstyle.

Den 3- The boys held their own Olympic Day and participated in various events. The obstacle course, ring toss, marble sharp shooter and relay races were great fun.

Another meeting was spent creating Easter gifts for Mom, Grandma, etc. The cubs created recipe card holders from tiles which were donated by "The Tile Man," Mr. John Bowen of Cohasset. Thanks Jack!

Another meeting was a Father and Son outing. The Dads and the cubs went on a 12-mile bike hike to Worlds End in Hingham. At "The End," the boys took pictures which included shots of the soon to be demolished roller coaster at Paragon Park. It was a great, but exhausting time.

Den 4- A big thank you to Gerht Lubitz' Mom, Kyle, for arranging the appearance of the super magician for the Blue and Gold Banquet!

March Denner Grant Jansics, and Assistant Denner Gerht Lubitz, led the boys on gluing dowels into wood discs with holes in the center. Materials for this project werer donated by Hingham Lumber Co. Each boys then bound together the ends of four rope pieces to make rings for the Ring Toss game, to complete Arrowpoint 19.

A "pirates gold" treasure hunt was made by gluing a treasure map to a shirt cardboard, coloring and laminating with clear contact paper Arrowpoint 39 and 40.

Another meeting was highlighted by making "paper bag kites" and playing "hat exchange" game. Nick Lelecas, gave some of the cubs a little guidance in working on their Pinewood derby cars. All sang the "Star Spangled Banner" in a burst of spring patriotism, and to earn Arrowpoint 54.

Den 5- This month was field trip month for the boys of Den 5. The cubs visited the Museum of Science and thoroughly enjoyed the Electric Show. A trip to the Aquarium was also enjoyed by the cubs, and no one fell into the shark tank!

The Japanese House Tour seemed to be the hit of the Children's Musuem. The boys, of course, managed to bring home a bag of junk from the recycling center. Everyone enjoyed this trip.

Webelos- The Webelos had a super swim meet at Mass. Maritime Academy in Buzzards Bay this month. A tour of the facility followed the meet. On the way home, the Webelos stopped for supper at Burger King. A great time!

Another ongoing project the Webelos have is the construction of various wooden toys. The ideas are terrific, but putting them on paper has been a real challenge for the boys.

Local woman elected

A Cohasset woman has been elected to the board of the United Way of Massachusetts Bay.

Judge Rya W. Zobel, Jerusalem Road, of the U.S. District Court, Boston, was voted to a three-year term on the board that directs the United Way, the area's largest human service organization.

She is a member of the American, Massachusetts, and Boston Bar Associations, and is an overseer of the Boston Luncheon Club and a governor of the Handel and Haydn Society. Zobel is a graduate of Radcliffe College and Harvard Law School.

The United Way of Massachusetts Bay, now celebrating its 50th year, serves more than one million people in more than 80 cities and towns in eastern Massachusetts.

No record times, but lots of fun at Cohasset road race

By Jane Lane

The day was grey, with a biting wintry wind that made noses wet, and chilled the bare, red legs of the runners.

For the spectators, it was a harsh day to keep warm while awaiting the results.

But for the the runners, Sunday was spectacular.

It was a wonderful day for everyone in and around the Cohasset Road Race By The Sea. For everyone, except the traditional winner of the women's division.

Sarah Linsley, a hometown favorite in this nine-year event, did what she set out to accomplish. But during her post race walk, she admitted the pressure is getting to her.

With a hand on the side of her stomach, Sarah explained how she ran much of the 6.4 miles with a "stitch in my stomach," she said, a condition caused by pre-race nerves.

Since the race first began, Sarah has been the overall women's champion. That is a great feat, but a tradition that weighs heavily upon her slight shoulders. One thought crosses her mind much of the time just prior to the race. The odds are, someday she will lose the title she has borne for nine years.

"Before this race, I get real nervous," she said, holding her hand over the area which continued to ache. "I get real excited about running this race. It's very important to me. I look forward to it each year with happiness and trepidation.

"My stomach hurt so much today, I felt like I should have run the race sidewards," she continued.

She did run. And throughout the race along Cohasset's coastline, Sarah had little competition. This 10 K is probably her favorite race.

She graduated from Northwestern University Law School and is now an attorney in Chicago. She still competes in local races, but bypasses the notoriety of the marathons. She comes back to Boston for the Bonnie Bell, but avoids the Boston Marathon. "It's too long," she explained simply.

She returns to her hometown each year for this special race. This year, the Team Linsley competed, including family members John, Joel, Karen and Kristin. Mom and Dad and sister Letitia formed the cheerleading squad.

There was little need for cheerleaders, however. When Sarah's small form could be seen approaching Highland Avenue, a roar swelled from the sideline crowd. "Sarah! Sarah!" they screamed as they watched the local athlete cross the finish line at a fast sprint, legs kicking high and hard behind her. Seconds later, arms upheld in victorious exurberance, the 1985 edition of the Cohasset road race was history.

The first person to finish the grueling, hilly race arrived minutes before Sarah's welcome. Bob Hodge, a runner from Wellesley, crossed the final mark in front of Town Hall, barely breathing heavily.

Bob has won this event each of the three years he has entered.

As he flew across the white painted line on Highland Avenue, Bob slowed down to a fast walk, hands resting on his hips.

Although he did not know his official time yet, he figured he finished at a good pace. "It was windy as usual," he said when asked to describe the race. "The wind on the course really gets to you. Every year I've run this race, in '78, '81 and this time, it has been really windy."

Bob was pleased and somewhat surprised that he ran as well as he did. The day before he had competed in a five-mile track race and his legs were weak. "They didn't feel very comfortable," he said at the conclusion of the race. "But I guess they did the job."

Bob said he has entered the Boston Marathon before, but prefers the competition of the 10K. "It's great to win this," he said. "I'm kind of surprised, because I really feel lethargic today."

If Bob was feeling a bit tired, the crowd never sensed it. As the voice on the loudspeaker announced Bob's impending arrival, the hundreds of spectators bunched behind guard ropes, yelled in anticipation. As soon as the flashing blue lights of his police escort could be viewed from Town Hall, the crowd erupted with applause and words of encouragement.

"You got it!" was the official greeting for the 1985 winner of the Cohasset roadrace.

The Cohasset Rotary, sponsors of the annual event, were more than pleased with the organization of the race. Everything went according to schedule, "a little too smoothly," Rotarian Peter Logan said apprehensively before the runners completed the course. But everything concluded without a

Everywhere you looked Sunday runners were warming up for the 6.4 mile Cohasset road race. Lisa Gallagher of Cohasset joined about 1000 other runners at the Common. (Carol McCann photo)

Politicus — by David A. Mittell, Jr.

Beauty is still worth fighting for . . .

If you drive east on Interstate 90 from Seattle 3,400 miles to the Fort Point Channel in Boston, you will pass through some of the most spectacular scenery on this or any continent. The Bitterroot Mountains then the Rockies; the Black Hills then the Badlands; the wheat belt then the corn belt; the Finger Lakes then the Adirondacks. And then, as the New York State Thruway ends and the Massachusetts Turnpike begins, something surprising happens, it really does: the countryside gets more beautiful.

The rolling hills of eastern New York dairy country turn into the thick forests of the Berkshires, forests that aren't seriously interrupted even as you approach the suburbs of Boston. Physically, Massachusetts is a pleasant surprise to the east driving traveler--even the life-long citizen only too well versed in the shortcomings of its politics.

A similar discovery awaits the South Shore commuter returning to his town in the evening. His town is in many ways still a village, and whether he is descended from the founders of the village or whether his company ordered him transferred to the Boston area one year ago, the chances are he chooses to live in a South Shore town on account of beauty as much as any other factor.

It is ironic but true that both forest and idyllic village owe their continued existence almost entirely to penury. The penury of the land became obvious to boys fighting the Civil War in fertile fields to the south and west. In droves they never returned to rocky fields and stingy soil here, and it is thus that Massachusetts became a thickly forested state.

As to the villages, the erratic prosperity in shipbuilding between 1800 and 1850 was the "high tech" that helped to build them, but penury is all that saved them. We call the hip-roofed houses that marked the era and continue to mark the pretty parts of every South Shore town "captain's houses." Farmers of the era, a little less prosperous, were likely to live in the 1 1/2 story homes we call "Cape Cods." The discerning eye will note that the ground floor plan of the two types is usually identical--two square front rooms, a center chimney, and a double square (i.e. rectangular) rear room with an enormous fireplace--the kitchen. The difference between the ship captain's house and the farmer's is that the ship captain was prosperous enough to build or (as Mary Todd Lincoln did far away in Illinois) add a second story.

With the decline of farming and shipbuilding came the penury that saved our villages. Whereas places like Park Street in Boston and Harvard Square in Cambridge long since razed the "village look," and whereas most surviving pre-Civil War houses in places like Newton and Brookline have been altered and added to and the original made unrecognizable, down here on the South Shore our early homes remain the things of beauty they always were.

Is that because our ancestors were wiser and of better taste than their Cambridge and Brookline contemporaries? If you believe as much you'll believe anything I tell you. The reason our great great grandparents didn't remodel according to the overstated styles of the day is they were too poor.

We have a special responsibility to beauty. That is because we do not by any stretch of the imagination live in penury. (I choose the slightly archaic term because the more common "poverty," being very much around us, does not do as an antonym to "prosperous.") Since we are prosperous as our forbears never imagined, taking care of our historic, inherited beauty will be no accident of penury; therefore it must be a deliberate act. We can afford to spoil 200-year-old houses, and we can afford to turn the forests of Southeastern Massachusetts into mile after mile of ugliness. We must choose not to.

Beauty must be an end in itself. Beauty is why many of us have chosen to live no where else in America. In Los Angeles the grass is always green--as convincingly green as the astro-turf rug the undertaker places over the dirt beside the grave. Here in New England around Easter time the grass becomes green. Our changing seasons are a metaphor of resurrection.

Beauty is worth fighting for, it is even worth politicking for. On the other hand, some things are wrong just because they are ugly. What is ugly should not get built. The green grass of home, the sweet smells of spring, the hard labor of our ancestors speak to us: Safe, convenient, and economical are no longer sufficient criteria. We have a responsibility to beauty, and to posterity.

Beacon Hill Roll Call

"Beacon Hill Roll Call" records local representatives' votes on the only roll call from the week of March 25-29. There were no important roll calls in the senate.

This week, "Beacon Hill Roll Call" also previews several bills which were recently heard by legislative committee and will soon be up for consideration in the House and Senate.

PERSONNEL DIRECTOR (H 3019)

House 123-20, refused to reconsider its earlier defeat of a bill establishing a director of personnel for the legislature, to be appointed by a board consisting of the Speaker, Senate President, and majority and minority leaders of each branch.

Under the bill, the director would be charged with many duties including designing an automated personnel system, establishing a uniform employee evaluation system including development of job descriptions, and publishing rules governing employees' travel, vacation, and sick leave.

Supporters said a director is necessary to weed out unproductive and delinquent employees and to professionalize the 1100 legislative employees. Opponents noted new House rules have already created a personnel committee to deal with House employees. They urged members to give the newly created committee a chance to work. (A "Yea" vote is reconsidering defeat of the bill. A "Nay" vote is against the bill.)

Voting "Yea" were Reps. Mary Jeanette Murray and Charles Mann. Voting "Nay" were Reps. Suzanne Bump, William Flynn and Frank Hynes. Not voting were Reps. Robert Ambler and Robert Cerasoli.

UNDER CONSIDERATION

NEWSPAPERS — The judiciary Committee recently heard testimony on a bill which would prohibit newspapers from publishing editorials and articles that do not bear the name of the author. Similar bills considered in previous years have been easily defeated.

GAMBLING — Several people spoke in opposition and no one spoke in favor of legislation that would allow casino gambling in Hull and North Adams. The bill has died in the legislature for the past several years. Meanwhile, the Government Regulations Committee also heard testimony in favor of a bill to use $500,000 in state lottery proceeds to set up a state pilot program to treat compulsive gamblers.

PROMPT PAYMENT — Representatives of many small businesses urged the State Administration Committee to do something about requiring the state to pay its bills on time. Pending are bills to make the state pay interest penalties of up to 14 percent on late payments for services and goods.

LEGISLATIVE CHANGES — Several bills making major changes in the operation and structure of the legislature are being considered this year. One of the most controversial would limit the legislative session to six months. Other proposals would increase the size of the Senate from 40 to 56 members and create a unicameral legislature merging the House and Senate and reducing the total number of legislators from 200 to 160.

ABUSE INVESTIGATION — Testimony was heated on a bill allowing a social worker, with a police officer's assistance, but with a search warrant, to enter a home to investigate an alleged child abuse case, even if they are refused permission to enter.

Another bill would require a person who files a child abuse charge to give his or her name and be subject to perjury fines if the charges are proven wrong. Massachusetts law currently allows anonymous reports of child abuse to be investigated.

ACID RAIN — A "cap and cut" bill would attempt to attack the acid rain problem on a state level by requiring an immediate freeze on the level of sulfur emissions by Massachusetts industries, with gradual restrictions in future years if steps are not taken at the federal level.

Supporters say the bill is a beginning and will send a message to Washington, while opponents say the only real solution is on a national level.

SMOKE ALARMS — The Public Safety Committee has heard testimony on a bill requiring the installation of smoke alarms in all multi-family dwellings. Exisiting law requires all buildings with more than three units to have smoke detectors, but leaves it up to local option to have smaller buildings protected. Another bill would require that all boarding houses be equipped with sprinkler systems.

TRIED AS ADULTS — This bill would allow persons between 14 and 17 years old to be tried as adults for murder, manslaughter and vehicular homicide. Meanwhile, another bill would change pre-trial detention for juveniles to ensure that the dangerous juveniles are detained, but that juveniles who present little risk of violence be allowed out on bail.

ALCOHOL EDUCATION — Testimony on a bill to establish a Masachusetts Highway Safety and Alcohol Education Fund has heard by the Public Safety Committee. The bill would provide money for preventive alcohol education programs and would be funded by a portion of the fees paid by persons convicted of drunk driving.

SURTAX — The Taxation Committee has heard testimony on a bill repealing the 7.5 precent surtax. Citizens for Limited Taxation, the group that led the successful drive for passage of Propositon 2 1/2, has made the surtax repeal one of its priorities this year. The proposal, however, is only one of dozens of bills filed this year to reduce taxes.

PATCHES by Lois Martin

April puts you on hold for Spring

April is a phony. Spring, my foot. You can get hurt in April. Your car can slide off the snowy road into the ditch. You can drown or you can get pelted on the head by hail.

People who have nailed February as being the mean month on the calendar were mistaken. February is exactly what it says it is. Winter. April, on the other hand, and two months beyond, has lied about being spring.

Easter is one of the toughest endurance tests facing Christians. You'd think we'd learn, that we'd wear at the least a new winter suit we bought on sale for the next year. But, no, so duped are we, so vulnerable to verbage of promising vernal splendor, we deck out in gossamer clothing befitting late July.

The wind whips through our pastel clothing, dashing mud on little girls' white lace-trimmed anklets and blows the best of the bonnets into the church parking lot. Were it not for the message of Easter, that resplendent hope so needed in life and in season, you can bet your boots you'd wear 'em.

Chaucer went on and on about April, spring, in his Introduction to the Canterbury Tales. I loved Geoffrey when I read about him. He wrote in floral Middle English that was his tongue in that day. I always pictured him as a bright, little stout man who hung out at pubs, put his gleanings on paper and didn't miss a trick.

He was right-on about April, too.

April is the only month in the year when every article of clothing you own must be at hand. Given the shabby state of our winter coats by then, it's no wonder we wear them reluctantly, clutching them closed so that smudges won't show. In a two-day run, you can wear a short-sleeved shirt, a cotton skirt with sandals and the next day you may be back in longjohns and turtle necks.

What you probably won't get in April is a sunburned nose. And that simple toast to summer is a highly desirable affliction. Oh, they throw in a crocus or two just to throw you off. And this won't be the first year your early planted pansies get frosted. Chillbains should be considered a natural byproduct of the month. It's when we say it's warmer outside than it is inside. Furnaces don't work right in April. And look at your legs. They're attic white, unless you've been south and if you have, I don't want to hear about it.

They key, of course, to all this poorly veiled annoyance, is patience. We need to be patient for spring, for warmth to work its way through our outer clothing, for the word 'muggy' to replace 'raw,' for 'breeze' to replace 'draft.' Better it would be, more realistic, if I were to approach April as I do Christmas shopping, smiling wanly to myself, saying nobody should do it if she didn't expect to wait . . . in lines.

But by the time we kiss off March we've been, it feels, in a long line waiting for spring. That changes to the belief that we've been waiting in the wrong line like we've done at the Registry. That aside and even understood, getting through April is like being put on hold . . . for spring, who seems to be 'away from his desk,' or 'out to lunch.'

Don't think for a moment I can't handle this month. I just like to call a spade a spade, is all, and I'm too old now to call this month Spring.

But I'll be out there like the rest of you. The little deck needs painting. There's a slat on the steps that needs replacing and the lawn looks like poor Gettysburg must have.

See you out around, okay? One thing we'll love and I've noticed every year. With better weather (I'm not gonna call it good) we start communicating again, waving at passers-by, shedding the winter's recluse. That'll be fun, won't it? Sturdy exercise on a Sunday afternoon, going back in a house that feels hotter than when you were unexercised, checking the longer daylight and thinking about what flowers would look great . . .

Just remember the truth . . . this is not spring. Chaucer knew that hundreds of years before you and I paid taxes. Let us do April this year with some semblance of honesty. Have a happy, joyful Easter, and I've got an extra pair of boots for Sunday if you've foolishly put yours away.

"The Price" continues at the Nickerson Theatre

THEATRE REVIEW

By Corinne A. Kutish

"The Price," Arthur Miller's compelling drama of choices made and opportunities lost, engrosses the audience for over two hours, yet leaves you with a feeling of dissatisfaction.

Playing through April 20, this fifth production of Norwell's Nickerson Theatre cannot be faulted for its acting — it's honest and down-to-earth. The script itself provides no catharsis, opening doors of pent-up emotions and never closing them.

"The Price" tells the humor-flecked story of the tangled relationship of two brothers, who are haunted by decisions made in their youth that irrevocably shaped their destinies. The action takes place in the storage attic of their long-vacant boyhood home where they meet after years of estrangement to sell the furnishings before the house is torn down.

The ensuing confrontation opens long-rankling resentments and leads to the question long gnawing at them both — was the price each paid for his life's decision too high?

I just wish playwright Arthur Miller would have written the answer. Unfortunately, the two brothers go round and round the issue, breaking off in anger in the final act, no closer to understanding.

Now, I'm all for powerful dramas that move us to consider life's questions and extrapolate these thoughts to our own lives. "The Price" achieved great commercial success when it debuted on Broadway in 1968, it just doesn't reach that higher level of emotional fulfillment.

As Victor, the younger brother who is forced to cut short his education to become a policeman and support his father, Ralph Pochoda is at ease on stage. His discomfort at dealing with years of smothered ambition is evidenced by his constant fiddling with his hands. So long repressed, he is now paralyzed from acting for his own benefit.

As Walter, the older brother and successful surgeon, Jim Oyster offers a calm, ingratiating smile, which belies the guilt and turmoil his convictions have brought him. His pursuit of success to the neglect of family and friends has left him divorced and recovering from a mental breakdown.

As the story unfolds, each brother recounts his version of that crucial moment years earlier when one cut loose from what he saw as a manipulative father, while the other remained at home to prevent their suddenly-bankrupt father from ending up a broken bum.

Each brother sees these same events differently. The question of who acted rightly and who acted wrongly is never resolved.

In their supporting roles, Stephanie Voss and Leonard Corman are excellent.

As Esther, Victor's wife who longs for a new chance to really live her life, Voss is relaxed and believable.

As the aging, Jewish used furniture dealer Gregory Soloman, Corman never overdoes the character. He provides the much-needed comic relief and a philosophical voice of reason, even as he advances his own cause — the desire to make a buck off the purchase of a lot of valuable second-hand furniture.

Indeed, the furniture overpowers the Nickerson stage. Properties manager Suzanne Kaplor must have emptied out a lot of South Shore antique shops. Piled to the ceiling by set designer Donald Soule are three stacks of huge outmoded tables, chairs, bureaus, armoires and other bric-a-brac.

Surrounded by elaborate lamps, rolled-up rugs, a wind-up Victrola and massive furniture, the actors are dwarfed.

Lighting designer Joanne Zaharis has provided the requisite dim, diffused lighting typical of a dusty, old attic. Craig Sonnenberg's costumes are understated by necessity.

Director Judy Braha has done a fine job of bringing out the best in each actor — no languishing over the steady stream of emotional revelations.

"The Price" continues at the Nickerson Theatre in Accord Park, Norwell, through Saturday, April 20. Performances are Tuesday through Thursday at 8 p.m.; Friday and Saturday at 8:30 p.m.; Sunday matinee at 2 p.m. and Sunday evening at 7 p.m. Tickets for Friday and Saturday evenings cost $15, and $12 for all other performances. A Saturday matinee has been added on April 13 at 4 p.m.

Tickets are still available at the box office for most performances.

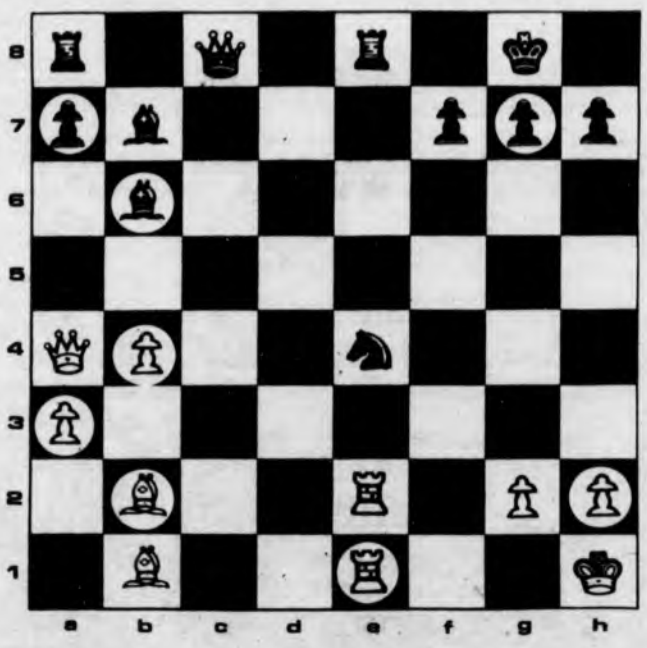
The Pantomime Crimes

Anyone find a third mate in three for white last week, how about a fourth, a fifth?! What's the highest hand you can get in cribbage? Not that the number will be equal, but the means to the solution may be close.

Now, to the real question at hand, how many three move mates actually were there for white last week? First find the quiz, (not an easy task) then find the mates, now send me your solution. Notice I said solution, don't send the variations, you've been through enough, just send me a number.



I will be competing in the N.Y. OPEN this week but will still give you my solution in next weeks chess release. Incidentally, you will also be informed how many had an accurate account of the "Pantomime Crimes" and how many of you couldn't find the paper!

P.S. Wish me luck, and I wish you luck.

FROM THE KITCHEN

by JOAN PINKHAM

Several weeks ago when I wondered in print what a salt spoon is, I not only learned that the recipe in question referred to the little silver spoon used with salt cellers at individual formal place settings, but I learned a great deal more from our newly acquired "mystery chef." Of all our readers who called, the most delightful was the 85-year-old man who chose to divulge his love of cooking, but not his name. Feeling there was much to learn from this gourmand who prepares dinner for three of his peers each Saturday evening (a venerable group whose total in years is 358), I managed to garner a few clues as to our caller's identity, one being that he is "strawberry happy." In the 45 years he has lived by the sea, he has served his guests this dessert, as beautiful to look at as it is to taste. Marshfield was once famous for its Marshall berries. Hard to find these last few years, we will have to wait a while before native berries can be found for our mystery chef's

STRAWBERRY PIE

In a 9" graham cracker pie shell, stand whole berries with point up. Do this until shell is filled to overflowing.
Dissolve in
1/2 cup boiling water,
2 pkg. sugar-free strawberry jello, adding
1-1½ c. white karo syrup
Set above in bowl of ice to thicken.
Add a shot of Grand Marnier, or any other orange liquor.

Ladle over every berry and refrigerate until ready to serve with a bowl of whipped cream with ladle to garnish.

After a meal of such delights, the group sets off for an after-dinner stroll; no mean feat, particularly on those very special occasions when the host has prepared his seafood newburgh, a rather costly treat which came to $60 when last prepared to serve 10 guests, for included were filet of flounder, shrimp, crab, lobster, scallops and minced clams, a delectable melange in the newburgh sauce. Somewhat cheaper, but another pleasant meal is his way with an inexpensive piece of California slice of Chuck, blade removed, cut up into inch squares with kitchen shears. Steamed with onions, celery and mushrooms, with a touch of Wyler's beef extract, for an hour and a half, flour is added to the liquid to make a roux before serving with Italian style noodles, a salad and hot breads. Another cooking hint offered by our mystery chef has successfully warded off colds for many a year. It seems that when he bakes potatoes, he also bakes onions. Using 2" round onions, each one is placed in the center of a piece of aluminum foil with a dab of butter and seasonings topping each before being wrapped in the foil, to bake along with the potatoes.

Thinking back to the days in his parent's home in Boston, our caller told of dinner parties that went on for hours, with courses consisting of fruit cup, homemade soups, lobster, baked stuffed quail, filet of beef, a souffle, flaming baba au rhum. Nowadays, his guests find this dessert pleasing, but so rich that seconds are seldom called for.

LEMON GRAPENUT PUDDING

1/2 stick butter, creamed with
1 c. sugar. Add:
2 egg yolks. Beat and add
1 c. milk
Stir all together. Add:
Grated rind and juice of 1 large lemon
Mix all together and add:
2 T flour
3 T grapenuts
Beat 2 egg whites until solid and fold in Set deep baking dish in a pan of hot water. Bake 45 min. in 340-350 electric or gas oven. When done, there will be a 2" crust on top. Recipe may be doubled — even quadrupled.

* * *

Other than the fact that our "mystery chef" dashes off about 90 letters on his typewriter each week, there's little more I can tell you. We'll all have to keep our eyes open — I understand he buys all his fish from Hank at the Brant Rock Fish Market, but that's our last clue. Again a reminder to our new readers — your ideas, queries and recipes are always welcome.

CREATURE COMFORTS — by Liz Gorfinkle

With spring comes peepers

Everyone has their favorite spring harbinger. Mine is the elusive northern spring peeper, Hyla c. crucifer.

They are tiny tree frogs, measuring around an inch, with rich, piping songs. I think of Pan, the mythical forest king, when I hear them. And expect to come upon a vision instead of a little frog, when entering marshy glens during lazy evening walks in the woods.

Peepers are easy to hear and hard to find. I've only met a few in "person." They ranged from being a brownish grey to greenish grey color, with black-banded legs and a distinctive dark cross on the back. The cross reminds people of the crucifix. And I remember my childhood friends saying the little frogs sing to rejoice in Easter.

David Clapp, the director of Massachusetts Audubon Society's South Shore Regional Center, said the males are actually attracting females with song to pools of water where they breed.

Clapp referred me to a study done by staff at the Northeastern Forest Experiment Station in Amherst for the Forest Service branch of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. The study compiled information concerning the forest habitats of northeastern reptiles and amphibians, such as the northern spring peeper.

Compared to populations of them elsewhere, peepers are common to abundant in the Northeast. They live in marshy or wet woods, second growth woodlots, sphagnum bogs, non-wooded lowlands, near ponds and swamps.

They usually breed in woodland ponds with aquatic debris from early March until June. And they accompany their season with the familiar song that echoes through the spring night—for the precise-minded, their call is pitched "somewhere between B and E, two octaves above C," according to Mary C. Dickerson's compendium of amphibian lore, The Frog Book. To the less precise, that call means that spring is here.

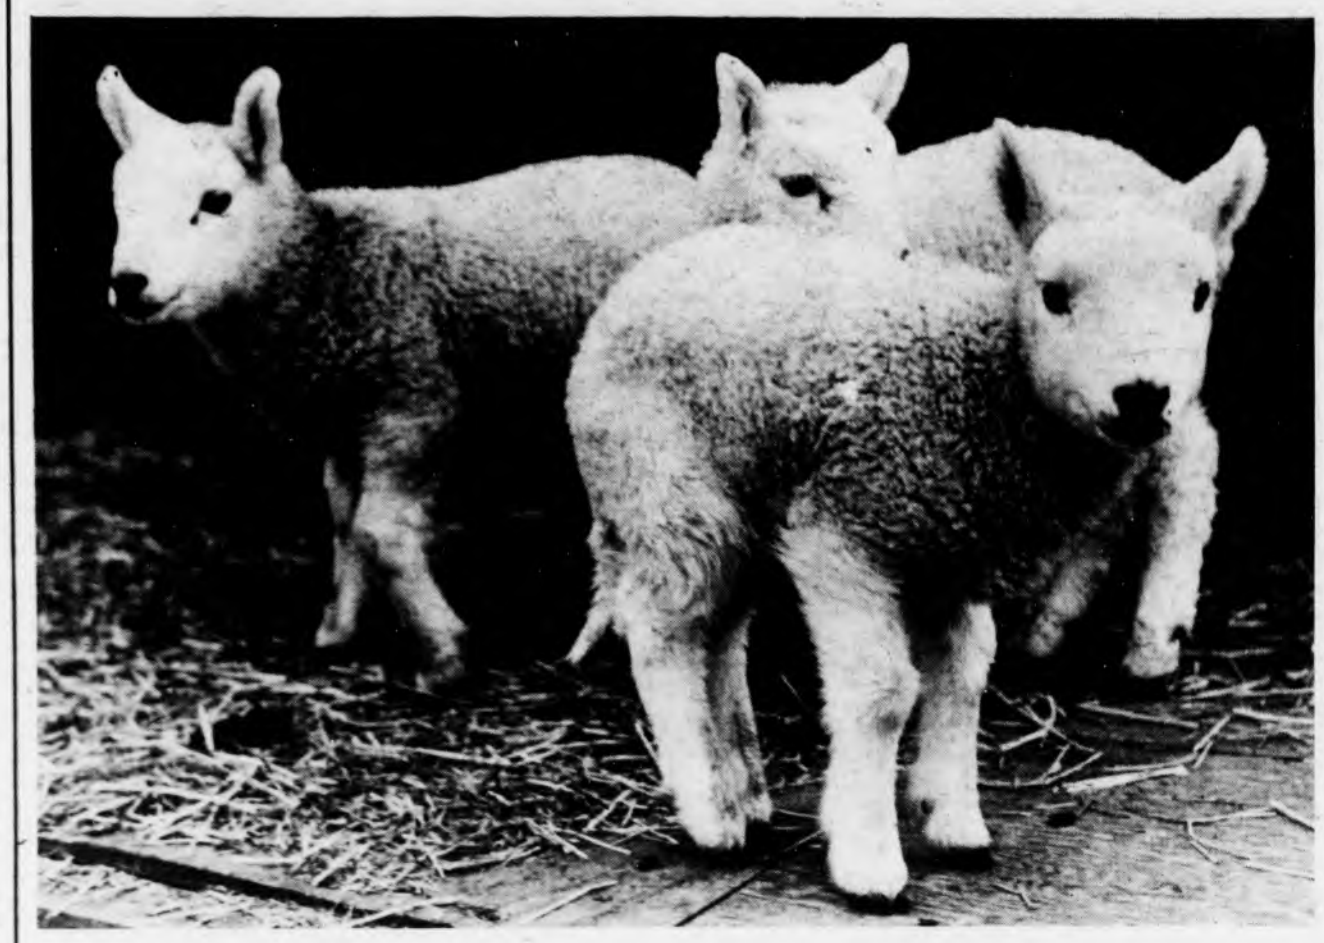
S.S. Art Center class changes

In order to accomodate students still wishing to enroll in the South Shore Art Center's spring classes, a few of the classes have been delayed a week.

Many of the classes are due to begin at the start of the spring semester, April 1, but a few courses have been selected to begin the following week. The center, located at 103 Ripley Road, is offering courses in drawing, painting, figure drawing, sculpture, wood carving, design, photography, and children's art. Advanced registration is required for all classes and workshops at the center.



Three David Tandy classes have been delayed a week. His Introductory Drawing and his Introductory Painting both scheduled for Thursday evenings from 7:15 to 10:15 will begin April 11; his evening Watercolor from 7:15 to 10:15 on Wednesdays will begin April 10.

Walter Horak's Human Figure in Clay on Thursdays from 12:30 to 2:30 p.m. will begin April 11 and his Carved Wood Sculpture on Wednesdays from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m., April 10. The clay course is a basic introduction in the understanding of the human form and its sculptural possibilities. The wood sculpture course will focus on the design and execution of a single piece of carved wood sculpture.

Virginia Moore's Drawing with Charcoal for beginning and intermediate levels will begin Monday, April 8 from 7:30 to 10 p.m. Her course is designed to help students develop valuable skills with charcoal. She will work with her class on what to look for when creating a composition.

Photography for Beginners taught by Paul Fortin will begin Monday, April 8 from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. This is a course for the beginning photographer in color and black and white, and covers all the basics including F stops, shutter speeds, films, filters, composition, lighting, and subject matter. Emphasis will be on recognizing elements of good photography.

For further information on these and other courses on the spring schedule, call the center at 383-9548.

SAAB HAS MORE CARGO SPACE THAN BMW, AUDI, AND VOLVO. COMBINED.

If you add the maximum cargo space of the Audi 5000, the Volvo GLT Turbo and the BMW 733i, you get a total of 53.3 cubic feet.

Yet one Saab 3-door gives you 56.5 cubic feet of maximum cargo space.

As you can imagine, the Saab is a lot more useful than any of the others when you pack up the summer house, provision your boat or make an impulsive buy at a tag sale.

Only the Saab gives you this flexibility because only the Saab has a rear seat that folds down.

Others may claim that as an unfair advantage. But when you test drive a Saab, you'll agree it simply makes good sense. SAAB The most intelligent car ever built.

hitch, just as anticipated.

About 1000 persons competed in the race, 850 of those registered runners. Although it was cold, about 45 degrees at the start of the race, it affected the spectators more than the competitors.

"Last year," Logan said, " it was sunny and 70 degrees and the runners had a bad time. They really prefer to run in this sort of weather. This is a perfect day for them."

The 1000 runners formed the largest field entered in the Cohasset 10K. Each year, as the notoriety of this well-organized event spreads, more entrants are registered.

"This race is definitely getting bigger every year," Logan admitted. " One thousand runners is about the optimum we can handle. We get a little nervous with all these people here at one time. The race really can't have any more than it has this year. We want to keep this race the same way we've run it for the past nine years. It's a fun race. We enjoy it tremendously, the runners love it, and the town is great."

As the hundreds of runners crossed the finish line one by one in front of the Town Hall steps, the hundreds of spectators upon the Common slowly dispersed.

In just about one hour, the crowds that had filled the streets and open space of the historic common were gone again. Until next year.

Town meeting accepts most zoning changes

In the end, most of the zoning bylaw changes the planning board had worked for were adopted. Some "minor" proposals were not successful at Town Meeting this week, but the core of the amendments was approved.

Planning Board Chairman Christine Bassett was "thrilled" with the results of Town Meeting action Tuesday night. After about seven or eight months of intensive study and review, voters issued a resounding approval of the board's efforts.

Tuesday night witnessed a bit of confusion regarding the proposals, particularly concerning Article 41, the so-called core upon which the other nine articles were based.

This article, as explained by Chairman Bassett, proposed an increase in the lot sizes for residential districts, and an increase in the maximum permitted coverage in the highway business and light industry zones.

Almost immediately, planning board member Dan Cotton walked to the floor of Town Meeting and offered an amendment. In essence, he later explained, the amendment would seek to protect the residents who currently live in these districts, and the homes in which they reside.

The amendment proposed by Cotton sought to protect residences already improved and conforming with current zoning bylaws, from having to obtain a special permit for future improvements within a ten year period from the date of adoption of the zoning change.

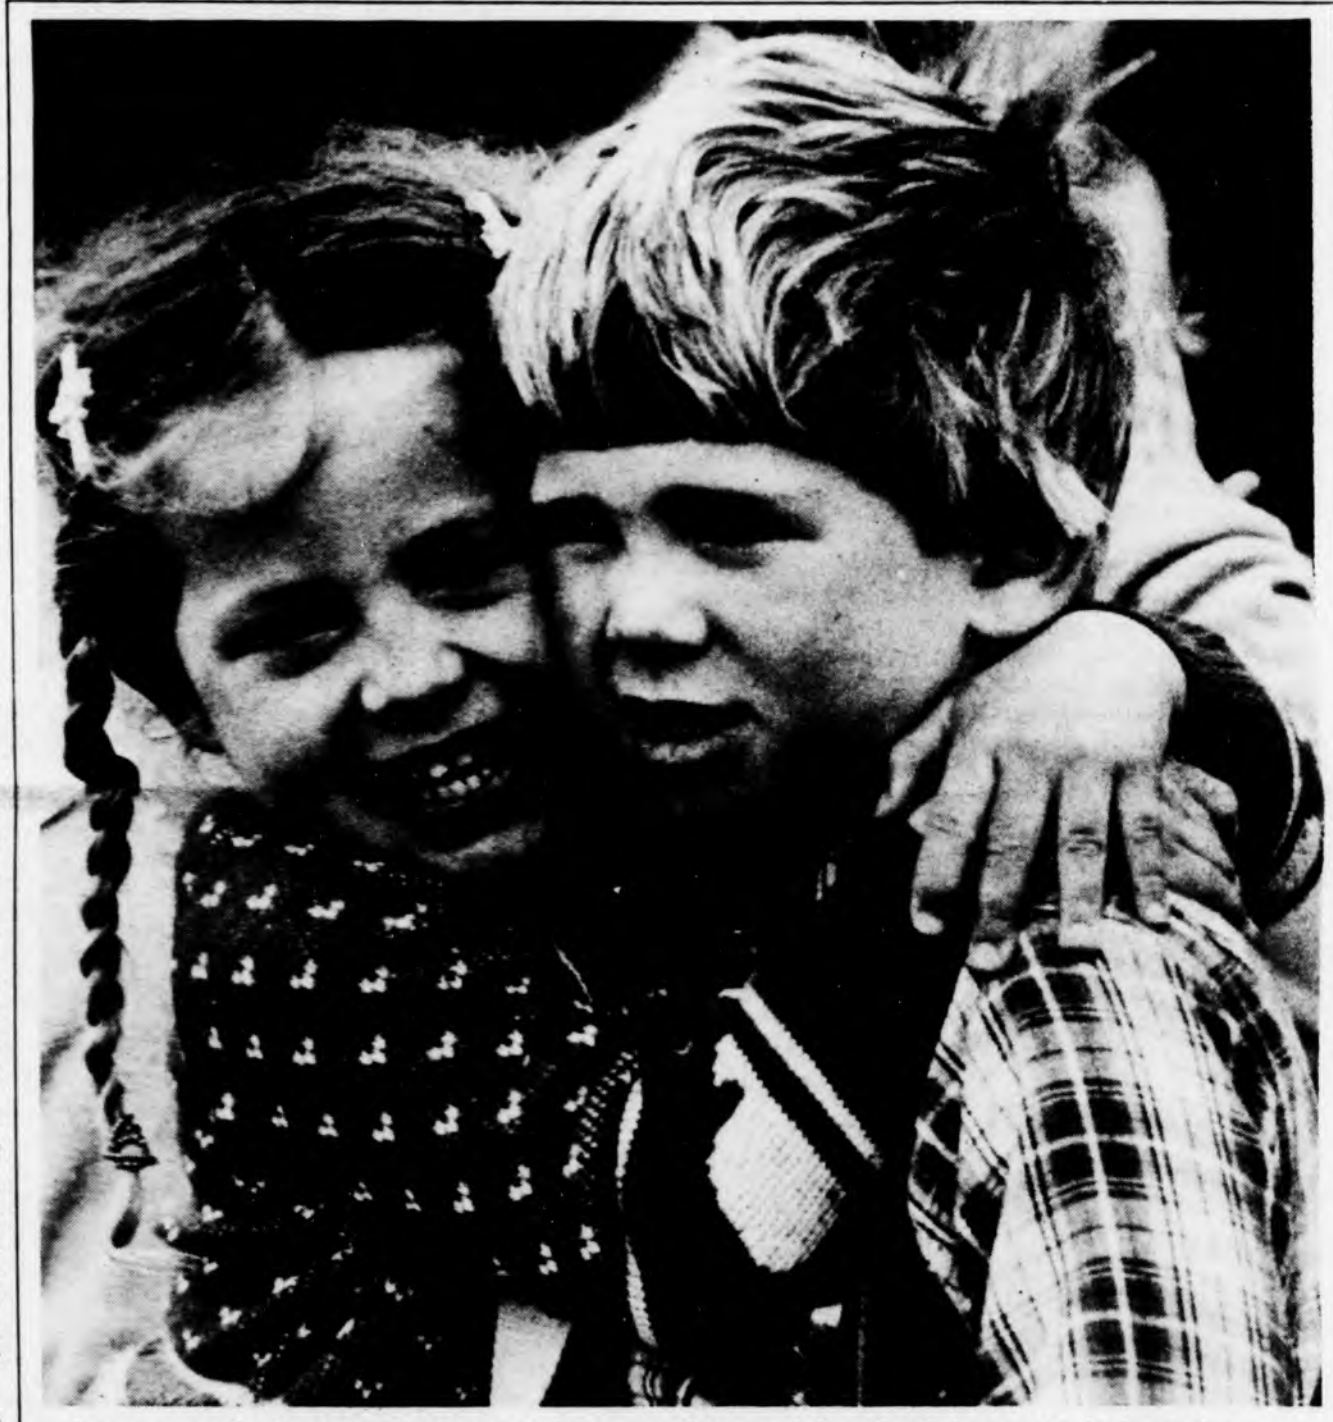
Cotton explained that the board always intended to grandfather in current home improvements in those areas, but the amendment was the only legal form in which to do so.

The board supported Cotton's amendment, noting that the bylaw changes seek to set a manageable growth policy in recognition of the topographic problems in town. "To allow future growth in these areas would exacerbate those problems," Bassett said.

Article 41 sought to increase the minimum lot sizes in the residential districts, bringing them in line with actual development over the past five years. The argument is that continual development upon smaller lots with less acceptable soil conditions, will affect the town's drainage and septic systems.

Although Cotton proposed grandfathering the current lots for a term of ten years, Robert Booth of Joy Place proposed a second amendment. He suggested that all currently-conforming lots be forever protected against the need to obtain a special permit for improvements to the residences. A special permit is the process a property owner must proceed through in order to make changes to a structure in a lot not conforming to the zoning bylaw.

Booth argued that no time limit should be set upon the residences currently conforming within those districts. And although the planning board, selectmen and advisory committee originally favored the initial amendment, they later supported the more expansive second amendment.



Contrary to popular belief, there are hundreds of acres of developable land, enough to accommodate at least 1600 new homes left in Cohasset. It must be protected against unreasonable growth, Bassett explained.

Some, including Austin O'Toole of Haystack Lane, argued that the town is proceeding quickly to a no-growth policy, or towards a policy which prohibits the construction of affordable housing. Dan Leahy of Forest Avenue agreed the town is proceeding to a goal of zero growth density.

Both men urged the planners to study the proposal more closely before putting it before a Town Meeting vote.

The Booth amendment, the proposal which was ultimately approved by Town Meeting that night, would "leave everyone in their existing shapes, to do what

Diane Sullivan

It wasn't a personal disaster for Diane Sullivan when she lost her first bid for public office two years ago. Pragmatic about her defeat by John DeBassio, Sullivan said she learned much about the town, politics and herself.

"I was so tired after that campaign. I wasn't bitter about the loss, it was my first attempt at public office. But I was amazed at how exhausted I was after so many months," she recalled.

Two years later, Sullivan decided to try again. But in the meantime, she had not disappeared from the public's view. In the time since her first campaign, she pushed for an appointment by the Board of Selectmen to the newly-formed drainage advisory committee. A subject which has interested her for many years, Sullivan has been an active member of that active advisory group.

"When I become selectman," she said in an optimistic tone, "I will continue my interest in that

Saturday voting hours

The Cohasset Town Clerk's office reminds all voters to cast their ballot at Saturday's local election.

The polls will be open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. at the Town Hall.

Absentee ballots will be available at the Town Clerk's office, Thursday until 8 p.m. and will close by noontime Friday.

There are 4996 voters registered for this local election. Town Clerk Frances Marks reminds all voters there will be four referenda questions at the end of the ballot. The questions pertain to the reconstruction of the commuter rail.

James Gallagher

The days of apathy have arrived. There are few people willing to take the time to cast their ballot. There are fewer still who are willing to take the risks and run for public office.

There are many reasons why someone decides to accept the challenge of a candidacy. Some may be egotisical, others altruistic. James L. Gallagher III has one simple inspiration - the memory of Gilbert Tower.

Jim, a self-employed tradesman in Cohasset for the past 22 years, worked many of those years for Gilbert. "We had a lot of long talks. I'd say he was the one who got me interested in the town," Jim recalled.

"In his later years, I was his eyes and ears. I'd tell him what was happening with the sewer issue. We'd argue about almost everything. I did not always agree with him, and he didn't always agree with me, but we respected each other.

Cohasset's week . . .

Executive secretary discussion

Following the rejection of the job offer of executive secretary to two different candidates, a Beechwood Street resident recommended that Town Meeting increase the salary.

Chartis Langmaid recommended early in Saturday's session that a salary increase from $28,000 to $35,000 be approved. Noting that the second candidate for the position last week rejected the offer from selectmen in favor of a higher-paying job, Langmaid proposed the salary hike.

The position is very important to the function of Cohasset town government, she argued. "At the very least, we should have the opportunity to offer a decent salary for the position."

Although selectmen said they recognize the importance of the position, Chairman Clifford Mitman rejected the proposal. The board, he said, is comfortable with the idea of selecting the proper candidate, and if necessary, going before the advisory committee for a budget transfer.

Advisory Committee Chairman Jacqueline Dormitzer agreed, adding that a reserve fund transfer could be arranged if the right person was attracted to the job.

Thus far, selectmen have offered the job to two different candidates since the vacancy was created in September. The first candidate mulled over selectmen's offer for several days, and finally rejected the salary and benefit package. The second candidate, selected last week, refused the offer because he had just been offered a higher-paying position in another town.

A few months ago, selectmen asked the advisory committee for a budget increase in the salary account. Although they had requested $30,000, the committee settled on a compromise of $28,000 and benefits.

Chairman Mitman noted the $28,000 is a good starting point from which to attract a qualified person. If the right person is selected for the position, he would feel comfortable requesting additional salary monies from the advisors.

Mitman also noted that because of the size of the town, most qualified, experienced candidates would correctly consider the position a "stepping stone" in their careers. That's acceptable to selectmen, Mitman noted, "as long as the one who is stepping and out is the correct one."

The proposed budget amendment made by Langmaid was not approved by Town Meeting voters.

Board of Health meeting

The Cohasset Board of Health will conduct a public hearing on Thursday, April 11 at 8:15 p.m. concerning revised and new implementation of subsurface rules and regulations for the disposal of sanitary sewage within the confines of the Town of Cohasset.

The hearing will be held at the Board of Health offices, 43 Elm Street; copies of the proposed regulations will be available at the office, commencing April 8.

The year of the champions

At the suggestion of Moderator William Weeks, the school committee proposed a resolution at Saturday's Town Meeting, proclaiming 1985 as "The Year of the Basketball Champions."

School Committee Chairman Joseph Nedrow read the resolution which stated, "whereas the Skippers' many records include the winning of their League Championship, the South Sectional Championship, the Eastern Massachusetts Championship, and finally, the unprecedented victory as Boys' State Division III Champions, and Girls' State Division III runners-up, we hereby extend our sincere congratulations to all members of both teams for their outstanding and record-setting achievements."

The resolution was enthusiastically endorsed. Dr. Nedrow also pointed out that three members of the girls' basketball team were attending the Saturday Town Meeting session.

Long distance welcome

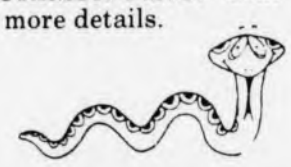
Town Meeting gave a warm welcome Saturday afternoon to Mssr. Dine, from our sister town of Souppes-sur-Loing in France.

Mssr. Dine was introduced (in his native language) by Selectmen Chairman Clifford Mitman. Wishing him a pleasant stay while in Cohasset, Mitman also expressed the hope that residents of the two towns may soon meet.

It is the intention of the two towns, Mitman explained, to develop an exchange program involving residents of the two distant communities. French citizens of Souppes-sur-Loing have already begun preparations to begin the long distance exhange.

The common interest of the two towns officially began in August, 1984 when selectmen proclaimed Souppes-sur-Loing our sister community in France. The association began in August, 1944 when General Thomas Churchill of Cohasset led the Eighth Tank Battalion, Fourth Armored Division and liberated the French town. In celebration of the 40th anniversary of the liberation, Cohaset and Souppes-sur-Loing were officially united as sister towns.

Special absentee hours



There will special absentee voting hours at Town Hall, Thursday, April 11 at the Town Clerk's office. Absentee voting may be completed from 5:30 to 8:30 p.m. that night.

Also, absentee ballots will be available Friday, April 12 from 8:30 a.m. to noon at the Town Clerk's office.

Meeting approves bylaw changes

they want without the zoning board's approval, as long as it is within the zoning regulations of this time."

A Nichols Road resident supported the second amendment. Saying he owned "one of those old arks," the resident said he may someday be forced into developing a two-family unit, a situation not allowed under the new zoning bylaw. But because he is grandfathered in, he may be able to complete such a project should the economic needs arise.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson further explained that improvements are covered under the amendment proposal, but all new subdivisions would not be protected from the special permit process.

Regarding the other articles sponsored by the planning board, most were approved by Town Meeting voters. The green strip proposed as buffers between residential and business and light industry zones was approved. Although selectmen were against the proposal, voters adopted it by a two-thirds margin. During the debate on the issue, Edward Woods of Jerusalem Road praised the long hours of work by the planners, and urged residents to "swallow the small reservations you may have on these amendments . These zoning issues would better protect the town as we know it. Our time and our land is running out."

A provision was also approved, that any business area with parking areas considered in excess for that business keep that area as an open space within the development. Voters supported planner John O'Toole's recommendation that businesses that don't require a required amount of parking spaces, be allowed to keep that specific area unpaved, open and green. A covenant will be signed with the business and the planning board to ensure that procedure is followed.

Cohasset's push to keep the town's section of Wompatuck State Park land an official open space, was also adopted. At the insiste nce of the Board of Selectmen the planners sumitted this article. It would become necessary should the government consider granting the parcel of land to Cohasset. Hingham has already approved the concept.

Voters rejected a planning proposal to require a certain percentage of square footage of width for a residential lot. This article, board member Robert Sturdy said, sought to eliminate "rat tailing" by developers, where several homes share a common swale of percable land, used for several septic systems. But residents, along with selectmen and the advisory committee, felt it was unnecessarily restrictive.

Article 38 was approved by voters, simply a clarification of a bylaw definition. And Article 42, dealing with non conforming lots, was indefinitely postponed.

As presented by Water Commissioner Peter Pratt, article 43 sought to establish a watershed protection district building moratorium. The construction band would be in effect until January, 1987, but Pratt said proposed zoning bylaw changes and regulations would probably be ready for a vote next fall at a special Town Meeting.

The watershed district will seek to protect encroachment upon the town's ground and surface water supply. The article passed without opposition.

The Tuesday night edition of Town Meeting was adjourned at 10:30 p.m. for Wednesday at 7:30 p.m.

Paid for by the Committee to Elect Diane Sullivan

Monday's session begins review of bylaw

Despite a reduction in future quorum requirements, a healthy number of voters turned out for the second session of Town Meeting Monday night.

With a promise of controversy surrounding the proposed zoning bylaw amendments, more than 300 voters flocked to the meeting, which began about 8 p.m. That was the shortest wait for a quorum at any recent Town Meeting, Moderator William Weeks remarked.

Once again, the independent nature of Cohasset rang out as voters soundly defeated a well-publicized effort by the business community to undertake a master plan in favor of the bylaw changes. Chamber of Commerce Vice President Cynthia Peters presented a resolution, urging the formation of a citizens' advisory master plan committee, to oversee the implementation of a plan for Cohasset.

Despite Weeks' clarification that a resolution carries no enforcement power, voters defeated the Chamber's suggestion.

And again, the businessmen were rebuked when voters denied a representative of a planning consultant firm, invited to the meeting by the Chamber, to speak to the gathering. Although this courtesy is traditionally extended to non residential guests, there was no motion made by the voters to allow the planner to address the meeting that night.

Charlotte Leland of Margin Court suggested that the invited guest not speak before the articles, but after their completion.

Donald DiMichele summed up his opposition to the Chamber's resolution by noting the seven to nine member group would include an equal number of businessmen and residents. Since the amount of land in Cohasset is largely residential, he felt there should be a greater number of residents on the committee.

Louis Walinsky of Elm Court, a professional planner and longtime advocate of master planning, warned residents that the "advocates of this resolution propose it as an alternative to the zoning bylaws. I want to say these changes are not alternatives, and that any plan the town will have must have as its component the zoning bylaw."

The Chamber's resolution was defeated soundly by a voice vote.

Prior to this discussion, was a vote to reconsider Town Meeting's previous vote Saturday to lower future Town Meeting quorums to 100. Dan Leahy of Forrest Avenue had suggested the reconsideration, saying that a majority of three voters did not constitute a sound victory for the proposal.

Once again, Government Structure Committee Chairman John McNabb Jr. urged voters to stay with the quorum reduction decision. Saying the proposal has been publicized since January, and discussed for one hour on Saturday, McNabb noted "many important issues are decided by close votes."

The motion to reconsider the vote was soundly defeated by almost 200 voters at the meeting.

Four of the 11 planning board-sponsored articles were reviewed and voted at the Monday night session. The board received mixed support for their proposals.

The first, Article 32, was approved. This article redefines four areas of the zoning bylaw regarding structural coverage, maximum permitted coverage of a lot, height limitations and lot line requirements.

Article 33 dealt with a redefined description of residential cluster developments. Local developer Wayne Sawchuck said he supported the proposal, except the limitation which prohibited the use of one unit as a sales unit. Saying he was involved in a current cluster project, Sawchuck said the limitation was severely restrictive. Even when a resident in a home attempts to sell his own house, he is technically using the home as a sales unit from which to sell the property.

Although the planning board offered to change the word "unit" to "sales office," Sawchuck remained opposed to the restriction. His amendment, to allow the sale of the model unit, was defeated. The main motion regarding the revised definitions, was approved.

The following article redefined a perimeter fence, limiting the height of a new fence constructed within 15 feet of a lot line to three feet. As Planning Board member Daniel Cotton explained, the amendment was spurred by the need for increased visibility and safety as a vehicle enters and exits a driveway. The advisory committee and selectmen did not recommend Article 34, stating it attempted to unnecessarily legislate fencing in all lots, not simply corner lots as in the old bylaw.

Although the planners emphasized the bylaw pertained only to the first 15 feet of property, voters defeated the measure. As Dr. Michael Bliss of Summer Street noted, the definition was too vague. "Does it include picket fences, which you can see through. Or is the restriction on all fences?" he asked.

A height restriction proposed for new residential construction was also soundly defeated by the Town Meeting voters. By a hand count of 180-75, voters rejected the amendment which would affect new construction. Once again, selectmen and advisory committee members agreed the redefinition was unnecessarily stringent.

Developer Sawchuck also noted the proposal was not limiting the height of only residential structures, but included all new construction throughout the town.

In other action Monday night, voters were kind to Highway Surveyor Harold Litchfield, approving all requests he made for funding. Some of the larger requests were made for road resurfacing, although the state will fund the major portion of that project. Despite rejection from the advisory committee, voters approved a $9500 appropriation to construct steel reinforced guardrails along Beach Street as it bends around a marshy area. A $40,000 appropriation to purchase a diesel truck which will replace a 14 year-old highway vehicle, was also approved.

Voters also approved, with little discussion, a proposal to design a transfer station for the landfill. The $5000 will be used to develop plans for some type of transfer station in which Cohasset solid waste will be transported to a regional disposal site, perhaps SEMASS. Disposal Area Study Committee Chairman Don DiMichele said the money would not be spent until the town is sure of the regional alternative it will select.

JAMES L. GALLAGHER for Selectman
(2 year Term)

To the voters of Cohasset:

It is only after much thought and consideration have I decided to declare myself a candidate for election to the Board of Selectmen. Having been involved with numerous Town affairs, committees, and commissions, I am fully aware of the time, effort, and dedication required to serve the Town and its residents fairly, honestly, and well as a member of the Board of Selectmen. I am committing myself based on what I am willing, and have to offer. I am willing to give 100%, and feel that I have the necessary qualifications to represent all residents of Cohasset regarding the various issues that will come before the Board of Selectmen.

I have been a member of the Recreation Commission for the past 5 years, serving as Vice-Chairman since 1983. Because of my role as a Recreation Commissioner, I have been integrally involved with various concerns of residents including laison from the Recreation Commission to both the Harbor Study and Cable T.V. Committees for the past 2 years. I have been involved with Facility Permit program developing rules, regulations and fee structures for 3 years, and during the past 5 years helped develop and present the Recreation Department budget, seeing it through the onset of Proposition 2½.

Through association, I am aware of the functions, needs, and concerns of all town departments. Having been before House-Committees at the State House regarding recreation legislation, I have a familiarity with, and working knowledge of various state branches of government, and am willing to approach any branch or seat of state government that may be of help to Cohasset should the need arise.

Having 2 children of our own, and because of my role with the Recreation Commission, my wife, Patty and I have volunteered our services with numerous youth and adult recreation and sports programs; chaperoning ski trips, coaching soccer, baseball, and street hockey, as well as serving as a Cub Scout Den Father.

I have also worked as a volunteer administrative coordinator for various youth programs and have helped with Recreation Department special events. Other community work has included helping design and lay-out the new Beechwood Play Lot and development of the Elm's Meadow skating area.

I have been a resident of Cohasset for the past 25 years, graduating from Cohasset High School in 1964. Currently, I am a self-employed Master Tradesman, and have been for the past 22 years. Cohasset is, and hopefully always will be my home. I wish to continue to serve both you and our town in the capacity of Selectman. However, I will not stand before you and promise you what no one can predict regarding upcoming matters as they face the Board of Selectmen for disposition, but I will stand before you and ask you for support based on my record of service to our community.

For your consideration, I thank you.

'Scapino' April 25

The Cohasset Dramatic Club is preparing for its spring production "Scapino" - adapted from Moliere's comedy by playwrights Frank Dunlop and Jim Dale.

The play is directed by Ellen Kelly of Weymouth and Tamsyn Elliot of Cohasset is the stage manager.

A spring background for the festivities is set in Scapino - Naples, Italy.

The casting of Bob Julian of Cohasset as Scapino is ideal since he brings a solid background of stage experience to the part. He is remembered for his past roles in such Cohasset Dramatic Club productions as "Nausea" in "Cinderella," "Lt. Monahan" in "Detective Story" and "Spirit Present" in "Christmas Carol."

The cast includes many young adults.

Leandro is played by Ken Agress of Scituate, a senior at Scituate High where he has participated in the high school chorus, jazz choir and has membership with the Chamber singers.

Ken's dramatic experiences include roles in "Adaptation," "Tom Jones," "Our Town" and "David and Lisa."

The part of Giacinta is portrayed by Any Nordahl of South Weymouth. Amy is presently attending Weymouth South High School and is enrolled as well at the South Shore Conservatory, Hingham, in a theatre workshop class. Her versatile dramatic background is highlighted by roles in "Play it Again, Sam," and "Bell, Book, and Candle," both at Weymouth South.

The role of Zerbinetta is played by Beth Colburn of Cohasset. She is currently working at Cohasset Village Printers and enjoys acting, drawing and singing.

Her theatre experience was enriched at Eastern Connecticut State University in Stage Managing, Acting and Directing. Beth has been active in this year's earlier productions of the Cohasset Dramatic Club - makeup and set construction for "Cinderella" and stage managing and set painting for "Mornings at Seven."

Other young talents in Scapino are: Laura Doherty and Catja De Haas of Cohasset - Waitresses; Patrick Healy of Scituate and Matthew Kuhn of Cohasset -Waiters; Brian McDermott of Weymouth - Busboy; Caroline Struzik of Marshfield and Susannah Carr of Hingham - Schoolgirls and Mary McElroy of Cohasset - a Nun.

The roles of the gypsies are delightfully interpreted by Judy Gutry, Kathy Haase and Joanne Cannon of Cohasset and Rita Heidman, Kirsty Monroe and Eileen Lavelle of Scituate.

Four performance dates for Scapino are scheduled at the Cohasset Town Hall. Thursday, April 25 through Sunday, April 28.

There will be three evening productions: Thursday, Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. and a fourth matinee Sunday at 2 p.m.

Tickets for Scapino may be purchased in advance at Fleming's in Cohasset Center, or at the door at the times of performances. The tickets are $4 for adults and $2 for children.

Chiropractic for HEALTH

by Dr. Kevin M. Neill, Chiropractic Physician

THE CHIROPRACTOR DEFINED

Nine and a half million Americans took their aches and pains to a chiropractor last year. And last year, for the first time, the U.S. Olympic Committee appointed an official chiropractic physician to the American team. Still, many people are not really sure what a chiropractor does. Chiropractors treat a wide variety of muscular and skeletal diseases, from migraine headaches to sore knees, by adjusting spinal misalignments that interfere with the normal functioning of the nervous system. They are often able to trace pain in other parts of the body to trouble in the spine. Instead of using drugs or surgery, most chiropractors treat patients with manual adjustment of the spine, deep muscle massage, ultrasound, exercise therapy and nutritional counseling.

Those aches and pains that you have been putting up with for many years may well respond favorably to modern chiropractic applications. More and more people are realizing the benefits to be gained by such procedures. From most every sport and most every problem, there have been tremendous advances in the science of chiropractic. To learn more about how chiropractic may benefit you, we welcome your call at the COHASSET CHIROPRACTIC OFFICE, 760 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Suite 12. Tel. 383-1211, 1214. Daily by appt.

Attorney answers board's charges . . .

By Mike Berger

An attorney representing a Cohasset doctor charged by the Scituate Board of Health with failure to report a communicable disease said last week his client should be lauded and not villified for his actions.

Atty. William Rowerdink, representing Dr. William Raskin, lashed out at the health board and Agent Walter Walsh for contending Dr. Raskin did not report a case of hepatitis to the proper authorities.

The health board has directed Walsh to seek a criminal complaint against Raskin, director of the Rte 3A Medical Clinic.

Walsh said he sent letters to all area doctors, asking their cooperation in reporting communicable diseases to the Board of Health. Walsh said one was sent to Dr. Raskin, who, according to Walsh, told him he was unaware he had to tell the Scituate Board of Health.

Rowerdink, who last week began representing Dr. Raskin, said, "What he said (Walsh) is a lie, that Walsh ever sent a letter to Dr. Raskin. Dr. Raskin was never on any list to receive a letter from Walsh.

"Walsh has no authority to send a letter, to call, to talk with a Cohasset doctor and he has no jurisdiction over any Cohasset doctor.

"Walsh has not read and clearly does not understand the statute on which he's working. He doesn't know what he's doing and he's going to pay the legal consequences. He has jurisdiction over Scituate doctors only."

Rowerdink said the civil statute requires Raskin to report the incident to the Cohasset health board or the town where the patient was treated.

"Dr. Raskin made an excellent preliminary diagnosis and made sure the patient was quarantined. As soon as the blood test was confirmed he immediately contacted the person and made sure everyone was innoculated." The victim worked part-time at the Mill Wharf Restaurant in Scituate.

Atty. Rowerdink is representing one victim who has sued the Alamo Restaurant in Abington for failing to report the disease in an earlier case. "This is exactly the opposite of that situation. In the Alamo instance it was horrendous negligence. In this case Dr. Raskin should be commended and not villified," Rowerdink said.

As of Tuesday, Walsh still intended to seek a court complaint against Dr. Raskin. Walsh said it is critical for all doctors to cooperate and report communicable diseases to the community's Board of Health. Taking Dr. Raskin to court puts all doctors on notice the Scituate Board of Health is serious about this requirement, Walsh said.

Heaven forbid we shouldn't be tanned before spring vacation! Kimberly Byrns and Susan McDonough get a little afterschool sun. (Rose Cundari photo)

☐I had a note from Larry Fone this week, who asked me to remind everyone of the Arts Lottery Council and the fact that they are taking applications for funding Cohasset artists and Cohasset art organizations. There is $900 for this funding period, and Larry urges interested people to get an application (at the selectmen's office), then mail them to Larry Fone, 17 Reservoir Rd., Cohasset. These applications must be received by April 29, as the review will take place that evening. In case you didn't know it, the dollars available for this come from "The Game," and the amount each town receives is based on the population.

☐The Cohasset Rotary Club, the American Legion Post #118 and the Cohasset Police Association all got together to sponsor the Recreation Department's Easter Egg Hunt, and it was a lot of fun for all three through 12 year-olds. The weather was super, and the chocolate eggs were said to be the best ever!

☐In case you're wondering what Peter Breen is up to now that he no longer runs the Winter Garden, he is a new associate with L&R Realty and Mortgage Company representing the Scituate, Cohasset, Hull and Hingham area.

☐Congratulations to Stephen Bjorklund and Brad Walker, who recently completed a basic fundamentals of real estate course given by the Conway Country School of Real Estate, Inc., which is based in Hanover. The course included basics of real estate laws, contracts, financing, mortgages, zoning, real estate appraisal and a review of state license requirements and laws. Successful completion of the course is a prerequisite to taking the Mass. real estate salesperson's license exam.

☐Regina Schultz is this year's Cancer Crusade Chairman for Cohasset. She will be recruiting, organizing and directing the calls of a group of volunteers who visit our homes for donations. Money col ted funds research, educational pr rams and services. Give her a hand!

☐Tara Stanford wanted everyone to be sure to know that she won't be here for April vacation, she'll be vacationing in Florida with some of her classmates. Nora Leary, Ingrid Anderson, Chrissy Pompeo, Janet Di, Tracy Fitzpatrick, are among the rest that are going. They know that they will have a great time. They are just hoping like crazy that the weather is nothing but sunny during their stay. Watch your mail. Tara loves to send postcards.

☐Looks like Coach Bill Fallon is working on another winner as the girls softball team is undefeated at this writing! Here's to a success for you all!

☐Staci Stobart sets the pace again this week, as she is the announced winner of the Henry Bean Scholarship at Holy Cross College. That means that she has won a full scholarship for four years! This is given to the entering freshman with the strongest background in Latin and the Classics. Good girl, Staci, way to go!

☐Be sure to include the South Shore Art Center's Vacation Drop-In on your child's agenda during vacation next week. It will be held at the Center between 10:30 and noon, from April 16 through April 19. It is for the ages of seven through 12, and your child may work with paints, drawing, collage, clay, mixed media or film as their project. A great time is had by all who participate — ask any of the students that took advantage of this opportunity during the February vacation.

☐Here's hoping that Mercie Nichols continues to recuperate with the same speed that she is going, after her recent fall. She is at home, and doing great!

☐Baron Salvador is feeling better every day, and we sure are glad to hear it.

☐ Staci Stobart is in the news again...Staci, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Stobart of Fern Way, and a senior at Cohasset High, won the DAR Good Citizenship award. The award was presented recently at the Lothrop House. Staci has a cousin that lives in Virginia, and she won the award in December!

☐With vacation time approaching, be sure to remember to call or write with your news. One gal told me recently that she felt as though she "was blowing her own horn" to write or call about her child's accomplishments! That's not true at all, and remember, you make the news possible! Planners review Knapp estate subdivision

By Lisa J. Messersmith

At the planning board meeting April 3, over 50 neighbors and interested parties attended the preliminary site plan review of a 21-lot subdivision proposed for the 14-acre Knapp estate owned by Mary Lou and John Roy of Jerusalem Road.

Equipped with assessors maps, engineer Fred DeFeo and attorney Charles Humphreys explained the proposed plans, saying the Roys wanted to get the plans into the planning board before town meeting when residents will vote on proposed zoning by-law changes. These changes will increase lot sizes from 20,000 square feet to 35,000 square feet in residential area B where the Knapp estate is located. Thus, the 21-lot plan would have been reduced to a 14 to 16 lot plan if the Roys had not submitted their plans before Town Meeting.

Planning board members raised questions about the ability of the land to pass the perc tests required to build. DeFeo said he has a plan to dewater the areas which are wet and then conduct perc tests.

Although the meeting was not a public hearing, planning board members acknowledged neighbors' concerns about already existing water problems on Deep Run and Rust Way, and the possibility a new subdivision in the area would only exacerbate these problems.

Member Robert Sturdy raised the question as to where the additional 12,000 gallons of water pumped into the ground from individual septic systems would go.

DeFeo proposed to change the drainage patterns of the site so the water drains into a retention area which would allow them to better control drainage from the property. "This will reduce the flow which goes into Deep Run and Rust Way," DeFeo asserted.

DeFeo added he did not know if all the lots would perc. When Sturdy suggested a hydrogeological study be conducted on the site, DeFeo said the study would be too expensive and "was not the normal course of action for a subdivision."

Sturdy summed up the concerns of the planning board: "We have to address the real issues, not just simply meeting Title 5. We have to provide development that can stay in place under whatever conditions . . . that you don't have failed septic systems or liability to the town. The water table is already high - this is the reality of life. Title 5 does not work everywhere in Cohasset. If we put water into the ground, we must move it out."

"The project should be considered as a whole," Chairman Christine Bassett added. "This is a high density area with a number of topographical problems. We have to consider how this will effect neighboring sites."

With the question of the ability of the lots to pass the perc tests in mind, Basset said, "There is a possibility that this subdivision will never be built."

The Roys believe their subdivision will make things better for the area. "We believe this project will improve the drainage situations of the neighboring sites,' Humphreys said.

The subdivision lots will be deeded to the Roys' children according to John and Mary Roy, who also own Kimballs By The Sea Inn on Cohasset Harbor.

The planning board members along with members of the Board of Health and the Design and Review Board will walk the Knapp estate April 15 before the next scheduled planning board meeting April 17.

In other business, the planning board met with the new owner/developer of Wheelwright Farm, a planned cluster development off Beechwood Street. The new owner, Jack Rodolph, has decided to change the design of the 42-single family units and consequently raise the average price tag per unit from $135,000 to $212,000.

Rodolph plans to create a colonial look for the homes rather than the more contemporary atmosphere under Wayne Sawchuk, the previous developer's design. Rodolph will finish the homes with red cedar clapboards and white cedar shingles for the roofs.

"The board and the townspeople have expressed concern about whatever happened to low cost housing," planning board member Dan Cotton said.

Rodolph replied that with the high cost of land in desirable towns such as Hingham, Duxbury, and Cohasset and with the cost of site work at an estimated $25,000 per unit, he was forced to charge more for the units.

Member Patrick Plante suggested Rodolph keep at least 40 percent of the homes at the price originally quoted by Sawchuk.

Attorney Harry Goodman said, "We are faced with the mathematics of it, but the suggestion might be a good suggestion."

"The board feels strongly about affordable housing," Basset said. "We would like to see you make an attempt to keep some of the housing affordable."

Rodolph is expected to return to the planning board at their next meeting April 17 to submit a new covenant which will make reference to the new owner of Wheelwright Farm.

OVERBOOKING
Although the Civil Aeronautics Board no longer oversees the airline industry, the Department of Transportation enforces many of the industry's rules. The rule on overbooking does not prohibit the practice. It does, however, penalize carriers when they miscalculate and deny seats to passengers with confirmed reservations. An airline with an overbooked flight may offer cash, free flights or both to volunteers willing to relinquish their seats. If enough volunteers cannot be found, the airline must get the bumped passenger to his destination as quickly as possible on an alternate flight. In addition, they must pay him the value of his ticket, up to $200, if the substitute flight is not expected to arrive within one hour of his original schedule.
If you want a truly exotic cruise this summer, we have come up with some great offerings on the most fascinating and exciting places for you to see. Come in and let us show you what we have in store. Perhaps a visit to China would appeal to you. Visit historical cities, ancient with Chinese culture. You will witness the greatest of Chinese treasures; the interior of China. Homeowners often ask why Bird Inc. roofing shingles are made with fibreglass. Actually they are still an asphalt shingle built on a fibreglass base. There are several advantages to this. They have a class A fire resistance rating, they won't stretch or shrink and they are virtually impervious to rot, mildew, sun, rain and snow.
Bird Inc., offers five varieties of roof shingles to fit every need with the best warranties in the industry.
To insure a high standard of workmanship that will equal it's quality line of products, Bird has created a Professional Roofing Contractors Program with several tough requirements.

Go to the polls

Well, another week has passed. We have done our job. While other towns have bypassed Town Meeting business for lack of quorum, we have stuck to our responsibility.

As far as Town Meetings go, this one won't win any awards for excitement. But it was interesting and thought-provoking. It was encouraging to see people attend the meeting, voice their ideas and present suggestions that were bright and imaginative.

This week is our turn at the local elections. Again, the ballot doesn't contain the most exciting races to hit this town. But they are nevertheless important to us all.

Can you imagine giving an election and no one showing? It's happening all around us. Imagine the chagrin of our neighbors in Holbrook, where an all-time record low voter turnout of eight percent showed their faces at the polls.

That will not happen here.

And just as a little incentive to get to those polls . . . remember what happened exactly one year ago? Leave to us to have the first tie-vote in a municipal election.

Community editor Jane Lane began her first day on the job the Monday after the election. As she walked into the police station to gather the election results, her face paled. "A tie vote. Why me?" she moaned.

But things do happen in Cohasset. And the residents are the ones to make these things happen. Your ballot does count, just ask Mary Jane McArthur or Doris Golden. If just one more person had bothered to cast their ballot that day, everything would have been different. We would never had to go through the innuendo, the hurt, and the cost of a new election.

We think we've learned our lesson. Certainly we accepted our responsibility this week by attending Town Meeting. We discussed the issues rationally, we asked questions and we voted sensibly.

Now, it's off to the Town Hall this Saturday. The polls will be open at 8 a.m. until 6 p.m. The candidates have worked hard for our consideration and attention. Study the issues, and be sure to make a choice.

Your vote may make a difference.

It's nice to be back

To the editor,

I would like to publically commend and thank the Cohasset Rotary for the excellent job in organizing and directing the 1985 Cohasset Road Race by the Sea.

The selectmen, police, fire and highway departments, the Boy Scouts, local businessmen, Channel 3 Cable TV, and all supportive residents should feel proud of the way in which the day's activities were conducted.

While it has been 11 years since I've moved from the area (I return so often some think I never left), I still refer to Cohasset as my home and with all the negative events that make the news I was most happy to return and participate in such a positive happening.

Thank you all again for allowing me to say "Cohasset, you're so nice to come home to."

Jack Flanagan
Columbia, Md.

Thanks to Gallagher

To the editor,

The Cohasset Recreation Commission would like to extend their sincere gratitude to James Gallagher, who has been an active member of the Commission, and Vice-Chairman of the Recreation Commission since 1983. Jim's functions also included liason member to the Cohasset Study Committee, and member to the Cable T.V. Council, as well as volunteering further time and efforts coaching and coordinating various sports programs. Our many thanks go to Jim and his work, time and efforts as a Recreation Commissioner.

Jack Worley
Recreation Director

Rotary thanks town

To the Editor:

On behalf of the Cohasset Rotary Club, I wish to express our deepest gratitude and appreciation to all of the residents of Cohasset for their support and cooperation on Sunday. The road race was an event in which we can all take pride. The runners and spectators all felt the warmth of the Cohasset community.

Special thanks to the selectmen and town departments without whose support the event would not exist. Harold Litchfield, Peter Laugelle, Clark Chatteton and Richard Yocum provided unsurpassed assistance.

The coordination of Co-Chairmen Roy Fitzsimmons and Peter Logan with their committee heads, John DeBassio, John Muncy, Gene Crowell, Don Harold, Kevin O'Connor, John Sadler and all the Rotarians provided an event that certainly christened spring.

Again, our heartfelt gratitude to all for their assistance and support, especially the Cohasset Mariner and Cablevision.

John Burns,
president
Cohasset Rotary Club

Survey clarifications

To the editor,

The article "Survey leads to center search" which appeared in the March 21 issue of the Mariner presented incorrectly some of the survey's findings.

The response to the senior center survey was favorable with an ample number of seniors indicating an interest in using a center. It also confirmed that there is a need for the centralization of existing, scattered programs and news and information for senior citizens. This project will now proceed with the exploration of site possibilities in town where such a senior center might launch its beginings.

The Mariner article stated that the survey was conducted "community-wide". The survey was only mailed to residents age 60 and over.

The article stated that the 75 respondents who answered "yes" to the question of whether they would use a senior center was "understandable because only 17 percent of the persons who participated in the survey had ever visited a senior center." The fact that only 17 percent of the respondents had ever visited a senior center pertained to the number of people who answered the questions of using a senior center with a "don't know." Since so many had not visited a center, and a precise model of a center has not yet been presented, this response was understandable.

Also, the number of those answering "yes" they

A look at the contested offices in election

(These statements from the contested candidates for public office are responses they made to two questions posed by the Cohasset League of Women Voters. Ed.)

1. What experience and or special qualities do you have that would help you perform the duties of the office you seek?
2. What are the most significant problems and opportunities you see for this position during the next term of office?

Trustee of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library -one year vacancy on three-year term

Michele A. Buckley

1. I have more than fifteen years experience in diverse environments. With a degree in special education, I am qualified to teach special needs classes. With a certification in library science, I supervise library operations in the Hull Public School system. I am also a librarian at the Glastonbury Abbey. Before teaching, I worked at the John Hancock Life Insurance Company operating a terminal console. While at the Hancock, I completed several courses in computer programming. Additional teaching experiences include tutoring at the Worcester Community Action Council, Rutland Heights Hospital and a Montessori school. I was a camp counselor at the Cardinal Cushing School for Exceptional Children. I hold a professional membership in the American Library Association. Other memberships include the International Oceanographic Foundation, Cerebral Palsy of the South Shore area, the Smithsonian Institute and the South Shore Natural Science Center. As a professional librarian, I will give a different perspective to the various situations that will arise.

2. The Paul Pratt Library has an excellent professional staff as well as an outstanding volunteer program. The children should continue to take advantage of the story hours. Teenagers should be encouraged to volunteer as much as possible at the library. More children should become involved in the summer reading program. To make the library a focal point of the community, it should join the Old Colony Network. If Cohasset belongs to this network, the people will get prompt service and the staff will be able to work more efficiently. I would recommend that the professional and business subscriptions be expanded.

Mary M. Deveney

1.As manager of Cantomedia, a Boston-based film company, my duties include maintaining correspondence with the accounting and contracting offices of our clients and tracking budget spending for our producers and directors. Prior to this, I managed two successful bookstores on the South Shore. I have been a volunteer at the Paul Pratt Library, the Social Service League and the Deer Hill School. I organized Writers, Ink., a group of local writers for public readings and co-founded Abbey Writers, a weekly workshop for published writers. I live on Summer Street with my three daughters and have been a resident of Cohasset for fifteen years. I feel my background and experience with budgeting, book acquisition, personnel and public relations will be an asset to the Board of Trustees in helping to make the complex and difficult decisions with which they are faced.

2.As a trustee of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, each decision is one which requires more research of the considered materials, followed by a deeper study of alternatives and consequences. This position provides the opportunity to have input into the quality and growth of the library and to create a current, active and community-sponsored institution we all share with pride.

Recreation Commission - one vacancy for five year term

Robert G. Beggan:

1. I have been affiliated with organized sports in this town for the past seven years. I have coached Farm League and Little League baseball. I have been a soccer coach in the fall recreation program. I have coached and administered the street hockey program. I am currently a coach in the spring soccer league. I have a B.S. education from Boston State College. I have resided in Cohasset for 14 years. I am a salesman for a corrugated container firm. I have three children, Matt, 13, Catie, 10, and Hannah, 5.

2. I seek this position to help the youth of this town. I do not feel that there are any significant problems in the Commission. I feel that the Board is well run and in tune with the needs of all the youth of Cohasset.

Deborah Eaton:

1. For eight years, I have held a responsible senior management position with a largé, non-profit human services agency. I have gained a thorough understanding of budgets, and of ways to maximize results in spite of limited resources. I am familiar with all phases of program development - i.e., needs assessments, program planning, working with Advisory Boards, negotiating to reach a consensus and coordinating available resources.

I have good analytical skills and creative problem-solving abilities. I can usually see many different aspects of a given problem, and give careful and objective consideration to possible solutions before reaching a final decision.

As the mother of two young children, I have an ever-growing awareness of the range of children's interests and the types of structured activities they enjoy. I believe the combination of my professional personal experiences give me a perspective that would be an asset to the Recreation Commission and the people of Cohasset.

2. The Recreation Commission faces the challenge of continuing to provide quality recreational programs to a diverse and changing population, within a limited budget. Given this context, I feel there are two areas which deserve serious attention.

The first area requires that we recognize the increasing numbers of families where both parents or the single parents (or the single parent) work outside the home. I believe the Commission must give full consideration to the unique needs of these families when planning activities and formulating policy, if the Recreation Program is to continue adequately serving the entire community.

Secondly, I feel the developing programs for young adolscents should become a priority for the Commission. These young people are significantly at risk of developing problems with drugs or alcohol, particularly if other, more interesting activities are not readily available to them.

I recognize the problems inherent in providing expanded services to these two groups. However, I believe that with the necessary imagination, sensitivity, and commitment, it can be done.

Boys' track

This spring, about 40 boys went out for the track team. Coach Jon Anderson was pleased with his large turnout. He feels that although it is hard to tell how the team will do this year, he is confident they will improve over last season. Cohasset's goal this year is to win three or four meets in their exceptionally tough league. Anderson was impressed with his team's spirit and feels their attitude is the best it's ever been.

Returning seniors this year inlcude John Rattenbury, Michael DeSantis, Peter Cotter, Garry Parziale, and Steven Fries.

Anderson feels certain that Michael DeSantis will be one of the league's leaders in pole vaulting, while John Rattenbury will be a top sprinter. Anderson also mentioned two newcomers on the team, Mark Lahive and John Hall as being excellent shotputters.

Underclassmen David Schultz and Mark McManus also impressed Anderson with their accomplishments thus far.

The boys have their first meet on Tuesday in Abington. Last year the Skippers defeated Abington and hope to repeat their performance again this year.

Arts lottery grants

The Cohasset Arts Lottery Committee will meet Monday, April 29 to review applications for funding for those involved in the arts.

Cohasset individuals and organizations are urged to apply. Applications are available at the Cohasset Town Hall selectmens' office. Completed applications must be returned to the office by noon, April 29. The money is made available by the Mass. Game Lottery via the Mass. Arts Lottery Commission, the organization which ultimately approves funding recommended by our Cohasset committee.

Funding is provided at the Cohasset Town Accountant's office with certification of money "spent." Since it is a state agency, a five to six-month wait for payment is not unusual.

The purpose of this funding is to promote interest and provide Cohasset people the opportunity to be in touch with the arts, and to encourage individual artists.

For additional information, call Larry Fone after 5 p.m. weekdays, 383-0898.

GSA letter shocks Hingham resident

By Judy Gilman

Leavitt Street resident Rick Rizzotto spent a good deal of time last spring and summer contacting state and federal officials and telling them what a good idea it would be if the General Services Administration (GSA) would give the Cohasset Annex land at the end of his street to the Department of Environmental Management (DEM) to add to Wompatuck State Park.

And he convinced many other residents to write and phone as well. The interest generated led to a joint federal-state press conference at the site early last fall where DEM's James Gutensohn, Secretary of Environmental Affairs James Hoyt and U.S. Rep. Gerry Studds (D-Cohasset) optimistically predicted that the annex land would be added to Wompatuck, adding to the largest park area (2,877 acres) within mass transit distance of metropolita Boston.

Last week, however, everyone interested in the fate of the land was rudely shocked by a letter from GSA regional administrator Peter Thomas in Boston, dated March 25, saying the gift of the whole parcel was "not in the best interest of the government."

What the GSA proposed to do was sell the attractive, buildable upland portions of the property, leaving the wetlands and other unbuildable portions to the DEM.

But DEM not only wanted to expand their available camping sites (and these, in the annex, would be fairly primitive sites, without utilities) in the new area and also expand the hiking trails; there is also mounting concern about the Cohasset reservoir that is close to the area proposed to be developed.

GSA is apparently sticking to their original offer to give the state 632 acres of the property but placing a $1.5 million price tag on the remaining 135 acres. That upland, buildable property is also the most desirable for campsites and hiking trails.

The Annex property was most recently used by the U.S. Army Reserve and has been in disuse for some time. A Weymouth teenager was injured in a fall in February 1984 when an abandoned trestle collapsed, raising the question again of who has first-responder responsibility in the area that is still under the nominal authority of the U.S. Army.

The idea to add the Annex land to Wompatuck is not a new one. At the press conference last fall, Gilbert Bliss, director of the state;s Division of Forests and Parks, said, "We've been looking forward to adding the Annex since 1966 (when the state took over the area that is now Wompatuck). We've been looking for the final piece to round out the picture here. We have the sixth largest state park system in the country, a demonstration of the Commonwealth's commitment (to parklands)."

Rizzotto said Tuesday night he was "surprised to say the least. When I talked to Thomas, he said it was only a fiscal matter. But GSA's responsibility should be much more than that. This is a regional issue. Land in the public sector should be there permanently."

Rizzotto characterized the response he had gotten from the federal Department of the Interior after writing to them and sending them a petition full of of residents in favor of adding the Annex to Wompatuck "was not overwhelming. They thanked me for the letter and said my views would be taken under consideration."

But Rizzotto said he hasn't given up yet. And he urges those interested in the expansion of the park to call Thomas at the GSA Boston office (223-2601), or the local offices of Studds (826-3866) or U.S. Senators John Kerry (check with Information) or Edward Kennedy (223-2826).

"I do believe one can do something if you believe in it and pursue it, even change government policy," Rizzotto said. "I can't believe that the sale of this land is going to help out the national debt. But what would be nice would be to be able to take a walk through all the parkland created by the addition of the Annex."

Thayer play

This year's Thayer Academy musical will be a joint student-faculty production of "The Boy Friend" in Frothingham Hall, Friday and Saturday, April 12 and 13 at 8 p.m.

A joint project of the Drama and Music Departments, the show is directed by Michael Walszak and John Shuster. Assisting them are student directors Audra Veitas and Lisa D'Arpino. Dance coaches are Barbara Long and Anne Marie Roundtree.

In the cast are Susan Mildram, John Sawyer, Holly Philpott, David Liss, Frances Parsons, James Pickel, Kathy Foulke, Frances Walsh, Larry Carlson, Paulette Bruneau, Debbie Vail, Brooke Stanton, Paul Kurtzman, David Kuhn, Sean McGuirk and Joyce Prince. There will also be a surprise guest who will appear as a waiter.

In addition, there will be a dancing-singing girl chorus which will include Barbara Long, Anne Roundtree, Andrea Gordon, Alysson Anderson-Sterling, Kelley Doyle, Claire Dodds, Jennifer Applegate, Leslie Messaline, Jill Platner, Sue Dunphy, Debbie Dreier, Janine Vazza, Laura Farnsworth and Jane Gotshalk.

What's happening with Cohasset's seniors

Cohasset Sixty Plus Club members will meet Thursday, April 18, at Trueblood Hall, for lunch at noon. An interesting program will commence at 1:30 p.m.

Rev. John Gallop will give an illustrated lecture on Ireland. The color slides, which were taken by Mrs. Gallop, are about their motorcoach trip all the way to the north of Ireland, making a complete circle of this beautiful country in the springtime.

A four-day motorcoach trip to Quebec is offered to Cohasset Sixty Plus Club members June 27 to 30, by P&B Tours, of Plymouth. Details will be furnished at a later date.

A conversation with Jim Gallagher

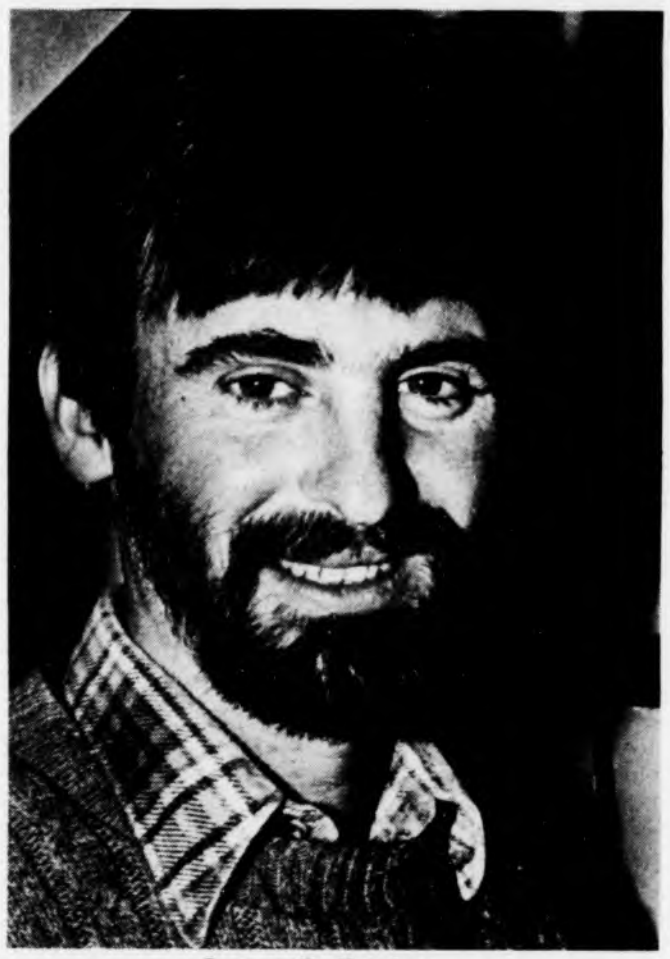
One day," he continued,"he brought me over to Arnold Weeks' home and introduced me. 'This is Jim Gallagher,' he said, 'a very civic-minded young man.' That's how I got to know Mr. Weeks. "

Gilbert, who died just a year ago, was notorious for his lengthy compositions to the local newspapers. His dissertations regarding town planning were first scanned by his trusted friend. "We'd talk about the issue first, and then he'd go in and write the letters. When I decided to run for the Recreation Commission five years ago, he said it was a good thing. I guess I blame my civic-mindedness on Gilbert Tower."

It has been his participation on the Recreation Commission and his association with the Cable Advisory Committee and the Harbor Study Committee that has spurred his interest in town affairs. Working on the recreation board has led to numerous sessions with the advisory committee, the selectmen, and even in the State House fighting to establish a separate town recreation fund.



He has worked with diversified segments of the community, including the fishermen in the harbor, the children of youth softball and soccer leagues, and the members who developed a cable television plan for Cohasset.

His days on those boards were coming to a close, and Jim decided he wanted to use that experience for the town in which he has resided for 26 years. "I have been actively involved in town business for the past five years. I have had first hand involvement with the selectmen, advisory committee, town employees, the police and fire departments and the other town departments. Now that my kids are older and out of the recreation program, it's time for someone else to be involved. The Board of Selectmen is of more interest to me now."

Gallagher sees his background as a volunteer board member and coach in the recreation program as a valuable tool of experience. "I have a good rapport with the people in this town and the town employees. I like the people who work for this town and I'm willing to talk and to listen to them. People know that I am open-minded, honest and I speak my mind. I feel my background is an asset," he added.

The Short Street resident said he is "very happy" with selectmen's recent decision to form a search committee to help with the selection of a new fire chief. "Having a member of the firefighters' union and a retired man is a great idea. They have a much better idea of the professionalism needed, and the technical aspects of the job that are so important."

As for the final selection of a candidate, Gallagher said as a selectman he would "prefer to have someone from within the department. I would give priority to someone within the department who was qualified. I believe in keeping employees' jobs within the town. If there is no one qualified, then we look outside. But I believe an insider would have more rapport and would be better in step with his men."

Gallagher noted that he personally likes the present chief, but admitted he has trouble relating to his personnel. "Selectmen were right in their decision not to extend his contract. I would have voted right along with them, although I personnally like the chief."

Gallagher said he has been a longtime advocate of a trash-to-energy solution to the landfill problems plaguing Cohasset and other communities. He doubts the present site can last ten years as predicted, and added that regionalization is our only vi able alternative. "We're running out of space there, and this alternative I believe is in the best interest of the town. I am a firm believer in recycling, and I think the trash-to-energy solution is the best," he continued.

He laughed as he jokes about his strong opinions. "I have an opinion about everything, and I'll tell you exactly what I think on any issue,"he explained.

As for the current dilemma to find an executive secretary, Gallagher said "$28,000 is a lot of money, it's a good salary. I still think we can attract a young, energetic person to the position for that salary. Yes, it's a stepping stone, but I think we can get someone who will be an asset to the town. I think we could probably find someone in town, perhaps someone semi-retired who has the managerial experience. It would be a great job, and we could benefit by their knowledge."

As for the recent discussion regarding implementation of a master plan, Gallagher said if the local Chamber of Commerce would like to fund the study, he would not oppose the idea. "The planning board has put in a lot of work to formulate the bylaw changes. Some I agree with, some I don't. But the townspeople have done a good job listening to them and deciding what they want. I think a master plan would be helpful, but it's not the right time to push it on the planning board. It's a poor time to do it, when the board is working hard to implement many bylaw changes." he added.

Pollution and its long-ranging effects on life in Cohasset is a great concern to Gallagher. A longtime outdoorsman, Gallagher said Lily Pond has been his favorite fishing spot since he moved to Cohasset. To see the increasing encroachment of development, and the expansion of salt and pollution into the water supply is something he abhors. He said he will work closely with the municipal regulatory agencies to ensure safe drinking water for the future population of Cohasset.

"I have seen reservoirs abandoned because of chemicals that have seeped into the water. I am very afraid that could happen to us. Pollution and sewage running into our harbor area is a big concern of mine, and something I will be studying closely," he promised. "If we ever had to abandon Lily Pond because of pollution caused by the grading and leveling there in the developments, it would be too much to give up. I want to make sure everything is being done to prevent that from ever happening.

The situation regarding the Town Accountant's is another issue Gallagher has confronted. "I would be for keeping the position in Civil Service if we could order a carbon copy of Bill Signorelli and Malcolm Stevens. Other than that, I would prefer taking it out of Civil Service. It may take forever to order another test, and they tend to protect someone in the job, even if they're not doing a capable job," he answered.

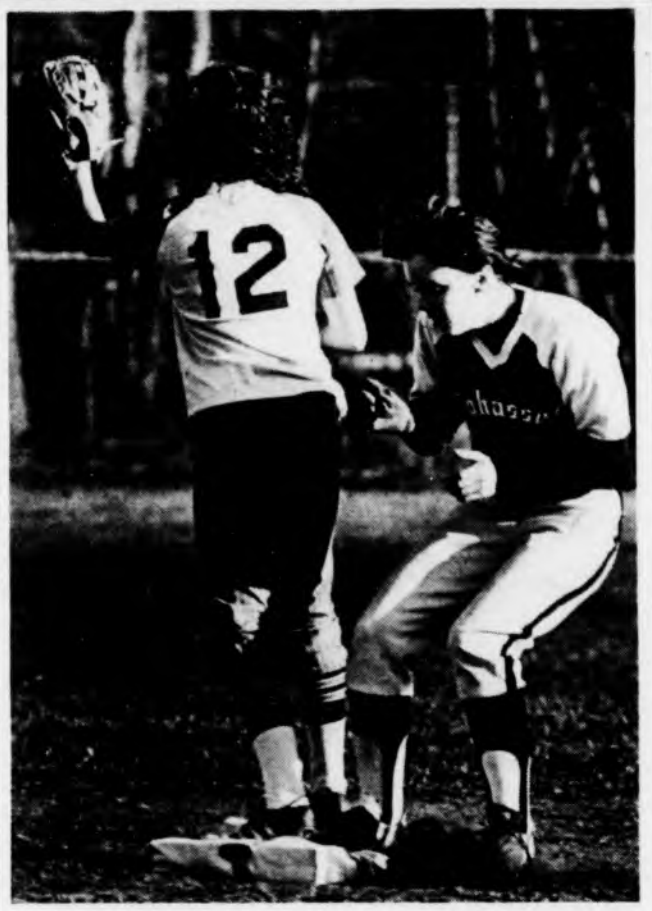
A look at Cohasset's school sports

By Lisa Shumaker

GIRLS' TENNIS



The girls kicked off their season with a crushing defeat over Rockland on Thursday, 5-0. The girls looked very strong as they blew past their opponents and will undoubtedly be a force to reckon with in girls tennis.

First singles player, Ingrid Anderson, along with second singles player, Kerri Kirkendal, and third singles player, Kristin O'Brien, all had outstanding matches and had no problem picking up their first victories of the season.

The first doubles team comprised of Lauren Haines and Megan Kelley and also the second doubles team made up of Jessica Hamilton and Carolyn O'Brien were very impressive as well as defeating their opponents easily.

This week the girls will face some tough competition on Monday as they meet Duxbury. Duxbury has always been very talented in the past but Cohasset will definitely be ready to battle it out and give it their best shot.

GIRLS' SOFTBALL

The girls are now three and zero as they head into the second week of their season.

Tuesday, Cohasset routed Holbrook, 21 to 12. The Skipper had an outstanding day at the plate which was backed up by the outstanding pitching effort from Kerry O'Brien who struck out four people.

Carla Lucas led all players, with four hits, one of which was a homerun. Debbie Hartley and Jill Nedrow each had three hits apiece, while Maureen O'Leary and Lisa Shumaker each picked up two.

Thursday, due to the impressive pitching of Karlin Isele who had four strike outs and gave up only three hits, Cohasset beat Avon, 20-8.

Once again the Skippers had a great day at bat with Carla Lucas picking up four and Tara Stanford, Janet DiGirolamo, Lisa Shumaker and Debbie Hartley each having two.

Coach Bill Fallon cited Jill Nedrow as turning in a good effort defensively.

Monday, the girls crushed Avon, 25-1. Defensively, Fallon feels his team played well, and he was also pleased with pither Anne O'Leary who only gave up a single run.

Tara Stanford led the offense with four hits followed by Carla Lucas, Jill Nedrow and Anne O'Leary who each had three. Maureen O'Leary and Karlin Isele also had good games at bat, picking up two hits apiece.

Defensively, Janet DiGirolamo had a strong game at short stop.

Cohasset will face East Bridgewater at the Little League Field Tuesday and will travel to Hull Wednesday.

Boys sharpen skills despite disappointing losses

The boys had a disappointing opening week losing both of their games, but showed tremendous improvement as they earned their first victory on Monday.

However, on Tuesday the Skippers were handed a frustrating loss from Holbrook as they were defeated 4-0. Coach Joe Bouchard felt his team's weakness at bat and some key errors caused the loss.

However, Bouchard was impressed by the dual pitching efforts of Sean Corkery and Bobby Corkery. Between the two, they only had a total of two walks.

Wednesday, Cohasset met Holbrook again and was beaten 11-5. Once again Bouchard praised his pitchers and was encouraged to see a slight improvement in his team's hitting.

Of the total of Cohasset's nine hits, Jay Contis had three, while Glenn Bernstein had two. Jeff Soltesz, Todd Henry, Jamie Roy and Sean Corkery each had a hit as well.

Bouchard also mentioned that Bobby Shultz was looking very sharp in centerfield, (having made a remarkable diving catch).

The boys finally heated up at the plate and pulverized Avon Monday, 15-5. After this victory Bouchard exclaimed, "We really have come a long way," and also added his team left with much more confidence.

Pitcher Todd Fitzpatrick led the Skippers to the victory striking out five Avon players and giving up only one walk and six hits. Todd also brought in two runs as he bunted on a suicide squeeze.

Peter Sandbloom impressed all with a three-run homer, and he brought in another run later on as well. Both Jamie Roy and Bobby Shultz picked up two RBIs apiece with key hits as well.

Tuesday the boys will travel to East Bridgewater, and Wednesday the Skippers will face an arch rival, Hull, in Cohasset.

A conversation with Diane Sullivan

subject. I hope the members will keep in touch and let me know what they are doing. I'll always be interested."

Sullivan explained her reason for running for this position as a simple continuation of her longtime interest and commitment to town government. Even before she moved to Cohasset in 1977, Sullivan had been active in civic issues in Hingham. When she relocated, she took time to attend Cohasset Board of Health meetings, which led her to associated sessions at planning board, zoning board and conservation hearings. "I really became interested in the subjects being discussed by the health board. Then I'd follow a subject through to the other town boards," she said. "I've attended more meetings in this town . . . but now I have a broad-based knowledge of town government, and I have the experience. It's a logical place for me."

From her Jerusalem Road home, Sullivan said this week she has come to love this town, and feels a need to serve. "It takes a certain person to want to participate and get involved in government. And that's the type of person I am," she said.

Her involvement as a selectman would extend to more than a part-time interest. One of the commitments she has expressed throughout the campaign is that she will be a fulltime, accessible selectman. What that means, she explained, is that people know they can sit and talk with her, or call her and she will be available for them.

"I know I'm a good candidate because I'm home. I can devote so much time to this town. I can go to the meetings and be available for someone with a concern. I'll be in and out of Town Hall as I'm needed," she added.

When asked to list some of the more crucial issues confronting Cohasset, Sullivan can easily discuss a dozen. During her campaign for selectman, she has stressed the need for "a more trusting relationship between selectmen and the fire and police departments," as well as other departments and employees.

"We spend so much on attorneys for contracts, and in the end, we always give the employees what we believe is fair. My idea would be to meet and sit down, one on one with the departments. And in the end, after all the discussion has ended, we could bring in the attorneys to work out a legal contract. I bet we'd save money, too. That is one thing I really would like to do," she said.

More communication is a great concern to Sullivan. She would like to implement a policy of every town board and committee submitting copies of their meeting minutes to selectmen for their review. "Maybe we won't be able to read everything," she said. "But we'll make an effort and we'll be current with all the issues facing us. At the very least, we'll be aware of what is going on day to day, and be aware of what a good job our committees are doing."

Sullivan tends to view things from a positive angle, and with that in mind, she is hopeful about a successful conclusion to the town's wastewater treatment project. Having discussed the issue with state Senator William Golden, she feels confident the state will soon "come to a compromise and we can proceed."

An advocate of the Ward Engineering plan, Sullivan said she favors the less expensive, more expansive alternative to the original Metcalf and Eddy project.

"But as a selectman, I will always abide by the decision of Town Meeting. What they vote, is what I will work towards," she added.

She is familiar and comfortable with the zoning bylaw changes proposed by the planning board at current Town Meeting. After extensive discussions with individual planning members, Sullivan concluded the changes are necessary. "They are not anti-growth," she explained. "But they intend to control growth. Because of the topography of the town, there is a need for increased lot sizes. This was the recommendation of Metcalf and Eddy, Ward Engineering, and professional planners. These changes are vital to the town."

Diane Sullivan

It's difficult for Sullivan to understand the growing apathy among residents. Taking time from busy schedules to run for public office is difficult, she conceded, as is spending several nights at Town Meetings. But why someone fails to cast a single ballot is beyond her comprehension.

Regarding the increasing problem attracting Town Meeting quorums, Sullivan said as a selectman, one of her first suggestions will be for the board to sponsor a bylaw change so that warrant articles in a Town Meeting will be selected at random during the meeting.

Rushing through a list of important community issues, Sullivan said she strongly supports the trash-to-energy SEMASS project. "The day of the town landfill is coming to a close. Regionalization is the only way, and I think SEMASS is the best alternative. This has been thoroughly researched by our dedicated Area Disposal Study Committee," she noted.

The fair and equitable treatment of all town employees is an important issue to Sullivan, who supports a reclassification study "although I am ambivalent about endorsing a $20,000 study to do this. I want to look into other methods."

She is adamant about retaining the $28,000 salary for an executive secretary to the Board of Selectmen, saying if a qualified candidate will accept the job, a salary transfer could be requested at that time.

On that subject she added, "the fire and police departments are to be run by their chiefs. Their ultimate superiors are the selectmen, not the executive secretary. The chiefs are professionals, and should be allowed to run their departments."

The recent decision to form a search committee to seek a new fire department chief is an excellent suggestion, according to Sullivan. "It will be a good committee, with one active firefighter and one retiree and five residents involved. I think it will do a lot for the morale of the department. It's important to have the participation and involvement of the community,too," she noted.

Unafraid to voice her convictions, Sullivan said if firefighters within the department apply for the chief's position, and they are as qualified as any other candidate, she would give them preferential treatment. "I think it would be great if we got someone from within the department who was qualified for the job. I hope we do," she added.

Historic Paragon Park carousel to be saved

The Kahn-Quinn Group of Woburn, developers of The Plaza at Paragon Park, have arranged to purchase the world-famous, 57-year-old Paragon Park carousel from Larry and Phyllis Stone, previous owners of the amusement park.

"It became apparent that sufficient funds would not be raised to keep the carousel in Hull with the Stones' stipulated time frame," said developer Chester Kahn.

Local residents and students had begun a fund-raising drive and formed "Friends of the Paragon Carousel" headed by Judith Wiers of Hull.

Kahn had also been seeking donations from major corporations and had pledged to match all funds raised through individual contributions. "We wanted to make sure the carousel did not go to another amusement park and now we will be attempting to finalize a location in Hull where residents can enjoy it—at no cost to the taxpayers," Kahn said.

The carousel was built in 1928 by the Philadelphia Tobbogan Company and is considered one of approximately 200 remaining in the country. The horse carver is thought to be the person who carved the seats for the original roller coaster at Paragon Park.

The carousel is larger than most, with 64 wooden-carved animals and two Roman chariots. Each year Paragon Park employee, Brian Buckler, has painted the animals on the carousel. He had just finished giving the carousel a fresh coat of paint.

The sale of Paragon Park was finalized last week. Developers Paul Quinn and Chester Kahn of The Kahn-Quinn Group are planning to dismantle the park this summer and begin construction of The Plaza at Paragon Park this fall.

Kahn-Quinn plans a 529-unit condominium community at the Nantasket Beach location—one of the last major waterfront developments available in the Northeast.

Want to ice dance?

The Silver Blades, a group of enthusiastic ice dancers, is looking for new participants. Tonight, Thursday, April 11 at 8 p.m. there will be a one-hour group lesson with a professional instructor at the Cohasset Winter Garden.

Though participants should be able to skate "a little," determination is the most important factor. Members of the group range from 18 to 80.

The Silver Blades are 25 years old and are the only dance club on the South Shore.

For more information on the Silver Blades, call Jim Jamieson at 749-4641.

Street People Dilemma

Milton Friesen, Director of The Kingston House, a mission for Boston's street people, will tell of his organization's work in feeding the homeless of Boston on South Shore cable's program "Faith In Action."

The interview with Mr. Friesen will be aired Tuesday, April 16 at 7:30 p.m. on Channel 3 in Scituate and on Channel 12 in Hingham, Hull, Hanover, Norwell and Cohasset.

The program will be repeated on Channel 12 Sunday, April 21, at 4:30 p.m.

County pursues delinquent child support

Plymouth County Sheriff Peter Y. Flynn and District Attorney William C. O'Malley announced this week the successful initial results of a new campaign of aggressive law enforcement actions against fathers delinquent in their child support payments.

"Fathers who fail to live up to their obligations to their children are not only cheating those youngsters out of the necessities of life but they are also cheating the honest taxpayers of Plymouth County by requiring them to pick up the costs of supporting their children," said Flynn.

Such practices will not be tolerated any longer in Plymouth County said Flynn and he cited the "encouraging start of the Child Support Enforcement Project as evidence."

Flynn said that in the first days of the effort, Deputy Sheriffs were speeding throughout Plymouth County in search of fathers who have failed to keep up their court ordered support payments.

Since the start of the program, 15 warrants out of 100 were cleared. Of these, three cases required physical arrests, five fathers surrendered themselves, and the rest were found to be either appealing their cases in the court system or the charges had been dismissed.

ZBA reviews several variance requests

By Melissa Barcomb

At the Zoning Board of Appeals meeting held last Thursday, April 4, committee members decided to approve Dr. Robert Sceery's request for a removal of a condition on a 1967 variance.

Dr. Sceery wishes to sell his business property at 89 Ripley Rd. According to the 1967 bylaw, the property should only be sold under the stipulations that no more than four employees can occupy the building at a time and that it remain a professional building.

The board voted to be more specific with the use of the building as a professional office. The law will state that the building may be used for lawyers, real estate, insurance, financial, advisory, consultative and telemarketing. Any kind of retail, food, or manufacturing businesses are excluded.

The board also heard from Earl Higgins, representing the case of Lucille McLaughlin of 36 Lothrop Lane. McLaughlin is requesting a variance to extend her porch 44 inches off the end of her house. The porch as it presently stands is nine feet in width by 44 inches. Six inches extend into flood plain area. The construction is set in three footings, two of the outside footings will be in the flood plain. The zoning board received letters of approval from the Board of Health and the Conservation Commission. The matter has been taken under advisement.

In another hearing, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cowan of 88 A. Beach St. filed for a special permit to replace the existing sea wall on their property. The engineer representing the Cowans, cited that the wall has been eroding and the erosion could present a problem with the septic system. The old wall will be built up with individually cut stones.

The Board members expressed concern over the possibility of the construction affecting adjacent property owners. The Cowans feel that the new sea wall will stop the erosion of the properties and therefore the neighbors would benefit from the construction.

A letter was submitted by the Planning Board stating that they are confused as to what is going to be done to the wall and the surrounding area. The Planning Board denied the request because they feel that the report does not specify if the wall is being repaired or completely reconstructed.

The Conservation Commission indicated in their letter that orders should state protection for the equipment used in the construction.

The board has taken the matter under advisement.

In the third hearing of the night, the board heard from Charles Fink of 17 Summer St. Charles and Elizabeth Fink are seeking a permit to extend their porch an additional six feet. The porch is 10 feet by 16 feet. Fink stated that there would be no sewage problems and that the porch is not heated. The type of permit requested would not be appropriate for year round use. A letter of approval from the Conservation Commission was submitted.

A letter from the Board of Health expressed concern that the addition could eventually be used as a bedroom. The letter stated that such work may cause more sewage than the existing sewage system can accept. The Board of Health is not aware that the Finks plan to use the screened in porch seasonal rather than year round.

A letter of denial was sent from the Planning Board because it is a flood plain area.

The Zoning Board members suggested that Fink apprise the Health Agent of the seasonal use of the porch and the fact that it will remain unheated.

The final hearing of the night was a request for a permit to build a fireplace in the outside chimney of the home of William and Eileen Colwill of 155 Hull St. The Conservation Commission sent a letter stating that the site is not in a flood plain and the chimney will not have a certain impact. The Planning Board recommends the ZBA approve the permit.

The Board has taken the matter under advisement.

In other business, a decision was made to grant Dr. Patrick Morrissey a variance to fill 160 square feet in a flood plain district off King Street.

Walk your way to health

The Cohasset Recreation Department is in the process of trying to determine how many residents are, or would be interested in walking for exercise.

While running as an exercise program has been very popular for the past few years, it is not for everyone. Latest research indicates that while running has a number of positive qualities regarding physical fitness, and the cardio-vascular and pulmonary system, it also has potential hazards regarding the musco-skeletal system, various muscles and muscle groups.

Current studies on walking are indicating that it may offer the same benefits as running, while drastically reducing the hazards involved in running.

Analysis of the mechanics of running, particularly on the streets as many joggers do, clearly indicate that the skeletal structure takes a lot of jarring from the hard surfaces. It is estimated that one half of all "road runners" will develop, at some point in time, a musco-skeletal problems due to this jarring.

If the skeletal system is affected, it would stand to reason that the viscera in general would also be affected to one degree or another. That is, various organs must also absorb the shocks generated by running on hard surfaces. It may be that this type of detrimental effect would take more time to show up as a problem, and only after the course of time will specific problems and complaints be recognized.

Before one assumes jogging as a form of exercise, one should probably have the consent of a physician, due to the vigorous nature of the exercise and the numerous contradictions that relate to a number of physical conditions.

This is a reasonable approach for those who are "physically fit." Inviduals can run into problems putting their body through the stress that distance running may cause.

Walking, on the other hand, may very well afford most of the positive physical attributes of running, while eliminating much of the stress and negative aspects of distance running. This is not to say that it is not a good idea to have one's physician approve walking. As an exercise regime, it is probably a good idea to do so.

However, many people who should not run due to various medical reasons, may be able to walk and gain the same positive aspects that running provides. Walking is a form of exercise that is "life long", that is, age does not eliminate walking. Age may slow down the pace or may deplete the distance walked, but it remains a relative exercise and one may gear themselves to what limits they may have to.

As with any type of exercise, walking requires a certain amount of discipline of the individual. A number of types of exercise programs work best when groups of people are involved as less personal discipline is required and a "group reinforced" discipline takes over.

Also, group walking, as with other types of group exercise, offers an elements of socialization, a chance to meet new people with a common interest, a chance to socialize with people you already know, as well as people you may not know.

At this point, the Recreation Department is interested in determining how many people in the area would be interested in forming a walking club. Should the response be favorable, various walk areas of varying distances and various environmental scenery will be established. Walking can be done in groups of any number, but is probably best in groups of six to eight people.

Further, it will be possible to set up seminars, bringing in experts and medical personnel who would be able to explain the various physical and psychological effects of walking for exercise and fitness. Walking is not only effective as a form of exercise developing and maintaining muscle tone, but is extremely valuable as a form of weight control. The cardio-vascular system is improved through walking, as is general endurance.

Should you feel that you may be interested in being a part of walking for exercise and recreation group, please call the Recreation Department office at 383-6791 for registration and further details. Should the group become too large, sub groups will be formed.

The Law and You

by Richard Price, Attorney-at-Law

BE WILLING

The laws governing estates change fairly often in some states. Sometimes, these changes can be radical. It is important to regularly review your will. The last major change in the federal laws was in 1981. If your will was drawn prior to the end of that year, your estate may not be distributed the way you wish it to be. Check right away to see if your will is current. If it is not, make an appointment with your lawyer to prepare a new one as soon as possible. If you have not already had a will drawn up at all, do so now. Without a will, there is no way to make sure that whatever you leave goes to whomever you wish.

It is evident that one cannot absolutely know what will happen tomorrow. However, our actions of today may well define our feelings and intentions of the future. For purposes of gifts as well as in other areas, be sure your intentions are clearly defined to leave no doubt or room for controversy. LAW OFFICES OF RICHARD PRICE, 760 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Rt. 3A, Cohasset, 383-9882. AFS "love runs in our family"

1985 is International Youth Year and the Cohasset AFS chapter is offering local families "an opportunity to demonstrate their belief that our youth holds the greatest promise for peace by hosting a foreign high school exchange student" according to Jane Goedecke, president of the Cohasset chapter.

"AFS brings together a student from a different culture and a Cohasset family who, through living together, learn from one another and grow together, thus contributing — in a small but significant way — to the development of peace globally," adds Goedecke.

She urges interested families to contact Nancy Sandell, host family chairman at 383-0486 since there are spring deadlines for applying to host an AFS student.

AFS International/Intercultural Programs (formerly the American Field Service) is a leader in the field of international educational exchange. It is a nonprofit, nongovernmental organization. AFS's theme this year is "Love Runs in Our Family," and the present host families of Cohasset couldn't agree more. The host families are the Denis Rossi family, hosting Alejandra Castro from Honduras, and the James Sandell family, hosting Mauricio Golfieri from Argentina.

AFS families vary widely in age, size, income level and occupation. They include two parents with children, single-parent families, young parents single people, and older couples. Above all, AFS families are open-minded, flexible, curious about others, possess a sense of humor, and are willing to share their lives with a student.

"Likewise the students AFS selects — and there's a rigorous screening process — are friendly, intelligent and interested young people eager to enter into a family's life and learn about our country, community, and our chapter volunteers provide support to the student, the family, and the school. This local, community-based support is one of the key differences between AFS and other exchange organizations," adds Goedecke.

AFS offers varied hosting opportunities. The year program begins in July or August and enable the host family to enjoy the cycle of a full year with a student. The summer home stay program lasts for five or eight weeks.

Host families are not asked to make special expenditures for their AFS student, but they do pay food costs and incidental expenses as they would for their own child. Host families may take a monthly tax deduction of $50. AFS extends medical coverage to its students and issues a monthly allowance.

AFS International/Intercultural Programs is dedicated to peace through the promotion of worldwide intercultural learning and living experiences for secondary school students, young adults, and families from all walks of life. Since 1947, over 130,000 students and an equal number of families have formed a global community through the AFS experience. There are 68 countries from both the industrial and developing regions of the world in the AFS program. AFS has been active in Cohasset since 1981 and during this time approximately 6 students have been hosted by Cohasset families.

All of the AFS students — the visiting foreign students and Cohasset students who have traveled abroad through AFS — are available for speaking engagements. They are eager to discuss their native or host countries with interested organizations. Most have slides and souvenirs to show. Organizations who would like to schedule an AFS speaker, should contact Jane Goedecke at 383-6935.

Answers to questions regarding senior citizen survey

The following are answers to questions raised by some respondents to the recently-conducted Senior Center Survey.

The survey determined that there is favorable interest among Cohasset's senior citizens for a senior center.

Use of 60 Elm Street: Many surveys questioned whether the Cohasset Housing for the Elderly at 60 Elm Court could be used for a senior center. This 64-unit housing for elderly and handicapped is funded by the state and governed by the Cohasset Housing Authority Board. The complex is situated on former town land which was turned over to the Cohasset Housing Authority ten years ago for $1.

According to Housing Administrator Barbara Clain, state guidelines regulating the use of state-funded housing prohibit the use of 60 Elm Street as a public building. The recreation room is a place for residents to meet, socialize, run their own parties and entertain friends. The tenants do invite others in the community to several of their activities.

Sixty Elm Street serves as a focal point for many community organizations which present programs and activities for senior citizens. The Senior Center Project Advisory Committee feels a senior center will provide needed focus in much the same way for all of Cohasset's senior citizens.

In order to qualify to live at the Housing for the Elderly, applicants must be 65 or older, although if no one is on the waiting list, people are accepted down to age 62. Handicapped of any age over 21 are eligible. Local preference is given to applicants. There are also income elgibility guidelines for prospective residents. For further information, call Barbara Clain at 383-1948.

Tuesday lunches: Another question raised on the survey was whether seniors pay full fare for their meal at the Tuesday Senior Lunches. The answer is yes. The full price for an adult hot lunch from the high school is $1.40 Friends from First Parish, Second Congregational, St. Stephen's and St. Anthony's churches serve the meal at the Unitarian Parish House. If you would like to have a tasty, well-balanced lunch "out" in town, at a reasonable price, call the church office at 383-1100 by the Monday before to reserve a meal. The lunches are sponsored by the Council on Aging.

Meals on Wheels: Some surveys wondered about eligibility for receiving home delivered meals. Anyone who is convalescent, incapacitated or otherwise unable to prepare adequate meals for themselves may receive a hot noonday meal. The programis run by the Social Service League with the help of one or two volunteer drivers a day, six days a week. The price of a meal is $2.10 for recipients under 60, and $1.65 for those over 60 (the Council on Aging pays the difference).

Hingham Senior Center: One survey suggested that Cohasset could not support a senior center alone, and perhaps we might look into the possibility of joining Hingham in developing a center on Route 3A. Hingham's Hersey House Senior Center has been in existence for eight years. Hull and Norwell also have their own centrally located senior centers.

T-Bus in Hingham: In answer to a suggestion for needed transportation to the T-bus in Hingham, the Council on Aging does run the Senior Shuttle bus to and from the Hingham depot at regular intervals. Call the Social Service League office for more information.

Developer Karin Bartow and the Advisory Committee working on the senior center project are exploring the possible existing sites in the community for a center. They are looking for a room or two where currently available services could be consolidated and where activities and services not presently offered could be initiated.

Nice people doing nice things

By Charlotte Carney

There are some nice people doing some very nice things for handicapped people throughout the South Shore at the United Church of Christ, 460 Main Street in Norwell.

When the pastor, Rev. David Norling, gave his sermon on "Handicapped Awareness Sunday" last fall, he planted a "seed" that took hold in the fertile hearts of those in his congregation. What sprouted was an ever-growing attempt to provide ongoing accomodating services for the environmentally handicapped.

A "Handicapped Ministry" was established, co-chaired by Joyce and Walter Abbott, to facilitate the Ministry's programs.

Although it has been a relatively short time since the "Handicapped Ministry" began, the Church has made great strides by providing wheelchair accessibility; signing for the deaf during services by Wendy Randolph; a Sunday School program for the retarded led by Terri Cleavers; a Social Recreation Commission headed by Wilma Goodhue; a Support Group for parents of children with special needs conducted by Carol Mosel; and an outpour of love and inexhaustible energies from its undertstanding youth organization.

As co-chairperson of the Handicapped Ministries, Joyce Abbott expressed her enthusiasm and joy upon looking to the future of the Ministry with great anticipation. "We basically are trying to find where the needs are and accommodate them, if possible," said Mrs. Abbott.

At the present time, the church is willing to "try and provide transportation for those wheelchair bound who might need it," she added.

In addition to signing at the services, the Handicapped Ministries is investigating the infrared system, which would facilitate the hearing impaired. However, the degree of necessity would have to be determined before implementing the system.

The Sunday School program for the retarded, "which started small, is one of quality, not quantity," said Mrs. Abbott, "and we are very pleased with the results so far."

Wilma Goodhue, chairman of the Social Recreation Commission, emphasized that the recent success of the Valentine's and St. Patrick's festivities could not have occurred "without the cooperation and time given so unselfishly by the church Youth Organization."

"It was maybe the finest hour for our high school kids," added Rev. Norling.

The Social Recreation Committee hopes to provide opportunities to further establish socialization skills for "special needs", ages 12 through 22. The interaction between the Church Youth Group and the "special needs" youth has been a learning experience for all.

Rev. Norling has been quoted frequently as saying, "It was hard to tell who was ministering to whom."

It was an enlightning experience when Charles O'Donnell, Special Education Director in Hanover, came to address the Church Youth Group to help dispell any fears and unwarranted anxieties in dealing with the handicapped. This took place prior to the Youth Group's involvement with the Recreation Committee.

It was obvious that the Youth Group responded positively to O'Donnell because of the heart-warming results of the group's participation with the "special needs" youth.

To further enhance sometimes limited knowledge and misconceived ideas about the handicapped, the Handicapped Ministry provided the congregation with several outstanding events, to dissipate some of these misconceptions.

The first was when the Cardinal Cushing Chorus, under the direction of Sister Miriam Therese, performed during the service this past January.

And when Cory Kent, a leading retarded citizen who is employed by South Shore Industries was invited to speak to the congregation, the response was overwhelming. "It was a powerfully-moving experience," said Rev. Norling.

The Handicapped Ministry is also providing a four-session information and support group for parents of children with learning disabilities. The first meeting was held April 1, and will continue weekly until April 29.

The group will support and serve the parents who have questions and concerns, and wish information and skills to better understand and cope with the learning disabilities of their children. It will also serve to help parents identify a suspected or possible learning disability.

Carol Mosel who has a Bachelor's and Master's degree in the areas of Early Childhood and Special Education, will be leading the group.

The sesssions are open to any interested parents at the cost of $25 for the four sessions.

The Handicapped Ministry of the United Church of Christ would like anyone who has any questions or suggestions about their ministry, to contact the Church.

With the enthusiasm in the Church and the support of the community, this program can only succeed.

For more information concerning other facilities for the handicapped in the South Shore, contact Meg Groden, c/o T.I.L.L., 329-6150.

Capt's for Cancer Crusade

Area captains who will direct and assist the efforts of a corps of house-to-house callers in the forthcoming Cancer Crusade in Cohasset have been named by Regina Schultz, chairman of the annual campaign to provide information and raise funds for the American Cancer Society.

The Crusade will peak on April 30 when volunteers will attempt to call on every home in Cohasset to leave important informational literature about cancer and to ask for a contribution to the work of the American Cancer Society.

Local residents who have agreed to serve as area captains are Barbara Hislop, Nancy Sandell, Jane Goedecke, Betty and Bob Ripley, Al Odermatt, Dave Chittim, Jane Russell, Ann Vanderweil, Beverly Quilty, Taffy Nothnagle, Ann Mitchell, Nancy Ripley, Margaret Young, Kathy Young and Don and Jaye McAllister.

The information and solicitation kits that the house-to-house callers will deliver to each home will be assembled by Brownie Troop 4616 under the leadership of Carolyn Horn and Mrs. Schultz. Area captains will then deliver these to the individual callers who may begin making their calls at their convenience, hoping to complete the task on April 30. The captains will then maintain contact with the callers to make sure that the completed kits are returned.

"Cohasset has always been generous with its support of good causes and we hope to meet or exceed our goal of $2,775," Mrs. Schultz says. "It's important to remember that many in our own community benefit from the services which the funds help to support."

Cohasset voters clash on quorum

By Jane Lane

After much debate and previous study, three people provided the majority needed to change the attendance requirement for Town Meeting.

By a hand count of 130-127, a rule that stood for 50 years crumbled. When the 1986 annual Town Meeting takes place, only 100 of Cohasset's 5000 voters need take their seat at the high school auditorium. The quorum controversy, which simmered since the Town Government Structure Committee first announced its findings months ago, has concluded in as much indecision as it began.

At Saturday's meeting which 311 residents attended, the committee's recommendation was approved when Moderator William Weeks made the decision based on a voice vote. When seven voters immediately challenged the ruling, a hand count was taken.

The results were predictably close. Three persons provided the margin of victory for the proposal.

Moments before, an amendment to Article 19 was proposed by Patricia Walsh of North Main Street. She noted that when Town Meetings failed to produce a quorum, it has traditionally lacked about a dozen voters. By having 175, rather than the previously-proposed 100 voter quorum, there would be a mimimized chance of town employees, officials, or partisans "stacking" a meeting for a certain article.

And despite the advisory committee's rejection of the main motion, and a "willlingness to go along with this recommended quorum," the amendment was soundly defeated.

In his presentation to Town Meeting, government structure chairman John McNabb Jr. outlined the reasons for reducing the quorum requirement. Explaining the results of a survey completed last year, McNabb outlined how Cohasset's 200 requirement is considerably larger than towns of similar size. The fact that five times in the last six years the meeting has been cancelled because of no quorum also testifies to growing apathy within the community.

> "When we came here 13 years ago, we had heard so much about Town Meeting being pure democracy. But a core of only 100 voters is not consistent with what Town Meeting democracy is."
> Louis Walinsky.

He stressed that a lower quorum is not a cure for voter apathy, but a method to conduct town business in a democratic manner without abolishing this form of Town Meeting.

The advisory committee did not recommend the quorum reduction, noting that a majority of 51 people would be all that is necessary to decide town business.

An alternate recommendation, Chairman Jacqueline Dormitzer added, would be to "reduce the number of articles in the town meeting warrant." By establishing a firm deadline for submission of all articles, there would be less opportunity to have a lengthy warrant, such as the one currently facing Town Meeting voters, she said.

The Board of Selectmen agreed with the government structure committee's recommendation, emphasizing a need for the meetings to begin promptly. "We have some empathy for the 189 people who must sit and wait for those 11," Selectmen Chairman Clifford Mitman stated.

A second amendment offered by Alfred Odermatt of Todd Lane was ruled inadmissible because it was not within the framework of the original proposal. He had suggested that a starting and closing time of Town Meeting be advertised, and that no challenge to the quorum be allowed within that timeframe. "Because there is not a sufficient number of people, those who have put in 100's of hours of work on town boards are asked to sit and wait," he complained.

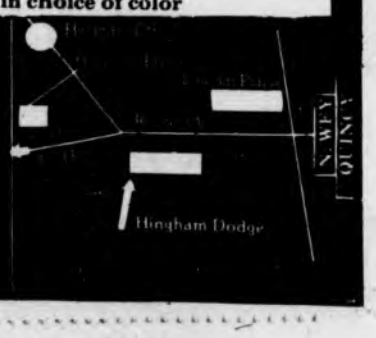
Despite the objection of the advisory committee, and the influx of amendments to the main proposal, McNabb said his committee remained in favor of the original recommendation of 100. "I'm not sure we'll ever get a true representation of all people," he noted, "unless we require people to come, and that's not likely."

Beverly Williams of Elm Court noted that the committee's recommendation seemed "to reward the apathy in this town. It's frustrating that people don't come out to Town Meeting." Commending the quorum surplus at Saturday's meeting, she added, "let's not condone an on-going problem. Let's get more people here."

Richard Avery of Surrey Drive noted that he was not against a lower quorum, but was opposed to the number of meetings held each year.

A dissenting voice also was heard from Elm Street resident Louis Walinsky who noted that the thought of 51 people making "very important and irreversible decisions" for the town "is very difficult to accept. He added, "when we came here 13 years ago, we had heard so much about Town Meeting being pure democracy. But a core of only 100 voters is not consistent with what Town Meeting democracy is."

A final argument for the government structure committee's proposal was made by member Ozzie Ingram. "We are not trying to reward apathy, but provide incentives. A lower quorum would assure starting the meeting on time. A 100 voter quorum would have the effect of even more people coming to Town Meeting. We definitely want more than 51 people making our decisions."



The proposal was put to a question, and was approved by a majority of three voters.

Town meeting adjourned at 5:15 p.m. Saturday as town officials were pondering whether to allow a reconsideration of the article. Dan Leahy of Forest Avenue proposed the reconsideration, saying the fact it was approved by such a slim margin demonstrates a certain indecisiveness.

PATCHES by Lois Martin

Is it center stage or just a three ring circus

Greg the Hammer Valentine. Junk Yard Dog. King Kong Bundy . . . the Hulk.

Do I look like a woman who stands up and cheers for guys to kill each other?

I hadn't thought so. But I was among those in Plymouth's stately Memorial Hall March 31 in awe of Wrestlemania.

I learned a lot. For one thing, I was the only person in a throng of 1,300 who wore a skirt.

That, of course, was the mere puffery of my education in the classroom where the major madness of the 80's, pro wrestling, is the subject, the only one.

PATCHES

My crowd went to Plymouth but there would have been no telling them they weren't in Madison Square Garden. With the simple stimulus of an almost adequate video screen beneath the Mayflower seal on the stage, little or no audible audio, too much daylight through the windows, the crowd yelled, roared to its feet, clapped hands and stomped peerlessly.

For one thing, we stood tall in Plymouth for NYC's version of the "Star Spangled Banner." A little boy in a balcony seat removed his hat for the anthem and by the time the song was midway done our voices swelled in crescendo right out across the bay.

Around me were the true understanders of the sport, the inveterate fans, the ones who knew for sure why they were there, in contrast to my moments of wonder.

Someone's darling daughter sat down a row, with nobody. Her $9 was not to go that Sunday afternoon for dancing lessons or a Barbie Doll festival. It was invested for the sight of great big men who throw each other around a lot. There was a gray haired lady with a man I presumed to be her son. But then maybe he wasn't, what do I know. The audience was about 50-50, kids and adults. Each of them knew every wrestler, by name and by performance.

The first wrestler to make an irrevocable impression on me was King Kong Bundy. He wrestled (?) Special Delivery Jones, "S.J.", I was told by an expert.

King Kong was a mountain of flesh, flesh everywhere. All over the screen, all over the ring, all over Special Delivery.

That encounter lasted three moves. First King Kong merely bomped him. Then he picked him up and threw him up and down. The match ended within the next 10 seconds when King Kong threw his body on top of S.J.

One of my favorite moments was during the introductory hogwash of the Iron Sheik of Iran vs. Nicolai Volkoff of Russia. The Sheik waved his Iranian flag while Volkoff stood at attention for the Russian national anthem. Suddenly, from stage right a kid about 14 ran toward the screen waving an American flag. We won that, we in Plymouth Memorial Hall, singlehandedly overtaking the pride and patriotism of Iran and Russia.

Andre the Giant was a winner, he took the $15,000 purse money and tossed a couple handfuls into a dazzled audience.

The women wrestlers were less compelling. Maybe not strong enough to hurl themselves from rope to rope, clobbering the opponent in the process. Maybe not colorful enough though they've got Cyndi Lauper with enough orange to do hundreds of flourescent hunting vests.

The Hulk is It. No doubt about it. He is affable in appearance (from outside the ring), has very clean blonde hair, a perpetual tan, big body. And he, for the record, was our hero. Mr. T is his sidekick, Lone Ranger/Tonto.

They fought Rowdy Roddy & Someone. I confused the two lesser wrestlers with the Hardy Boys until one of them slapped Mr. T's face. Personally, I thought that was a mistake.

The outcome is both history and future in this mania. Hulk won and won and will.

What, pray, is this magnetism exerted by unusually large men who do well picking up and tossing others of the same or larger size? What emotion makes people of all ages and backgrounds stand and scream for their 'good guys?'

Well it is, for one thing, a full measure of nonsense. But it is more outrageous than an outrage . . . Because most of all it is show biz, entertainment.

I did not see, have not seen, abject violence in wrestlemania. Instead I have seen something more reminiscent of the Three Stooges, the Marx Brothers, Laurel & Hardy. That may be simply due to my limited exposure. I've not seen anyone get hurt in front of me. I did hear one reporter suffered injuries and that gave me pause.

Another truth in this study, which is more nebulous than obvious is that these men have to be in shape. It's imperative. Show me a few Wall Street brokers of comparable weight who could get up after one or two of those thunderous flings on the mat.

Another. For many of us, the bully on the block has never got his enough. Pro wrestlers get even for their fans. I didn't feel an urge for violence after the show. I felt depleted of all hostility, worn out. Everyone had been smacked around more than enough to suit me.

My position on the question of whether fans have been hoodwinked or if wrestling is fixed is the same as that of a reporter I saw in a television documentary on wrestlemania.

This investigative reporter was standing in the midst of Hulk, Mr. T, Andre and three others. He said something like this, "Is wrestling a fraud? Do they use hidden razor blades to cut themselves? Do they really have any talent as athletes? You ask 'em."

I call that wise, if not great, reporting. Because if the wrestlers didn't pick me up and hurl me if I challenged their authenticity, I'd be darn sure the fans would.

Politicus — by David A. Mittell, Jr.

Vote "Yes" . . .Or Be Stuck With My Relatives

The return of passenger trains to Southeastern Massachusetts, long a forlorn and foolish wish akin to hoping canines will cease chasing felines and the latter the same with respect to mice, may be closer to coming to pass than any of us have dared dream. The Dukakis Administration is apparently serious in its commitment to the project, and one John Suhrbier of the M.B.T.A's commuter rail operation has completed a preliminary analysis of the task of restoring passenger service on the Plymouth, Middleborough, and Greebush lines.

What is most encouraging about Mr. Suhrbier's analysis is he recognizes the futility of having renewed service terminate in Braintree rather than South Station. He understands that service, to be effective, must carry South Shore commuters directly into the capital city, and he has addressed the problem of converting the three-track right-of-way through Quincy and Dorchester into a four-track right-of-way that will accommodate two directions of Red Line and two directions of commuter rail. Insofar as I am aware, he is the first bureaucrat in modern history to understand and address this issue.

With Gov. Dukakis and his Boston-brained Secretary of Transportation Mr. Salvucci taking a serious look at our transportation problem, it is now time for the South Shore to unite in the spirit of compromise, for nothing will ruin our chances for improved transportation than to be divided and disorganized at the very hour we lose our historic invisibility on Beacon Hill.

The first practical and essential step we must take is to vote "yes" on the three non-binding referenda that will occur in annual town elections this month in Cohasset, Duxbury, Hingham, Marshfield, Scituate, and Weymouth. These referenda were initiated by Sen. William Golden, and some have questioned the advisability of holding them now when no plan is in place, and when many, especially abutters of the Greenbush right-of-way, are likely to vote "no" out of fear of the unknown.

Should that happen, we will be like the duck hunter who shoots himself in the foot upon sighting a seagull: not only has he shown irrefutable ignorance, he has probably warned off the ducks for some time to come. In other words, if you vote "no" on these referenda, the chances of Sec. Salvucci taking another glance southeasterly in this century are not good. A "yes" vote will keep the dream of better transportation alive; a "no" vote will kill it. It's as simple as that. Those who would have you vote "no" do not know what they are opposing, for there is as yet no plan. They are putting the remote possibility of their property declining in value at some future point ahead of a region's transportation, is economy, and its environment.

The issue of "my house versus your convenience" can usually be resolved if there is a true spirit of compromise. One cannot say that no one's property in Southeastern Massachusetts will be adversely affected if rail restoration is undertaken, but the beauty of the railroad is that it can be rebuilt in a major way with virtually no land takings — perhaps literally none. Widening the Southeast Expressway, on the other hand, would destroy countless homes and businesses.

The second essential step the South Shore needs to take on the road to the railroad is to get out of the M.B.T.A. James O'Leary is probably the best director the M.B.T.A. has ever had, but he has his hands more than full with his present problems. He doesn't need running South Shore trains added to his troubles, and we don't need his still rude and inefficient agency running our trains of the future. We don't need it, we don't want it, and I will wager that if we can't get out of the M.B.T.A., trains won't develop the political support they will need if they are to come to pass.

What is needed is some heavy duty political wheeling and dealing along the lines recently suggested by Rep. Frank Hynes of Marshfield. Here's the scoop: Mayor Ray Flynn of "Flynnville," I mean Boston, has seven relatives on the municipal payroll, and he is urgently seeking what for "Flynnville" would be the first, but for Boston would be the latest of many financial bailouts. He wants the authority to tax you when you park in town, when you go to a Celtics' game, and so forth. Well, forget all that if "Flylnnville" must have a "bailout," let it be this:

Have the state assume 100 percent of the cost (i.e. the deficit) of the M.B.T.A. and the other regional transit authorities around the state. (Since 1974 the state has paid 50 percent of their deficits.) That would benefit many communities, but primarily the partonage-ridded, I mean hard-pressed cities such as "FLynnville," Somerville, Revere, Lawrence, Springfield, and Pittsfield. That's the "wheel." Along with that, deal the South Shore out of the M.B.T.A....for eternity. Enable us, should we desire, to form our own regional transportation authority, or to find our transportation solution in other ways as we see fit. That's the "deal!"

The third essential step we need to take is to commit ourselves to action and to excellence — the two go together. If we simply stand back and allow Il Duce, I mean The Duke, to grant us commuter rail, our passivity will produce the mediocrity we deserve. We must take responsibility and take the initiative if we want excellent transportation. Not only should our trains of the future not be run by the M.B.T.A., they should not be run by the B&M, Conrail, Amtrack, or Norfolk Southern. We should run them ourselves! As a region one of our assets is talent, and there ought to be enough brainpower in Southeastern Massachusetts to create a corporation to run a railroad that is better than the sterile, just adequate service the B&M now provides north of Boston.

For example, top speed on northside commuter rail is 50 mph. Mr. Suhrbier has proposed a top speed of 60 mph for us, which would mean a Plymouth train would take an hour to reach Boston. That isn't good enough. We should insist on the best — at least 70 mph on the trunk lines to Plymouth and the Cape. Why spend over $200 million to bring back the trains if we don't make the service excellent?

Along the same line, my father, who lives in Duxbury, won't go near a train without a parlor car. (He doesn't want to be sitting next to you all the way to Boston, fella.) With a parlor car, which he'll gladly pay for, he'll use the service...and he's the guy on the expressway who swears at you as he cuts you off. With a parlor car, my uncle will use the service too. He's the guy in front of you going 35, letting everyone cut in front of him. Hell, with those two off the road every day, the expressway might work the way its planners envisioned.

I might bet $200 million on it, but remember this: You won't get my relatives off the road unless the service is truly excellent. If it's merely mediocre, if it takes too long, if it's late half the time, if it has Ed King's jaw, Mike Dukakis' nose, Ned Kirby's ears, George Keverian's figure, and Tommy McGee's disposition, it will just be another publicly financed boondoggle. To do the job it must be excellent, and excellence will never effluviate southeast from Beacon Hill: the excellence, and therefore the initiative, must originate here.

Beacon Hill Roll Call

"Beacon Hill Roll Call" records local representatives' votes on four roll calls for the week of April 1-5. There were no important roll calls in the Senate.

SPECIAL COMMISSIONS (H 5860)

House 139-6, gave near final approval and sent to the Senate a bill reviving and continuing, until December 31, 1986, some 25 special legislative commissions studying topics ranging from civil service and tax reform to Boston Harbor and tourism.

Supporters, noting the Speaker has weeded out many unnecessary commissions, said the continued ones are essential and deal with important issues.

Opponents questioned whether it was necessary to spend some $3 million to fund the commissions and said they should expire in three months and issue a report so the legislature can determine the value of each commission.

Voting "Yea" were Reps. Robert Ambler, Suzanne Bump, Robert Cerasoli, William Flynn, Frank Hynes, Charles Mann and Mary Jeanette Murray.

REPORTING DATE (H 5860)

House 138-8 rejected an amendment continuing the 25 commissions until June 1985 instead of December 1986. Amendment supporters said requiring commissions to issue a report sooner will allow legislators to see what the committee is doing and to determine whether the work is necessary.

Opponents said many new appointments to the commissions will be made and argued the commissions need time and funding to begin and continue work before they issue reports. (A "Yea" vote is for continuing the commissions until June 30, 1985. A "Nay" vote is for continuing them until December 31. 1986)

Voting "Nay" were Reps. Ambler, Bump, Cerasoli, Flynn, Hynes, Mann and Murray.

REGISTRY (H 3358)

House 130-9, rejected a bill abolishing the Registry of Motor Vehicles on July 1, 1985 and creating a commission of Motor Vehicle Safety Registration.

The commission would be charged with developing a plan to make several changes including having cities and towns register motor vehicles, renew licenses, collect the auto sales tax, and retain all the resulting revenue.

Supporters, claiming the current Registry is an ineffiecient agency staffed with many arrogant employees, said local communities can handle many of the tasks and note the revenue would be a form of local aid. Opponents, claiming the proposal is unnecessary and unworkable, said the current Registrar is working on improving the operation of the Registry.

Voting "Nay" were Reps. Ambler, Bump, Cerasoli, Flynn, Hynes, Mann and Murray.

SALES TAX (H 3412)

House 114-32, rejected a bill giving cities and towns, instead of the state, the money derived from payment of motor vehicles sales taxes.

Supporters, noting some $184 million was generated in 1984, said the bill will give communities increased local aid, paid by residents.

Opponents said communities already share in this revenue because local aid is based largely on the income and sales tax. They said there were better methods to fairly and equitably increase local aid.

Voting "Yea" was Rep. Murray. Voting "Nay" were Reps. Ambler, Bump, Cerasoli, Flynn and Hynes. Rep. Mann did not vote.

FROM THE KITCHEN

Some recipes that will keep you hopping

If the Easter Bunny has gone his way, leaving behind a basket of colored eggs, some of us are pondering the problem of what to do with his springtime bounty. The trick is to get these pastel beauties back into the fridge to be kept fresh after they have been duly admired. A few sandwiches and devilled eggs later, we sometimes wonder what to do next and that's when Margie Pollock's casserole makes a pleasant finale. This recipe is a first-rate brunch dish, but to my way of thinking, would be welcome at any meal.

EGG AND SAUSAGE QUICHE

Pastry for 1-crust 3" pie
8 oz. bulk pork sausage
1 c. (4 oz.) shredded Swiss cheese
1 c. (4 oz.) shedded cheddar cheese
3 beaten eggs
1 1/4 c. light cream, or milk
3/4 tsp. salt, 1/8 tsp. pepper

Line pie plate with pastry and bake in 350 oven for 7 min. In skillet cook sausage; drain well. Sprinkle hard-cooked egg in bottom of shell; top with sausage and cheeses. Combine beaten eggs, cream, salt and pepper. Pour over all. Bake in 350 oven for 30 to 35 min., or till set. Let stand 10 min before serving. Serves six.

After an afternoon of kite-flying on the beach at Duxbury, we made our way, limp, happy and starved, to a spot where we sought to restore our energy with piping-hot pizzas. The pizza that four-year-old Ryan and soon-to-be-10 Amy and I chose to share was more than we could manage. It was good, but my stomach did flip-flops when our grandchildren thought the left-over pizza might be just the thing for breakfast the next day. Pie for breakfast is not unusual in New England, but I doubt if even the natives have pizza to start the day in Italy. This is the kind of pie sometimes served for breakfast in French Canada, called

PATE au SAUMON (SALMON PIE)

2 medium potatoes, peeled and cubed
1 medium onion, chopped fine
4T butter
1 large can red salmon, cleaned of skin and bones
3 to 4T hot milk
Salt and pepper
Pie crust for top and bottom.

Cook potatoes and onion together, drain and mash, adding butter and mixing until smooth. Combine salmon with potato mixture; add remaining ingredients. Spoon onto bottom crust; add top crust and seal. Brush top crust with a little milk. Bake at 400 for 10 min., reduce to 350 and bake 45 min. longer.

Breakfast is considered our most important meal of the day, but for many of us, a leisurely brunch is far more appealing. All of us fall into two categories--owls and larks, the latter group consisting of those who are at their best in the early morning hours, when they accomplish the most. Owls are said to hit their stride as the day goes on, gathering steam as evening falls and being most productive in the still of the night. So, for all those larks who enjoy their first meal of the day, here is Janice Baird's excellent brunch dish called

HOT FRUIT COMPOTE

Combine in 13x9x2" pan:
1 can ea. (16 oz.) drained sliced peaches, drained pear halves, coarsely chopped and whole purple plums, drained and pitted.
1 can (20 ox.) pineapple tidbits, drained
1 jar (6 oz.) maraschino cherries, drained
2 bananas, sliced
Combine:
3/4 c. brown sugar
1/3 c. butter
1 can applesauce (16 oz.)
Heat thoroughly and spoon over fruit.
Combine:
3T brown sugar
1/2 c. chopped pecans

Sprinkle over mixture. Bake at 300 degrees for 1 hour. Serve warm. Serves 10. To prepare ahead, cover with plastic wrap and freeze. Let thaw overnight in refrigerator and bake according to directions.

☐ In 1956, the Massachusetts State Senate was debating a highway bond issue. During the dreary discussion one senator awoke and shouted: "Now I warn you, if we pass this bond issue, we'll kill the goose at both ends."
